Montreal Gazette: The full significance of John Redmond's attack on the attitude of Lord Lansdowne in relation to the latest phase of the Irish question cannot be fully appreciated in the absence of a more complete report of the Unionist Peer's speech than the cables carried on Tuesday. In the summary published on Wednesday the speech did not have the appearance of a fuse threatening barrel of gunpowder, yet it has turned out to be such. The present trouble apparently has its main source in the ambiguities of the new administrative scheme in relation to the six counties in Ulster that are to be excluded from Irish rule during the war emergency period. The firm stand now taken by Mr Redmond will probably clarify the situation. That is the view taken by the more sober newspapers in Great Britain, which deprecate the hysterical cries of the less responsible journals that describe every difference of opinion among leaders as a "crisis."

When a shark had caught and was devouring a boy in Matawan Creek, Raritan Bay, N.J., W. Stanley Fisher, aged 24, and of powerful build, dived into the water and attempted to drag the victim away from the man-eater. There was a terrible struggle and the would-be rescuer was so badly bitten and torn that he died after being dragged into a boat by two men. Stanley Fisher was a hero if there ever was one.

For doing this the chief receives no extra remuneration, but for not doing it he is fined fifty dollars. In this report he must enumerate the amount of damage done (estimated cash value) the amount of insurance carried, by whom it was carried, and the cause of the fire and other particulars concerning it. In the case of townships, the clerk of the township is required to forward this information to the fire marshall. The clerk receives 5c. for each report he sends in. From these reports are compiled the fire statistics of the province, and it is hoped by careful scanning these reports will soon eliminate a large number of disastrous fires that means so much loss in the course of a year.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little, Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

SEE CLEO MADISON WEEP

There are a billion fans, more or less, in this country, who would rather see Cleo Madison weep than to see the funniest comedy ever screened. That's because they get a pleasurable thrill from getting their emotions fussed up, that's all. And they sure have a treat in store in "Her Bitter Cup," The 5-part Photoplay at the Palace Theatre, Monday and Tuesday. Miss Madison's latest picture, which is one of those human stories that get hold of you way down deep and grip you right up to the last fade-out. For Cleo's are "angel's tears," the kind that make you feel good instead of sorry, and Cleo is great enough as an emotional actress to make you forget that it's just a picture and not leaves torn directly from the book of life. She is a little sister of the poor and though she has little, she is constantly giving to those who have less. To have more to give to them she gives herself to a rich son of a miserly factory owner who is responsible for much of the misery she tries to relieve. Later she discards him; meets, loves and marries his brother. Their happiness is threatened when he learns of her past, but the complicated situation is logically unravelled with a big punch in the climax.

"THE FOURTH ESTATE" AT GRIFFIN'S MONDAY

Another of those popular Fox features which have become so popular with local photoplay lovers is announced for exhibition at Griffin's Opera House on Monday and Tuesday of next week, when Samuel Ryan and Ruth Blair appear in an elaborate 5 part filmplay version of, "The Fourth Estate," a gripping modern story of a fight with a large political ring for right and principle. Besides the above special offering 3 other selected varied photoplays will also be exhibited.

When the monster Coop and Lent shows exhibit in Belleville, Wednesday, July 19, 1916, opportunity will be afforded local circus-goers of witnessing for the first time in this city many of the most famous features of the sawdust rings. Chief reference is here made to the principal acrobatic riders of the bareback, leaping horses—"The Riding Davenports' 'and the "Orrin Hollis Troupe." The members of both of these families may be said to have been born under the 'white tops.' Their ancestors for two generations have vied with each other for supremacy of the circus world, as the present families have fought each the other's fame. In presenting both these peerless riding displays under the same tent, Coop and Lent may well claim the "Coup de Maitre' 'of the big combines this season.

"NOBODY HOME"

This catchy musical drama will appear at Griffin's Opera House on Monday evening with one of the finest casts that has ever appeared on the local stage. It is a scream from start to finish, yet one of the most refined productions on the road. Particularly attractive are the supherb voices, both in chorus and solo, the selections being made with a view to perfection and general harmony. Ahe costumes, modest yet rich, are all that could be desired, and last, but by no means least the personalities are most pleasing. Make arrangements to be at Griffin's Monday evening, July 17. See advertisement for prices, and select your seats at once. On sale at Doyle's Drug Store.

OBSEQUIES

MISS MARY CATHARINE LALLY

Many friends were present yesterday afternoon, to pay their last respects to the late Miss Mary Catharine Lally, who died while undergoing an operation in a Kingston hospital. The funeral took place from the family residence, 15 Queen Street, to St. Michael's Church, interment being made in St. James's Cemetery. The services at the house and the grave were conducted by Rev. Father Kiggins. The spiritual and floral offerings were numerous and were sent by friends both far and near to show their respect for the deceased.

Foe's Balloons Burned in Air

Secret Contrivance Known Only to Allies' is Used With Success

DOMPIERRE, Picardy, July 14.—A string of great balloons—you can count sixteen without glasses—is the first obvious thing that a reporter sees on this front. Next his eyes wander to the uncountable batteries in action. Above them the aerial telephone stations swing beyond the trajectory of the German gunfire.

On the German side not a single balloon is visible. Fifteen have been burned in the air by a secret contrivance, known only to the Allies, since the offensive began.

The German artillery is blinded because the Allies have now obtained the mastery of the air, according to the confident claims of the British and French officers. It is true that, from this point of view a German aeroplane is rarely sighted, while French aviators are constantly on the wing.

Co-operate With Infantry.

A dramatic and startling novelty has been presented by the Allied aviators in this great offensive. French and British airmen have actually cooperated in infantry charges. They have swept over the battlefield at as low an altitude as 600 feet, and some of the more daring have swooped over the struggling armies at as low a height as 300 feet. These airmen have signalled to the French artillery telephoners the precise position of the German guns, and the locations of the German forces waiting for the French assault. They have taken great risks of being hit by the shells of their own guns but, according to the officers, everyone escaped.

The French have developed on a great scale their aerial torpedoes which are charged with a higher explosive than the large-calibred shell. These torpedoes can be hurled for a distance of half a mile and fired with such rapidity that a second will leave the ejector while the first is still in the air.

From Dawn To Dusk They Forward Move

Haig's Men Commence 2nd Drive In Early Morning—Day-Saving Inspiring Spectacle

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, July 15.—Special—Even the phlegmatic British Generals and staff officers are showing elation over the results this morning of the night attack against the German second line, although careful to state that the great task against a powerful foe is only barely started. Soon after daylight the joyful news of the British success slipped into a telegraph message over the area occupied by the British army.

As a spectacle to an eye-witness, this action of the second big stage of the battle of the Somme surpassed that of July 1. Taking needed ground for organizing new trenches and throwing out small parties, who dug themselves in, the army has been gradually gaining a position from Ovillers, La Boiselle and Montauban, a distance of four miles, from which to deliver a blow, and until many points were within 200 yards of the German second line.

THIS IS THE 635TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

JOE MARTIN.

This uneasy mortal has evidently changed his mind. A short time ago he avowed his intention to eschew English politics. Mr Asquith, the Premier, not being Radical enough for him, he returned to Canada; and at the request, at least so he said, of Sir Wilfrid Laurier assumed the leadership of the Liberal party in British Columbia. Having been repudiated by the old-timers of the party, though there at the request of their Dominion leader, he is now back again in England, annoying the Government by asking questions which he knows cannot be answered except by a statement that the time has not arrived to answer his question, or that it is not opportune to do so. John seeks notoriety, but John Bull is too astute to award him such an honor.

Joe proposes to ask the Premier: "Whether, having regard to the behaviour of the Dominions in this connection, the Prime Minister would take steps to ensure the continuance and permanence of present relations between the Dominions and the United Kingdom, such relations consisting of the union of hearts in Imperial matters and absolute self-government in matters affecting the Dominions only."

The answer will be interesting.

LOAN.

The question is being asked by persons who have sums, great and small, deposited in banks, drawing 3 per cent., whether there is to be put upon the market another Government loan. The answer is given in a telegram of date Ottawa 13th, which states that an "announcement was made officially to-day by Sir Thomas White that the second domestic War Loan would be issued in September.

"The exact amount, terms and price will be settled a few days before the date of the issue, and will not be announced until the prospectus is published.

"The Minister thinks it advisable to give general notice of the issue now in order that the public may arrange their finances with a view to participation."

This loan will enable small and large holders in banks to increase their interest accounts.

We are not informed as to what has occurred between the editor of The Peterborough Review and the legal lights of his district, but in any event something is lacerating his feelings. Listen; "In Toronto, when the city's legal officers win a case in court, they divide up the costs as perquisites among themselves. If they lose, the city pays. Some of the newspapers regard this arrangement as unfair, and have started an agitation in favor of having the lawyers pay out of their own pockets the costs of every cose which they lose. Under such a system corporation litigation would fall off at least fifty per cent., as the lawyers would naturally take no cases into court except those they were sure of winning. It must be said for the lawyers that there is an element of uncertainty in every lawsuit, and participants on both sides are taking more or less of a gambler's chance when they go into court." And, possibly worried over an unjust physician's bill which has become pressing, he adds: "But if lawyers are to be made pay for their mistakes and failures, why stop there? Why not make the physician bear the funeral expenses of the patient whose life he is unable to save?" ...

Montreal Gazette: The full significance of John Redmond's attack on the attitude of Lord Lansdowne in relation to the latest phase of the Irish question cannot be fully appreciated in the absence of a more complete report of the Unionist Peer's speech than the cables carried on Tuesday. In the summary published on Wednesday the speech did not have the appearance of a fuse threatening barrel of gunpowder, yet it has turned out to be such. The present trouble apparently has its main source in the ambiguities of the new administrative scheme in relation to the six counties in Ulster that are to be excluded from Irish rule during the war emergency period. The firm stand now taken by Mr Redmond will probably clarify the situation. That is the view taken by the more sober newspapers in Great Britain, which deprecate the hysterical cries of the less responsible journals that describe every difference of opinion among leaders as a "crisis."

When a shark had caught and was devouring a boy in Matawan Creek, Raritan Bay, N.J., W. Stanley Fisher, aged 24, and of powerful build, dived into the water and attempted to drag the victim away from the man-eater. There was a terrible struggle and the would-be rescuer was so badly bitten and torn that he died after being dragged into a boat by two men. Stanley Fisher was a hero if there ever was one.

The news that the revolt against Turkish rule in Arabia is spreading has a special significance.

Residents of the north end of Hamilton are complaining about the mosquitoes, which old-timers say are larger, wickeder and more numerous than ever before. The pest surely is most daring this year, in venturing even into the city to secure its fill of blood.—Montreal Gazette.

Mattawan Creek, the tiny stream in which two bathers were bitten to death by a shark and a third severely nipped on Wednesday, is now alive with sharks, according to scores of men who went out to hunt them with rifles, shot guns loaded with buckshot, long boat hooks and harpoons improvised from long poles and spikes.

Stringent measures have been taken in Holland to prevent the exportation of diamonds supposed to come from Germany. Experts are constantly examining the stones in order to decide the place of origin of diamonds intended for export. Nevertheless, some so-called German diamonds have been smuggled out of Holland for America.

The Toronto Star advises a peevish contemporary to take a "hutch." Webster defines a hutch as a chest, box, coffer, coop, bin, or the like, but none of these things could be taken internally. Another definition of hutch is "a mean shelter for a man." Perhaps The Star has got this latter definition slightly twisted, and believes a hutch to be a shelter for a mean man.—Toronto Globe. Then why shouldn't the Globe man also take a hutch?

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

The Poets' Corner

TO THE FIRST CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

The following verses were forwarded by Driver Fred Sutton to his parents in this city:

Here's to the gallant Canadians,
The boys who are always true;
They started out to fight for right,
And fight they sure can do.

At "Neuve Chappelle" and "Langemark,"
They fought like heroes brave;
Each man that fell at Neuve Chappelle"
Has earned a hero's grave.

And then they fought at "Festubert,"
'Twas in the month of May;
Ne'er was there such a battle fought
As the Canadians fought that day.

They beat them at "La Bassee,"
And at "Langemark" too;
They gave them hell at "Neuve Chappelle"
And fought like Canadians true.

That was the first Contingent,
And they sure have made a name;
They fought and died for Britain,
Now they're on the Scroll of Fame.

There still are some of them out there
Who never did get hit;
They still keep up their courage,
And still they do their bit.

And here in dear old England
There are quite a lot,
Who were out there and got wounded,
But they're proud of what they've got.

And some there are who'll ne'er come back,
Because they fought and fell;
But they'll never be forgotten,
For the work they did so well.

Side by side they fought and died,
Each man out there that fell
Was fighting for England's glory
And that they did right well.

Now here's to the first Contingent
Who did their duty do,
And bravely did go under
As many more will do.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM DRIVER FRED SUTTON

France, June 26, 1916.

Dear Mother:—

I received your letter in good time, and was pleased to hear you are all well at home. I am in excellent health, but have not had much time to write, as we have had it pretty rough over here this last month. I have not seen anything of Percy yet, but hope he is all right. Yes, I enjoyed the Easter egg very much, but it would have been better to have so much in the bank, so far, so that I can start something of my own; that is my idea.

I got a letter from Jim Gordon the other day. He wants me to run a farm for him when I return. He says he is not in very good health, and wants some one that he can depend upon to look after the place.

I also heard from Joe and he is getting on very well. Cheer up, smiling mother. Remember me to father and the rest. Tell Lizzie I received her letter, and that I will write soon. Hoping this will find you all in the best of health, I am,

Your loving son,
FRED.

FROM LIEUT. B. B. GREEN

The following letter received by Mr. W. J. Green, 24 Hillcrest Avenue, from his son, Lieut. B. B. Green, "Somewhere in France," is of especial interest:

June 20th, 1916,
France.

My Dear Father:—Many thanks for your very welcome letter received early this week. I am sorry I have been unable to answer it before now, but the fact is we have been distinctly busy here lately, and what little spare time I have had I have spent, or tried to spend, in sleep. The Canadians, as you know of course, had a very rough time of it in the Salient, but have now turned the table, gave the Boches hell, and have again firmly established themselves. I tried to get in touch with your friend, Capt. Gill, as I knew him to be in this sector, and wondered how he had fared. However, it proved to be impossible, and as I have not seen his name in the casualty lists I decided he must be still going strong. I hope I am right. Mr. Finder I have not seen again, but I believe he has still got a comfortable job somewhere in the rear. I hope he retains it until the conclusion of the war. To take a sudden optimistic turn of mind, I have come to the conclusion that the time is not so far distant when peace will be declared, (not altogether deduced from the fact that I have again returned to the scene of battle, and must in consequence). Things have been so hot up and down that I am sure it is impossible to carry on forever, particularly from the Boches' point of view; however, Asquith's good old motto "Wait and see," is the only course to adopt.

I am glad to hear you are all doing so well over there, and keeping in good health. I hope you will all continue to do so. The weather here is very unlike June. It is quite as cold as at Xmas. I am afraid we had all our summer weather in April.

I am writing this from the trenches, hence the form of note paper, so excuse more now. Hoping to hear from you 'ere long.

Your affectionate son,
BERNARD.

40 HP FOUR $1225

A "Made in Canada" FOUR that speaks for itself

—and it's a Studebaker of course. While the feature of Value—value that commands a much higher price in other makes, has figured prominently in the success of the series 17 Studebaker FOUR, it is the quality and permanence that has earned for it the reputation which no other car in all Canada enjoys.

Big, roomy and comfortable, it represents the supreme effort of Studebaker design and workmanship—the built-in knowledge of the stability that such a car requires in order to give the best of service that the rough and hilly roads of Canada demand.

It has Power-a-plenty-motor flexibility and endurance that is not even approached in many cars costing much more. Its appearance compels admiration wherever the car is seen.

THE MARKET

There was a fairly large attendance upon the market this morning. The produce offered for sale was mostly fresh vegetables, which were sold off quickly. New potatoes sold at $1.40 per bushel; cabbage at 10c. per head; peas at 20 and 25c. per quart; string beans at 15c. per quart; beets, 5c and 10c. per bunch; onions were quite plentiful, and sold at 5c. per bunch. Raspberries sold at 20c. per box; cherries were in abundance and sold at 10c. per box, or 3 boxes for 25c. Black and red currants were offered for sale at 10c. per box. Gooseberries were sold at 10c. per quart, and rhubarb was sold at 5c. per bundle. Dairy produce, not being plentiful, brought good prices, eggs selling at 30c. to 32c. per dozen; butter, brought 30c. to 31c. per pound, and chickens sold at $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 per pair, according to size.

In the meantime, there seems to be no limit to that Franco-British push.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning—as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

occurrence to the Provincial Fire Marshall. For doing this the chief receives no extra remuneration, but for not doing it he is fined fifty dollars. In this report he must enumerate the amount of damage done (estimated cash value) the amount of insurance carried, by whom it was carried, and the cause of the fire and other particulars concerning it. In the case of townships, the clerk of the township is required to forward this information to the fire marshall. The clerk receives 5c. for each report he sends in. From these reports are compiled the fire statistics of the province, and it is hoped by careful scanning these reports will soon eliminate a large number of disastrous fires that means so much loss in the course of a year.

MRS. MYRON'S SUMMER BOARDERS

BERTHA GERNEAUX WOODS

"You know perfectly well, that I'm not the least bit snobbish!" Hazel faced her sister indigantly. "It's only that I'm like lots of other people about wanting to be "in" with desirable girls. Now you go to the other extreme. You don't care whom you take up with."

"Oh, but I do care," and Alice's tone was indignant. "It's only that I care for the real person more than you do. I mean—"Alice found the right words with difficulty, "you care more about externals than I do. Uncle Howard said that about you once. You judge people too much by—by their dress anl all that."

"Well, why don't you call me a snob in so many words then?" Hazel said. "That is what it amounts to."

It looked so much as if a quarrel were imminent, that Alice at once changed her own tone.

"Oh, well," she said, "never mind. I don't mean that you're a snob. That's too harsh a word for it. But let's go down to the parlor now. Oh, Hazel, isn't it perfectly glorious to think we're really at the Jersey coast? And wasn't auntie an angel to bring us?"

"Yes, indeed, she was," Hazel said with equal fervor.

"Speaking of angels?" Alice turned smilingly to the handsome, white-haired woman who joined them. "Did your ears burn, auntie?"

"Terribly!" said Aunt Miriam. "By the way, girls, I have had quite a visit with that sweet little Marian Willoughby down on the board walk this morning."

"Did you?" said Alice, interestedly. "I've taken a great fancy to her myself. She's so sweet and—and dainty. She dresses plainly, but somehow you never think of her clothes."

"Well, I've taken a bigger fancy to Della Williams," said Hazel. "I was just discussing her with Alice before you came in, auntie. To be frank about it, the first thing that attracted me to her was something she said about finger bowls. She sat there, waiting for them to come on, after the rest of us had laid down our napkins. And when Marian said, 'Let's hurry down to the beach, girls,' she just lifeted her eyebrows a little, Della did, and said, 'But they haven't brought us the finger bowls yet.'"

"I noticed the remark," said Aunt Miriam, with a significant arch of her own brows."

But Hazel hurried on: "It simply showed what she was used to—and it's foolish to deny," she continued argumentatively, "that such trifles mean something. These—these little niceties of life sort of stamp a person, don't you think so, auntie?"

"Oh, my dear," Aunt Miriam laughed outright now. "I've lived long enough to know that they don't, necessarily, do anything of the kind. And in that particular case, Hazel the remark seemed to me in anything but good taste. There was Mrs. Myron herself within hearing and she flushed a little."

"And it was so sweet the way Marian spoke up," said Alice. "'Oh, nobody wants to bother with finger bowls here,' she said, 'we're always in too big a hurry to get to the beach.'"

"Oh, well ,she's evidently a friend of Mrs. Myron's," Hazel said promptly. "I have a sort of notion, though I don't know anything about it, that she is partly paying her board by helping Mrs. Myron. I've seen her several times in the kitchen, and I know, for I saw it, with my own eyes yesterday, she made the salad dressing. Mrs. Myron's cook was sick, you know. I was going past the kitchen, and there sat Marian in a big apron, beating the eggs. Oh, of course she's just exactly as nice if she does help pay her board that way," Hazel asserted. "Only, as I say, there is a sort of charm about girls who have had luxuries all their lives and take them as a matter of course."

Perhaps Aunt Miriam and Alice thought it useless to argue further; at any rate, they made no answer to Hazel's last remarks, but took their way down the stairs to the dining room, with its windows open to the sea front, and a delightful fragrance of salt air floating in through the swaying muslin curtains.

Della and Marian went in with them.

"How hungry this air makes one," Marian said laughingly. "Meal times seem real events here, don't they? And I do think Mrs. Myron sets such a nice table." Aunt Miriam smiled her assent to this girlish enthusiasm, and broke a puffy roll open with genuine appreciation.

"Oh, things are pretty good," Della said critically, "and of course the sea air does give you an appetite, but I do wonder sometimes why these summer places can't give you a little more variety. It's rather monotonous when you know that Tuesday's luncheon means scalloped fish and parkerhouse rolls, and Wednesday's dessert is frozen custard." Della ended with a little laugh, and a demure look into her plate, for Mrs. Myron herself was approaching the table. She was a tall, kindly, anxious-faced woman who never seemed in the morning to look at all rested from the day before.

"Mrs. Myron," Marian said, impulsively, "I think your rolls are the most delicious things." And Aunt Miram added her prompt confirmation of this sentiment.

"I hope your mother will be pleased with your looks," Mrs. Myron said to Marian, "she comes to-morrow, does she not?"

"Yes, to-morrow." Marian's face shone. "It's so good that she can get away from home for a little rest—she needs it so. I wish she could stay longer than she'll feel she can."

"So do I!" Mrs. Myron said heartily, "she's as sweet a woman as I ever laid my eyes on."

It all seemed to confirm Hazel's impressions expressed so freely to her aunt and sister an hour before. It way very obvious that Marian and her mother were "unused to things," ambiguous as the phrase is, and it was equally evident that Della had been accustomed to luxuries from her infancy.

It was the next morning down at the beach that Hazel pressed her sister's arm excitedly, as they crossed the board walk. "Look over there, quick, Alice. What did I tell you? Marian's mother! And she looks exactly as I expected!"

"Where?" Alice shaded her gray eyes with a slim hand, and peered in the direction indicated by her sister.

"Over there—by the ropes! That short, dumpy little woman! Oh, Allie, holding on to the ropes as if she thought she was going to be hurled to her death if she let go for one minute! And—a rented bathing suit You can tell by the braid on the collar."

"Well, I think Marian's a perfect dear," Alice replied. "Some girls would be just snippy enough and—and mean enough to act a little bit embarrassed, but look at Marian! She's as lovely to her as if she were a—a queen! Now that's what I call really fine and something to admire—and—"

"Well, I suppose so?" But Hazel's pretty shoulders rose in an expressive shrug. "Oh, Alice, they've seen us, and we'll have to go over where they are—but I must say—I—I—"

Hazel left the sentence unfinished, as she and her sister made their way to the ropes where Marian was inviting them with smiles.

"Oh, isn't it glorious just to be alive?" she called out, lifting a bright face framed tendrils of clinging hair.

Then it was that Della raised her eyes, curiously embarrassed ones, and a dark flush mounted toward her forehead. "My mother, girls," she said. It was certainly not a gracefully wordedintroduction—this which presented a worn-faced woman to two girls in their teens. Alice felt it with a quick flush of contempt for Della.

But Marian was speaking gayly, and in a way that saved them all from embarrassment, as she had done once before after the finger bowel episode.

"Isn't it lovely that the water's so perfect? Best temperature we have had since we came. I told Mrs. Williams it was all in honor of her coming?"

"It certainly makes one feel good!" Mrs. Williams said. "I never dreamt of going into the water—Della told me I might get chilled ,but I'm so glad this young lady, Miss Marian, coaxed me to try it. I haven't enjoyed anything so much for years."

"Let's go out just a little farther, sha'n't we, Mrs. Williams?" Marian suggested. "I believe we get buffeted by the waves more here by the ropes than we do where it's deeper. Wouldn't you like to try it with me? We'll come right back if you don't like it." Marian slipped a persuasive arm through Mrs. Williams. A moment later the two were out in deeper water. Marian, tall an dathletic, introducing the older woman to a delightful sense of exhilaration such as she had hardly felt since her youth. Della was watching them with a curious look in her own eyes, and in another moment she was making her way toward her mother. Suddenly and impulsively she slipped an arm around the form in the faded bathing suit, and the look on her face had grown sweet.

"Perhaps she is nicer than we thought," Alice said impulsively to her sister. "I could have shaken her for the way she looked when she introduced her mother, but evidently she's come to her senses. If Marian hadn't been so perfectly lovely!" What would have happened in that event Alice did not attempt to say, but Hazel nodded rather thoughtfully.

"Yes, Marian does seem to deserve a good deal what you've said about her—you and auntie—but, after all, Alice, I don't suppose she realizes how funny Della's mother looks! Her own mother probably is a good deal of the same style, and it may not even occur to her to be embarrassed. I don't know, though—" Hazel ended doubtfully.

It was not until supper time that the girls had a glimpse of Marian's mother. The girl, radiantly flushed, led her into the dining room, a beautiful woman of tall, stately figure, but with a face whose sweetness was singularly like Marian's.

It was very obvious to Alice and Hazel that Della was painfully ill at ease, and anxious lest her own mother make what the girl would doubtless have termed a "bad break."

"You have been very good to my little girl," Mrs. Willoughby remarked to Mrs. Myron who paused for a moment near their table. "And how well she looks"

"She has been very good to me," Mrs. Myron said, her eyes brightening. "Helping me out many times when I hardly knew which way to turn—making salad dressing for me with her own hands, and one morning she even would get up early and help me with the muffins! My cook was sick. Miss Marian has been an angel to me."

"Why, Mrs. Myron, it was all for fun, for I love to cook. And the way she mothered me when I was homesick those first days!" Marian turned her bright face from Mrs. Myron to her mother, with an expression that was singulary sweet.

"It's a good thing for a girl to know how to cook," Mrs. Williams remarked, "and my Della can do about everything in that line from bread-making to cooking pot roast so it'll almost melt in your mouth. It's been a lucky thing for me, for with our big family, and not able to afford a hired girl!"

It was fortunate that Mrs. Williams' look of maternal pride was turned away from her daughter, for the young lady's face flamed to a crimson hue at her mother's words.

"It certainly is an accomplishment," Mrs. Willoughby assented in a matter-of-fact tone. "I think every girl should be taught to cook—and to care for the home."

And just then one of the waiters slipped up quietly behind Mrs. Willoughby's chair. "Your car's come, ma'am, and it's a waiting outside the door."

There was a general pushing back of chairs. The day ended in a whirl of delight for all of the little party. The Willoughby touring car was a most luxurious one and there proved to be room for all of them, including the tired-faced Mrs. Myron to whom this drive was a joy unspeakable. All along the beautiful shore line the car made its swift smooth way. There was a delightful murmur of surf and an exquisite salt fragrance in their faces all the way, and lights from hundreds of summer cottages twinkled their welcome.

"It's the most perfect day I've ever had" Mrs. Williams said in a voice that was almost awed, when the drive was over. "I've always wondered what it would be like to ride in an automobile like that—but I never s'posed I'd find out."

Her tired face was so happy, so relaxed, that suddenly Della slipped her hand into her mother's. The girl had been learning some needed lessons that day. Alice, seeing the two clasped hands, felt her first stir of snippy, after all," she told Hazel later. real liking for Della. "She isn't so "I was probably too hard on her."

"Oh, perhaps," Hazel said soberly. "But what a goose I was". She made a long pause. "Perhaps" she said, "perhaps Uncle Howard was right about me when he said I cared to much about externals in people—I didn't like his saying it at the time—it made me mad, but—after to-day, somehoy I'm afaird he was right."

Fur-Farming In Ontario

The Industry Under a Handicap—Need of Protective Legislation

Although considerable capital is invested in fur-farming in Ontario, the industry lacks the encouragement and legal security which it enjoys in Eastern Canada, especially Prince Edward Island. A recent case before the Midlesex County Court, occasioned by the killing of a valuable fox which had escaped form captivity, illustrates the difficulties that will constantly arise until fur-farmers secure the necessary legislation to place their industry upon a recognized legal basis. In the case referred to, substantial damages were awarded to the owner of the animal but, in future, such litigation should be avoided by laws specifically limiting the application of the ordinary provisions of the Game Act to fur-bearers raised in captivity as a definite branch of husbandry.

Prince Edward Island has been foremost in fostering the fur-farming industry. Fur-farmers are adequately protected with respect to the ownership of animals and to freedom of ranch property from trespass, while the recent Act incorporating the Prince Edward Island Silver Black Fox Breeders' Association should go far toward establishing reliable pedigree records and providing prefection for both vendors and purchasers of breeding stock. Legislation for the same purpose must be provided by other provinces which desire to encourage development of a successful fur-farming industry.

DIVORCE BY CANDLE

Burmese Have Quaint System of Obtaining Separation

If the Burmese husband and Burmese wife come to the conclusion that they are not suited to each other, their procedure is simple and direct. The wife does not go to her solicitor, but to the tallow candler. From him she obtains two little candles. These she brings home, and she and her husband sit down on the floor between them. One candle represents the husband, one the wife. They are lighted at the same moment, and the owner of the one that goes out first leaves the house, taking only his or her clothes, while the owner of the more enduring candle remains also the owner of the house and all that therein is.

Road 1,400 Miles Long.

Search where you will, you will find no highway in the whole world so romantic as the Grand Trunk Road of India.

A stately avenue of three roads in one—the centre of hard metal, the roads on each side ankle-deep in silvery dust—fringed by double rows of trees, it runs for 1,400 miles through the vast northern plain which skirts the Himalayas, from Calcutta to far Peshawur, which keeps sentinel at the gate of Afghanistan.

From horizon to horizon it stretches like a broad white ribbon, as seemingly straight as if traced by a gigantic ruler. And dotted along its entire length are hundreds of serais (wayside rest-houses), each with its arched and turreted gateway, its spacious enclosure—in which humans share shelter with oxen, camels and goats—and its central well of sparkling water.

For 3,000 years the Himalayas have looked down on this road and have seen it as they see it to-day. It was the world's greatest highway before Rome was cradled, when the aboriginal Indians drove their cattle over the very spot where the motorcar dashes to-day.

Alexander the Great led his Greeks along it to the conquest of Northern India; and Buddha himself took his daily walks along it centuries before Christ was cradled.

It has seen a hundred generations of men come and go; a score of dynasties rise and fall. And yet today it is, to the eye, exactly the same as in the long-gone years when Nineveh was a proud city and our own ancestors gnawed bones in their caves.

The Oldest Treaty.

When he was entertained by the Governor of Madeira on his way to South Africa the late Mr. Chamberlain made the interesting statement that the oldest treaty in the English archives was the first offensive and defensive alliance between Great Britain and Portugal. This may have been quite true, if an earlier one entered into with the Flemings in 1274 had gone astray or was for commercial purposes only, for that was the first English treaty with a foreign country.

The Portuguese treaty was signed at Windsor on May 9th, 1386, largely as a result of the assistance which John of Gaunt gave to John I. of Portugal in repelling the Castilians. Five thousand English troops were sent, and the Allies gained a notable victory at Aljubarrota. The alliance was cemented in 1387 by the marriage of King John to the daughter of John of Gaunt.

Mr. Bonham Carter.

Mr. Maurice Bonham Carter's friendship with the Asquith family dates from his undergraduate days. He got his cricket blue, and in later years has proved a painstaking and capable private secretary to the Prime Minister—a post of no little difficulty. He is almost the youngest in a large family, and has eight or nine brothers, one of whom is a distinguished civil servant in the Sudan. Mr. and Mrs. Bonham Carter, who witnessed their son's marriage, are both over 80.

"His Majesty's Opposition."

In his fascinating Reminiscences, which every one is reading just now, Lord Revelstoke asks who invented this familiar expression. It is somewhat surprising that one who shows himself to be so well-informed on most matters should not know. The term was coined by Sir John Cam Hobhouse, afterwards Lord Broughton. Canning accepted the appellation as appropriate observing that it should render its inventor's name immortal.

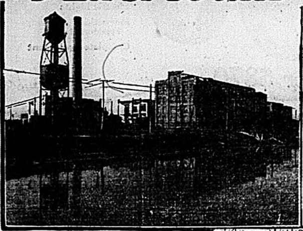
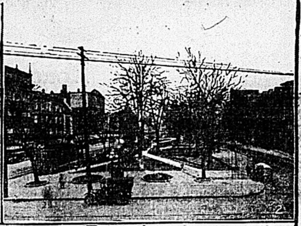
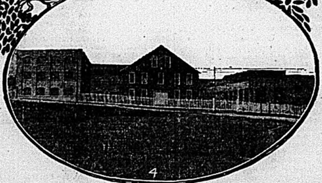
Americans in Canada







(1) Precter-Gamble Co., Hamilton, Ont.

(3) The Gray-Dart Motors Co., Ltd., Chatham, Ont.
(4) Canadian Ingersoll Rand Co.'s Plant at Sherbrooke, Que.

THE process of the establishment of branches of American industrial concerns within the borders of the Dominion of Canada has been going on for a good many years—ever since it became apparent that no political party was likely to modify very seriously the "protective" character of the country's fiscal policy. It might reasonably have been expected that the shock of war would put a stop, temporarily at least, to this process of peaceful penetration; but the opposite has been the case. Even since the recovery of capital from its paralysis, eight months or so after the war began, the establishment of American branches in Canada has been going on with greater energy and determination than before, and investigation has shown that the war, instead of discouraging such adventure, has afforded new reasons to justify it.

Speaking broadly, the American firms which have established themselves in Canada during the past twelve or fifteen months have been actuated by one or both of two main considerations. Either they have had an eye on the Canadian domestic market, and have regarded the present as a favorable opportunity for a campaign in it because of their own abnormal cash reserves, and the exceptional prosperity and activity of the Dominion; or (this is the explanation in the majority of cases) they have had an eye not only to the Canadian market but also to the vast territory of the Entente Allies, and are convinced that in the fiscal arrangements which will follow the conclusion of peace, no neutral country will receive "most-favored-nation" treatment from any of the Allied countries.

Canada, combining the economic advantages of the American continent, with its wealth of raw material and of skilled labor, with the market advantages of a member of the belligerent Entente, is the natural basis of operations for an American concern with designs upon European markets. This, according to the industrial commissioners of various Canadian cities, and of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is the main motive in inducing most of the recent American branch establishments in Canada, and is likely to bring to Canada within the next few years industrial capital running to many hundreds of millions.

American concerns which have established plants in Canada since the beginning of 1915, is an imposing evidence of the attractive power of the Canadian market and of Canadian export possibilities. It should be added that all of the establishments are substantial plants, built for meeting a large business and for carrying on, not merely a sales agency or an assembling process, but practically the entire process of production from the purchased raw material to the finished article.

One of the first American products to meet with an avowed policy of fiscal discouragement in Free Trade England, as a result of the war and its effect upon trade balances,was the automobile. The establishment of branches of American automobile concerns in Canada has already been going on for some years, owing to the great growth in Canadian consumption of the article and the popularity of American brands. But the European situation has given a tremendous impetus to the movement. Existing plants have been vastly enlarged, and three new and important plants have been undertaken, those of the Maxwell Motors at Windsor, Ontario, the Chalmers Motor Company at Walkerville, Ontario, and the Chevrolet Motor Company at Oshawa, Ontario. This is exclusive of the acquisition and enlargement of Canadian-owned plants by American firms for the manufacture of American brands of cars.

One of the biggest industrial undertakings of the year was that of the of an immense plant in Hamilton, Ontario. The famous packing house of Proctor & Gamble Company, the proprietors of Ivory Soap and of sundry other soap and cottonseed oil products, who have commenced the erection Libbey, McNeill & Libby has established itself in Hamilton, Ontario (which city, it will be noted, is a favorite with American industries owing to its combination of cheap power and good labor supply with the best of shipping facilities). The Flint Varnish & Color Company has put up a branch factory at Toronto, Ontario; and the Link Belt Company is locating in the same city. Sherer & Gillett, makers of store counters, are establishing at Guelph, Ontario. The Maple Leaf Condensing Company, a Detroit concern, is at Chesterville, Ontario.

The number of concerns establishing in the Province of Quebec has been small compared with those of Ontario, but the present labor situation, which is much more favourable in Quebec, is likely to correct that tendency to some extent. An important asset to the industries of Sherbrooke, Quebec, is that of Kayser & Company, the famous manufacturers of silk gloves, stockings, and other articles. The Aetna Explosive Company, at Drummondville, Quebec, has been improperly regarded as a war industry; it is so for the time being, but its immense plant has been designed so as to be applicable to the manufacture of dyes when the explosive business falls off. A rumor, which appears to have good foundation, though not officially confirmed, asserts that one of the great American chemical and explosives concerns has made all preparations for the establishment of a plant for the production of nitrates from atmospheric nitrogen at one of the hitherto undeveloped powers of Quebec Province.

Several American concerns already operating in Canada have found that their existing plants are not equal to the demands which they anticipate. The Dominion Sugar Company, which is largely financed by American sugar-refining capital, is adding a big plant at Chatham, Ontario, to its existing buildings at Wallaceburg in the same province. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company is removing from small premises at Bowmanville, Ontario, to an immense property which it has bought at New Toronto, Ontario.

These examples, all of them being enterprises undertaken long after Canada's participation in the war and her financial sacrifices for that cause were known and allowed for, are convincing evidence that the progressive manufacturers of the United States have perfect confidence in Canada as a field for industrial investment. As most of them are looking for an export trade, it would appear that they are satisfied that production costs in Canada will not be materially altered after the war, either as regards labor supply, cost of living, or burdens of taxation. Mr. Graham W. Curtis, Industrial Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated recently that he had found American business men greatly impressed by the showing of financial American confidence in, and comprehension of, Canada, was greater than strength made by the Dominion since the war, and that undoubtedly at any other previous date.

War Nicknames.

War nicknames are a curious study. Probably there never was a war which did not give rise to some comic or offensive designation for the enemy. "Picts" (painted people) and "Lombards" (longbeards) remain as isolated monuments of the Roman soldier's play of fancy. The French in the early centuries called us "tails," for some rather mysterious reason. On more obvious grounds we have been known since the days of Joan of Arc as "goddams," the only epithet to which our gallant Allies have remained faithful throughout the centuries. We on our side have chiefly exercised our wit on the supposed passion of all Frenchmen for frogs. The nature of a war, indeed, can generally be traced in war nicknames. There is nothing opprobrious in "Ruski," and something positively caressing in "fuzzy-wuzzy," the English nickname for the brave but misguided Soudanese. "Guppy" suggests good-natured contempt. The Boer "rooinek" and "Brodrick' are familiar, but not insulting.

Keeps Smiling.

Smith-Dorriens' characteristic cheerfulness was invaluable to the morale of our troops in the dark days at the beginning of our campaign in France. "Smith-Dorrien's smiling," our men used to say, "so that things can't be so bad." It is not generally known that Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien has four brothers also serving their country—two in the army and two in the navy. One brother reverses the order of the family names. Someone asked Sir Horace the reason of this, and he replied, "I suppose the family was not quite sure in which order the names came so rang the changes on them so that at least one branch might be correct."

BUSY BEES IN WINTER.

How They Generate Heat to Keep the Colony Warm.

The bee upholds his reputation for industry throughout the winter months as well as during the summer. Being susceptible to cold, the bee must turn to his colony for warmth. Communism, which in bees is so highly developed in the storing of food and caring for the young, is also the basis for the heating system.

It was found by experiment that only the shell of the cluster made by the bees in cold weather is compact. This is formed by one to several layers of bees all solidly arranged with their heads inward, their hairs interlacing. This arrangement is perfect for conservation of the heat within. Except for an occasional shifting of position the bees forming the shell are quiet. But within the shell strange things are going on.

It is here that the heat is generated. And the antics are not unlike our own when we are cold. The bees are packed loosely within the shell so that there is plenty of space for many bees to be exercising at a time. Rapid fanning of the wings, shaking the body from side to side, rapid breathing and other movements are all part of the scheme for raising the temperature. In one particular instance, when a bee had been rapidly fanning with his wings for seven and a half minutes, the thermometer nearest him rose half a degree F.—Pearson's Weekly.

Johnny Roche's Tower.

Standing on the banks of the river Awberg, between Mallow and Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, is a remarkable edifice known as "Johnny Roche's Tower." The whole tower was built by the labor of one man, who subsequently resided in it. This individual, who received no education whatever, also erected a mill, constructing the water wheel after a special design of his own. Long before the introduction of the bicycle he went about the country in a wheeled vehicle of his own construction propelled by foot power. His last feat was to build his tomb in the middle of the river bed. John Roche died, but was not interred in the strange burying place which he selected for himself, his less original relatives deeming such a mode of sepulture unchristian.—London Strand Magazine.

The Horseshoe Legend.

Here is an explanation of the old horseshoe superstition: St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dunstan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of a house where the horseshoe was displayed.

The Coffee Plant's Friend.

In Colombia there is a tree highly esteemed as a shade for the coffee plant. It is found also in tropical Brazil and possesses qualities that make it peculiarly suited for this particular use. It will live on a stony, poor soil, and a tree only eighteen months old will shade 144 square yards of ground, while when full grown it may be fifty feet high and have a spread of fifty feet on every side.

The White Tower.

The White Tower, or Keep, of the Tower of London, said to be the oldest, largest, and most interesting part of the whole fortress, will, shortly be opened to the public to its uttermost depths. It was during the reign of William the Conqueror that the White Tower was built, though legend has erroneously connected its erection with Julius Caesar. Although it looks loftier, the tower is only about ninety feet high. It is very strongly built, its walls being from eleven feet to fifteen feet in thickness. It got its name through being so frequently whitewashed.

WHEN GAS COMES OVER.

English Soldier Describes the Approach of the Poison Fumes.

In a lengthy letter home a Somerset, Eng., man serving with the Field Ambulance at the front describes daily life in the trenches. Writing on February 20, he says:

"During the night we had some strange excitement. We were playing cards when we heard the heavy buzz of a motor going slowly overhead, but we couldn't see anything. We went back wondering what it was. In the morning we found out that it was a Zep. in a raid over our lines. I can tell you it was weird. . . . . At night we got our first taste of the worst thing we have to contend with, viz., gas. You don't know where it is coming from. We were all seated around enjoying a game of cards when we heard the gas gong tinkling. Out went one of our fellows, and back he came with a rush, his gas helmet in his hand, saying, "Gas is coming over." He was followed by the sentry, with his helmet on, telling us to get ours on quick. We did not need telling twice. Out we went, and waited for what we did not know. When every one had their helmets on it was the weirdest sight I've ever experienced. It was exciting waiting there.

You have to duck and dodge the shrapnel flying about. I was standing at the dug-out entrance talking to some of the fellows, when—ping, ping—a bullet struck the sandbag over my head. I got covered with sand on my neck and face, but Mister Fritz wasn't quite near enough. You can bet I didn't stand there another minute, for they have a nasty habit of getting there again. . . .

We have the upper hand as regards artillery, and send over three to their one. Yesterday on our right there was a terrific battle on, and the guns going made your head ache with the noise. At night it was a sight. You could see the shells burst, and throw up flames. Lights of every description were going up.

This is war. . . . We had a chase in the middle of the night—an officer wounded—and we had to carry him all the way down the trench, and across the road. I was carrying in front. We got out of the trench, and Fritz evidently spotted us, for we had a lively time—ping, ping all across the road every now and again, but we escaped being hit. I can tell you it's not a pleasant experience being a target for a sniper. You can't do a nip with a loaded stretcher, but must stick to it, and trust to luck. You have to remember the man on the stretcher. You may be saving his life by getting down to the dressing station quickly."

A Good Fish Story.

Lord Buxton, the Governor-General of South Africa, is an ardent disciple of Izaak Walton, and he tells many good fishing yarns. One of his favorites is about an angler who one day had four hours' tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at last he had made sure of his catch he took it home in ecstasy and related his triumph to his maiden aunt. Of course, like all fishermen, he made as much of the story as possible, and laid special stress on the time it took and the immense energy he had to expend befor he could bring the salmon safely to land. When he had finished he waited anxiously for the praise due to his cleverness and heroism. For some moments there was silence, and then his aunt looked up from her knitting with a puzzled expression on her face. "But, my dear Tom," she said quietly, "why did you not cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

Shot in Heart and Recovers.

The proudest wounded soldier in London to-day is the man who recently had a jagged piece of shrapnel removed from his heart by an operation that has excited the greatest interest among doctors.

The shrapnel, whose edges might have torn through the adjacent tissue on any exertion of the sufferer, was lodged in the pericardium, in a position apparently so inaccessible that it was thought inadvisable to operate. The patient was able to leave his bed, but was obviously permanently unfit.

Then an Australian surgeon suggested how the operation could be performed. It involved most intricate surgery, and at the end the shrapnel was to be picked out by the surgeon's delicate fingers. The soldier, who is well on the way to complete recovery, now cherishes a mounted piece of shrapnel destined to become an heirloom.

Blanketed.

She—You'd think he'd cut more ice! He's a Son of the Revolution and— He—I know, but he married a daughter of the resolution.—Judge.

A PRACTICAL DUCHESS.

£35,000 Spent on the Soldiers in Hospital.

While the Duke of Westminster has been performing deeds of heroism at the front—it will be remembered that he saved the life of his friend, Captain Francis Grenfell, of the 9th Lancers, while time after time he has carried despatches under the heaviest fire—his wife, the Duchess of Westminster, has been working indefatigably since the beginning of the war at La Touquet, where she has established the most luxuriously-equipped private hospital for soldiers in France. And not only has her Grace devoted the whole of her time to this hospital, but she has herself spent some £35,000 upon it.

A daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Cornwallis-West, and younger sister of Princess Pless, the Duchess has long been one of the most popular women in society, noted for her beauty and accomplishments. At the same time, she was never in any sense a society butterfly, for she has always displayed a strong sense of duty and of her responsibilities. A widely-read woman, she is keen on politics, and has brought about many reforms on her husband's estates for the benefit of the poorer tenants.

The Duchess was married in 1901. She had known the Duke from his early boyhood, and they had always been devoted to one another. Indeed, as boy and girl they went through the graceful old-world ceremony of nursery betrothal. Essentially an outdoor woman, the Duchess prefers country to town life, and there is probably no more accomplished sportswoman in society today. Like her sister, Princess Pless, she has a splendid singing voice and a talent for amateur theatricals, which she has often displayed at performances organized for charitable purposes.

It might be mentioned that the Duke of Westminster is a soldier by profession. He was a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, and served as A.D.C. to Lord Roberts in South Africa. As a child he received the name of Bend Or, after the late Duke's celebrated horse that won the Derby; and to his friends he is still known by that name. The Duke was a great favorite with the late King Edward, for his Grace, with no father of his own, was the first, outside his own immediate family, in whom His Majesty took an interest that was truly paternal.

When straining jelly turn a kitchen chair bottom up on the edge on the table, then tie a piece of cheese cloth, doubled, on each leg of the chair. Do not allow too much fullness or sag. FARM LABORER'S WANTED

The Western Province of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm laborers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada, it was always necessary to bring from twenty-five to thirty thousand laborers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy, and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labor, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

BUDDHA'S TOOTH.

Relic is One of the Treasures of the Temple at Kandy.

At all times of the year in Kandy, Ceylon, may be seen followers of Buddha making their way to the great Mahigawa Temple, the "Palace of the Sacred Tooth;" in order to lay offerings and flowers at the shrine of the founder of their religion. Entering the temple, they pass into a small room, some 12ft. square, in which is kept the famous tooth of Buddha. The chamber is lighted by two lamps which have not been allowed to go out for years. The walls are splendidly decorated, and the vessel—called the Karundua—containing the tooth, stands on a massive silver table amidst a gorgeous array of jewels and other valuable gifts. The Karundua is draped with muslin, beneath which is a silver dome, studded with gems, and under this is a dome of gold, beautifully carved and literally encrusted with precious stones. Two similar coverings lie below them, and beneath these is a small case of gold, in which, on leaves of a gold lotus, reposes the tooth itself. This relic, carefully guarded, is seldom seen by others than priests. So much in reverence is the tooth held that to lay an offering to Buddha on the table bearing it is an ambition which every Buddhist would not fail to gratify if circumstances permitted.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

"And this, in my opinion, is precisely what has occurred," Todd bitterly added. "Fenno has done Allen up and got those papers, and now is smashing the market in anticipation of Packard's decision. That's all there is to it, Carter, all there is to it. I'll stake my life that that's just the size of it."

"Your views appear quite plausible, I'll confess," Nick gravely said. "What do you think, Henderson?"

"They are not unreasonable, yet I don't see how Fenno can have learned that the papers were here, and that Allen had been instructed to take them home with him last night,' Henderson perplexedly rejoined.

"He may have been informed by Allen himself," Todd forcibly argued. "Every man has his price. Allen may have detected the vital significance of the papers; and, if he could get a small fortune by turning them over to Fenno, he may have communicated with him to that effect. It is much more probable in my opinion, that he would have declined it, and afterward had somebody shadow Allen and get him out of the way. By this move, Fenno would not appear in the matter, and would be comparatively safe from subsequent suspicion, or conviction, at least."

"Do you think," Nick turned to the district attorney, with an air of one quite deeply impressed by Todd's vigorous argument, "do you think, Henderson that Allen would be guilty of doing anything of that sort—guilty of taking a big bribe?"

Henderson started at the floor in silence for a moment.

"Well, as Todd says, nearly every man has his price," he finally replied. "There are mililons involved in this affair. Fenno would certainly give up handsomely to win out. I cannot deny that Todd may be justified in his suspicions."

"I'll bet my last dollar on it, and I've got a good many dollars, too," Todd forcibly put in.

"Just now the more important question is, Nick, whether you will undertake to locate Allen, or explain his mysterious disappearance," said Henderson. "Something must be done, and with as little delay as possible."

Todd eyed the great detective narrowly while waiting for him to speak.

"I believe your story, Henderson," Nick replied, with rather subtle intonation, as he arose to go. "Quick work seems to be imperative. I will not make any promises, but—well, Henderson, you know me. I will do what I can for you."

CHAPTER V.
Caught Red-Handed

Nick Carter was a man of impressions. From impressions are born theories. The one is a natural sequence of the other, and both are essential to the success of every detective. The measure of success depends in on small degree, upon the nature of the impressions and the subtlety of the theories.

In both of these respects Nick Carter was wonderfully endowed. At no stage of his investigations, however, did he let either his impressions or his theories carry him over the traces. None knew better than he that neither would convince a jury, and that they served, in reality, only as stepping-stones to the discovery of absolute facts and tangible evidence.

In suppressing what he already knew about Allen's disappearance, Nick was acting upon impressions received and theories formed during his interview with Todd and Henderson.

Upon reaching the street after leaving the district attorney's office, he stepped into a convenient doorway and quickly adjusted a disguise with which he was provided, then waited for Todd to put in his appearance. He had not long to wait, however, for the latter soon emerged and walked briskly down the street, with the disguised detective shadowing him.

It was then half-past three.

The Stock Exchange had been closed for half an hour. The bitter battle over United Transit had ended for the day. That it would be renewed on the morrow, no man would have doubted; yet what the morrow would bring forth no man could safely have predicted—barring, very possibly, the honorable judge from whom was expected the fateful decision upon which the future enterprise depended.

Watching Todd while he shadowed him, it was soon obvious to Nick that this man was less disturbed than when in Henderson's office. Was it because the Exchange had closed for the day? His steps were quick and firm. He carried himself erect, with his head thrown back. His bearing was that of self-satisfaction, of mental aggressiveness, and instinctive defiance. He had the air of a man who had accomplished something—and now feared nothing.

These were, at least, the detective's impressions while he watched him, and he was now actuated by the theories to which they gave rise.

Nick had not forgotten the meeting with Percy Fenno the previous night, however, nor what he had said to him. Though favorably impressed with him at that time, and in sympathy with his opposition to the United Transit merger, Nick did not lose sight of the fact that Fenno was an entire stranger to him. He realized that his judgment might be somewhat erroneous, and that this energetic financier, of leonine boldness in his market operations—yet a mushroom sprung up in a night among the big men of Wall Street, of whom Todd was recognized as one—might be more crafty, designing, and possibly unscrupulous than he had inferred.

"Todd may be right," he said to himself, while he continued to shadow this generally recognized autocrat of the United Transit Company. "Given the conditions he mentioned, such a trick might have been turned by Fenno. Yet the fact that Todd thought of such conditions before I did, and lost no time in pointing them out to me, suggests another possibility— that Todd himself may be the man who turned the trick. His incentive would have been as great, assuming that he has lied to me concerning the character of the stolen documents and records. I must see Judge Packard and find out precisely what they consist, and whether his decision will, or will not, be influenced by their loss. First, however, I'll see where Todd is bound, after having recited his little verse to the district attorney. He certainly appears to have dropped all of his troubles."

Nick shadowed him to Broadway, where Todd entered the business office of a big firm of contractors—McNulty, Cassidy & Coyle.

"H'm! this is one of the firms whose work for the Transit Company was held up by one of Fenno's early injunctions four months ago, and still hangs by the eyelids. I wonder why Todd calls on them at just this time. Does he look for favorable developments having a bearing on their work?"

Of whatever his mission consisted, it was enacted in less than five minutes, when Todd again appeared on the street and proceeded directly to the Hotel Royal—herein fictitiously designated only because the publication of tragic episodes in hotels of established high character is seriously opposed.

One of the largest and most fashionable hotels in the city, it was during the late hours of the afternoon the resort of an army of bankers, brokers and persons interested in stock-market movements, where the latter were discussed and predicted with much animation in nearly every corridor and public portion of the vast, palatial house.

It was precisely four o'clock when Andrew Todd entered the Hotel Royal, and Nick Carter followed him less than a minute later.

During that brief interval, however, Todd had been eagerly surrounded by a throng of excited men to the spacious main office.

Some were shaking hands with him with great enthusiasm. Many were eagerly waiting an opportunity to do so. Others were waving hats, handkerchiefs, or open newspapers in the air, with cries of approval and congratulations; while the face of Andrew Todd himself wore an expression of mingled satisfaction and triumph that temporarily transfigured it.

"By thunder!" Nick mentally exclaimed. "There can be only one cause for such demonstrations. Judge Packard has announced his decision since the market closed, and it's in favor of the United Transit Company. I'll be hanged if it hasn't come precisely as Todd predicted. It's a cinch, too, that all of the noisy fellows are long of the stock, or they wouldn't be so elated. They know it will soar to-morrow for fair, and I reckon Fenno will be buried so deep that he will never come to the surface. Yet it's mighty curious—that awful break today. Fenno must have been dreadfully lame in some way, or—— H'm: I'll not try to fathom it at present."

While these demonstrations around Todd were proceeding, he evidently being regarded as the lion of the hour, a man whom Nick quickly recognized hurried up the broad marble stairway leading through the vestibule, and into the hotel, and rushed up to Todd with an open newspaper, displaying the glaring headlines and excitedly shaking hands with him.

"Martin McNulty," Nick grimly muttered, briefly watching the elated manifestations of the two men. "Evidently Todd called to see him on his way here, but failed to find him in his office. I'll see what the newspapers have to say:

Nick purchased one at the newsstand and glanced at the huge display on the front page:

Preserving Fruit

A GOOD SUBSTITUTE FOR CAN RUBBERS.

When about to close a jair of preserved goods, the housewife very often finds herself short of a rubber band, or else the last one breaks. A very good substitute can be made from newspaper. This is better than other paper, because, as plumbers say, "it packs better." They often use it to make small pipe joints air and watertight. Cut several layers of the paper the required size, put them on the can and screw the lid down as tightly as possible. If preferred, rings of soft leather, cut from the tops of old shoes, may be used, but they are not as satisfactory as those made from newspapers.

RASPBERRY CROWN

2 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons corn starch, I cup boiling raspberry juice, 1 egg, pinch of salt, lemon extract. Cook until creamy. Put into moulds. When cold serve with raspberries or whipped cream.

RASRBERRY-TAPIOCA

Put ¾ cup tapioca into a kettle, cover with 4 cups boiling water and cook until transparent. Stir into this 1 pint of fresh raspberries, adding sugar to taste. Pour into a mould. Serve cold with cream.

RASPBERRY CAKE

1 Cup white sugar, ½ cup butter, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons buttermilk, 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon soda, nutmeg, 1 cup raspberries, (to be added last), Bake in layers.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR

Put 1 quart of raspberries into a suitable dish, pour over them a quart of good vinegar, let it stand 24 hours, then strain through a flannel bag and pour this liquor on another quart of berries; do this for 3 or 4 days successively and strain it; make it very sweet with loaf sugar; bottle and seal it.

RASBERRY CREAMS

Stir enough confectioners' sugar into a teaspoonful of raspberry jam to form a thick paste; roll it into a ball between the palms of your hands. Put a lump French Cream into a teacup and set it into a basin of boiling water, stirring it until it is melted; then drop a few drops of cochineal coloring to make it a pale pink, or a few drops of raspberry juice, being careful not to add enough to prevent its hardening. Now dip these little balls into the sugar cream, giving them two coats. Lay aside to harden.

RASPBERRY PIE

To 2 cups raspberries add 1 cup of red currants and 1 cup granulated sugar, with which a teaspoonful of flour has been mixed; stir together. Line a plate with flaky pie crust, put in the fruit, cover with a tolerably thick sheet of paste, make several incisions for escape of steam, and bake until the crusts are nicely browned. Serve cool.

RASPBERRY SHORTCAKE

Bake sponge cake in 2 layers, or split one thick cake; put in between them a thick layer of berries, and on top put whipped cream and more berries.

RASPBERRY FRUIT BASKET

Bake plain paste over inverted patty pans, roll paste 1-8 in thick, and cut in strips ¼ inch wide. Twist strips in pairs and making handles. Fill cases with raspberries springled with sugar. Garnish with whipped cream.

PUTTING UP SUMMER FRUIT

Jelly-making and preserving without the proper tools is hard work. Try to have all the utensils ready before the task is undertaken. He sure to have a plentiful supply of new rubbers for the jars, and the jars well scalded before the fruit is put into them. The enameled ware or porcelain lined kettles should be used rather than tin, because of the action of the acids on the tin.

Have at hand all necessary spoons; silver forks for lifting the larger fruit; a large and a smaller funnel; plenty of cheese cloth for jelly bags; a colander, a gravy strainer and a wire seive. Measures and a good scale are also necessary if the work is to be done properly. Then with plenty of sugar, spices, vinegar and ripe unspoiled fruit, the putting up of summer fruit should be a pleasure and a success.

LIST OF PRESERVES

I always keep in my kitchen an up-to-date list of all my preserves, pickles, jellies, etc. I revise this list whenever I add anything to my preserve closet, and check off each jar or bottle as it is used.

This plan saves many a trip to the cellar to take account of stock, or select the kind we had better use next.

BLACKBERRY PIE

Pick the berries clean, rinse in cold water take up the berries by the handful, sorting out all stems. Line a buttered pie tin with a pie paste, put in the berries one inch deep, sprinkle with sugar, using about a ½ cup of brown sugar, sprinkle with flour, a salt spoon of salt and a little nutmeg. Put on top paste, pressing the two crusts together around the edge, trim, cut the top for steam to escape and bake in a quick oven for 30 to 45 minutes.

BLACKBERRY PUDDING

Three cups flour, 1 cup molasses, ½ cup of milk, 1 teaspoon salt, a little cloves and cinnamon, teaspoonful soda dissolved in a little of the milk, stir in a quart of Blackberries (floured) boil in a well buttered mould for two hours. Serve with brandy sauce.

Browning's Peculiar Eyes.

Browning's eyes were peculiar, one having a long focus, the other very short. He had the unusual accomplishment (try it and prove) of closing either eye without "squinching" and without any apparent effort, though sometimes on the street in strong sunshine his face would be a bit distorted. He did all his reading and writing with one eye, closing the long one as he sat down at his desk. He never wore glasses and was proud of his microscopic eye. He often wrote minutely to show off his powers. When he left the house to go for a walk he shut the short eye and opened the long one, with which he could see an immense distance. He never suffered with any pain in his eyes except once, when as a boy he was trying to be a vegetarian in imitation of his youthful idol, Shelley.—Boston Transcript.

A SOBER ENGLAND.

Vast Improvement Has Been Achieved by Resolute War Methods.

"Fifty per cent. less public drunkenness and disorder than before the war," is one of the results of the resolute methods applied by England to the regulation of the drink problem nearly a year ago.

The Central Liquor Control Board, of which Lord d'Abernon is chairman, took over the control of Great Britain's liquor problem on May 15, 1915.

Designed to affect areas such as munition centres and seaports, it has gradually extended its scope of operations until 29,000,000 people are directly affected by its decisions. The board possesses drastic powers, even to the point of absolutely closing saloons when it considers their existence prejudicial to the interests of national productiveness.

At present saloons may sell intoxicating liquors only between the hours of noon and 2.30 p.m. and 6.30 and 9.30 p.m. on week days, and on Sundays between 1 and 3 p.m. and 6 and 9 p.m. Limited hours are prescribed also for the sale of bottled liquors for consumption off the premises; the prohibition of selling liquor on credit and the absolute stoppage of treating in saloons, clubs, or any other places.

In addition to the diminution of drunkenness and disorder, Lord d'Abernon said one of the most satisfactory results is the increased efficiency and productiveness of workers in munition areas. Continuing, he said:

"A bright side of the picture is the gratifying readiness with which the public has shown itself willing to assist in seeing that all should conform to the drastic regulations of the last nine months. You may attribute this truly remarkable attitude to the public's belief that the restrictions are in reality war necessities and their willingness in a great crisis to subserve personal convenience to national efficiency.

"Among the public at large it is remarkable also that there is widespread and practically general approval of such provisions as that prohibiting treating.

"Regarding the restriction of hours, more divergence of opinion exists. The board has sought to confine the consumption of alcohol to those hours which conflicted least with the working day and which coincided best with ordinary meal hours.

"If you ask my general conclusion I should say that the period has been too brief for any final opinion to be expressed, but that there can be no doubt that there is ample ground for belief that a vast improvement has been achieved. The drop in public intemperance and of convictions resulting from it which occurred in each area, directly the orders were put in force, has been steadily maintained up to date. It is often said, 'Men cannot be made sober by Act of Parliament.' My belief is that under a really effective system of regulation three-fourths of the drunkenness which prevailed before the war would never exist again."

Grosvenor Square Saved.

"I shall never forget," says a British officer on leave in London, "the recapture of a certain British trench in one of the most treacherous parts of the Ypres salient a little while ago. The Germans had taken it from us at the sacrifice of hundreds of men. Our commander said we must steal that trench again or never look him in the face. For hours the heavy guns boomed and a thousand rifles cracked. Then the supreme moment arrived. Suddenly the thunder of our artillery ceased and all was quiet. Not a whisper was heard until the word came to go. You should have seen those lads from London town. In an instant they were over the parapet, and it was more like a hundred yards sprint than a bombing and bayoneting attack. The Germans came in waves of grey, and then the slaughter began. There was some deadly bayonet work, and the enemy fought to the last gasp, but down they went before they had a chance of giving relief. The trench, which was known as 'Grosvenor Square,' was recaptured, and very few of the Germans remained alive."

Making Bad Worse.

Out on Egypt's sands the Territorials were camped. The captain of the company was all that a captain should not be. He was short and stout and round of shoulder.

Needless to say, among his men he was known as "Humpy." One night, on returning to camp the sentry let him go by unchallenged, and so roused his military wrath.

"What the blue Alsatian mountains do you mean?" he snapped. "Why didn't you demand the countersign?"

The sentry trembled with fear so badly that his wits got shaken badly. "Bedad, sir," he stammered, "I thought you was a c-c-c-amel."

Dutch Form British Force.

Military commandants of the Western Transvaal at a recent meeting with Gen. Rits, of South-West African fame, unanimously decided to form a brigade of three mounted regiments, two to be recruited from the Western and Eastern Transvaal respectively, and the third from the other Provinces. It is noteworthy that the general meeting was composed mostly of Dutch commandants who took part in the operations for the suppression of the rebellion and in the South-West African campaign against the Germans.

Mrs. Chamberlain.

I saw Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain in Bond street the other day doing some shopping (says a writer in The London Mail), and carrying home her own purchases, evidently, for she had both hands full. She wears the old-fashioned widow's weeds, but was looking very happy and contented.

AUSPICIOUS HOMECOMING OF CAPTAIN E. D. O'FLYNN

Splendid Demonstration of Belleville's High Regard For Boys of The Colors—City Decorated, Big Crowd at G. T. R. Station, Mammoth Parade on Front and Bridge Streets, and Welcome at The Family Home—On a Two Months Furlough

Hardly had the message been received about nine o'clock Saturday morning, that Captain E. D. O'Flynn would arrive on the 3.05 train, than operations were in motion to give the young hero a welcome worthy of his magnificent record as a soldier.

His Worship, Mayor H. F. Ketcheson, immediately became busy in behalf of the city, and after seeing that his own office decorations were thrown to the breeze, he started for a printing office, ordered handbills announcing the homecoming, and soon flags began to appear on Front and Bridge Street business houses, extending to private residences, until the city had become a veritable bower of waving welcome.

Every resident was in the height of ecstasy. Eddie was coming home. Even then the train was bearing him nearer his loved ones and friends.

Those who owned automobiles ordered them in readiness; those not thus blessed, determined to walk or take the van to the depot; and as the hour approached the crowds began to move northward, the open space about the G.T.R. Station becoming packed with decorated cars, the long platform crowded with people.

The remnant of the 15th Regiment Band were on hand to express their loyalty in music. The faces of the vast concourse were turned eastward, hoping the train would be on time. Then the rumbling sound was heard—the smoke was seen ascending—the cry went out "It's coming! It's coming!" As the train steamed in the band played a popular air. Then two "stalwarts" were seen to wend their way toward where the particular car was likely to stop. They were the same pair who had carried Eddie to the car upon their shoulders two years previous—Wm. Carnew and Hope McGinnis. The train came to a standstill; a mighty shout went up; and as the lithe, uniformed figure of our young townsman appeared on the car steps, he was immediately grasped, raised to two husky shoulders, and conveyed slowly through the jostling crowd, everyone striving for a handshake. It was truly an inspiring moment. The King himself could not have been more highly honored.

Onward the trio moved until opposite the large touring car of Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., into which Captain O'Flynn was gently deposited between his mother and Mrs. Porter, (President of the Quinte Chapter of I.O.D.E.), who, with Miss Falkner and Mrs. S. A. Hyman were in waiting; Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, who had met his son at Kingston, being also of the party.

Then began the parade to the city proper—moving cars to the number of a hundred or more, occupying the street, while pedestrians filled the sidewalks, and as the business portion of Front and Bridge Streets were traversed, the waving decorations and lusty shouts of greeting made up a spectacular event.

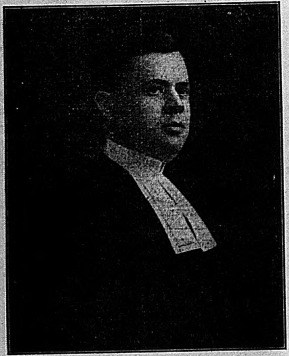
At the O'Flynn residence, on Bridge street, a massive crowd had collected, barely room being obtainable for passage to the main entrance. Here the true welcome was extended. As soon as possible, in response to a united call, Captain O'Flynn appeared upon the upper piazza, and briefly thanked his friends for their manifestation of affection, expressing his gratitude at being permitted to return to them.

He was followed by Mayor Ketcheson, in behalf of the city, who heartily welcomed him to his old home, giving voice to the interest that had ever been taken in his work and welfare while in the trenches, and commending his loyalty to the Empire.

Upon being called for, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, while laboring under deep emotions, expressed his thanks for the greeting extended to his son, saying that it made his "Irish blood course with joy to look upon the happy faces about him." He would never forget the occasion, and on behalf of Mrs. O'Flynn and his entire household, asked the blessings of God upon those who had so unstintingly expressed their good will.

Though wearied by his long journey, Captain O'Flynn responded heartily to the many greetings, at the same time feeling deeply the friendly attitude of his home friends and comrades.

The Captain, in appearance is much improved, the home journey adding to his health, he having gained sixteen pounds in weight while enroute. He came on the Empress of Britain, and is on a furlough of two months.



CAPT. E. D. O'FLYNN

NOTES

Many contributions of flowers were sent to the O'Flynn house in recognition of the day's event, including a beautiful bouquet from the Rainbow Club.

Miss Ida Parker, whose father and three uncles are at the front, presented Captain O'Flynn with a large and beautiful bouquet of flowers. In response to the gift Eddie caught the little one up and kissed her tenderly.

Every road led to the G.T.R. depot or the O'Flynn residence Saturday afternoon.

One viewing the smiling crowd from the upper piazza of the O'Flynn home, will never forget the scene. It demonstrated how deep the feeling runs for the soldier boys.

Captain O'Flynn has been on active service since the first week in August, 1914. At time of enlistment he was an Alderman of the city. He has gone through every engagement of note with the Canadians from February, 1915, to June, 1916.

Nickel Plant For Canada

Site in Nova Scotia Has Been Selected—Machinery is Purchased

OTTAWA, July 17.—Special—Although no official statement is yet forthcoming as to the progress which has been made towards permanently establishing a nickel refining industry in Canada as a result of the Government's negotiations with the International Nickel Company last March, it is stated that the Government will soon be in a position to announce that a considerable proportion at least of the Sudbury nickel ore will henceforth be refined in Canada. The site for the new plant has been purchased in Nova Scotia, and the machinery has been ordered by the International Company.

As far as can be learned, the Government here has no intention at present going farther than this. The agreement with the International Company provides for refining in Canada all nickel required for Canadian consumption and, as far as practicable, what may be required for the British Government's needs. No information is given that the Government will itself go into the nickel industry or prohibit export of the ore to the United States.

Sir George Perley Returns to Capital

Will Return to England — He Expects Sudden End of the War

OTTAWA, July 17.— Special —Sir Geo. Perley, Acting Canadian High Commissioner in London for the past two years, returned to the capital last night, accompanied by Lady Perley. Sir George arrived at Quebec on the Missanabie yesterday, spent a few hours at Valcartier Camp, and then came on to Ottawa in the Prime Minister's private car, which was sent to Quebec for his convenience. Sir George, in a brief interview on his arrival late to-night, said that he would spend a few weeks here before returning to London, when he will continue as Acting High Commissioner until the war is over. He declared that there was absolute confidence in England that ultimate victory must rest with the Allies. No one yet knew, he said, just when the war would end. "But there is now no doubt as to the issue," he added. "I believe that when the end comes it will come suddenly."

Sir George has returned primarily to look after his extensive private interests in Ottawa, and before returning he will take up with the Government a number of questions which affect Canada's interests in the Motherland.

West of Finery a detachment of our troops made some progress and captured three machine guns. After a rather long bombardment the Germans delivered two attacks against our positions in the region of Ham, in Lorraine, south east of Nomeny. Both attacks were repulsed and prisoners remained in our hands.

There were no important developments on the remainder of the front.

THIRD LINE IS REACHED HOLD GROUND GAINED

Prepare For Another Big Drive by Conolidating Positions—General Haig's Forces Sending Foe Back to Third Line—Germans Beginning to Admit Reverses

LONDON, July 17.—(Special.)—Exchanged by the desperate fighting of the days the German and British troops on the Somme were resting on their arms last night. In the lull which has followed what correspondents at the front describe as the fiercest fighting of the war, the British are consolidating their new positions north of the Bazentin-Longueval line and are bringing up their heavy artillery preparatory to resuming the great drive toward Peronne.

The British offensive was resumed Saturday and, the advance of their thrust reached the third line of the German defences north of the Somme.

Berlin officially admitted that General Sir Douglas Haig's forces had gained some ground and that they had occupied Trones Wood. The German resistance has been stubborn, but the British were able, thus far, to retain the positions won.

General Haig's men, in pushing the Germans back to their third line of defence, advanced four miles beyond the original German lines as they existed at the beginning of the offensive on July 1st in the Frisourt-Mametz sector.

The force of the renewed British drive is shown not only in the ground gained but in the number of prisoners captured. London reports the taking on Saturday of more than 2,000 Germans, the total since the start of the offensive now being in excess of 10,000.

In the course of the operations, the correspondent adds, detachments of the Dragoon Guards and the Deaccan Horse (a crack Indian cavalry command) went into action. They charged an enemy position, killing sixteen and catpuring thirty-four. The operation was small, but it was the first time that cavalry was employed as such since the early stages of the war.

A despatch from British Headquarters in France says: Continuing their offensive, the British, who broke through the German second line of defence, now have taken all of Delville Wood, which was stormed by the South Africans and the High Wood, establishing themselves beyond Bazentin-le-Petit, advanced parties having been to the outskirts of Martinquich, Pozieres and some other points close to the third German line of defence. The weather remains dry and warm.

BRITISH FACE THE ENEMY FIRE TO SAVE GERMAN WOUNDED

Capture Big Cellar Full of German Wounded, and Carry Them to The Rear While Enemy Pelt Them With Bullets—Tragic Work For Litter Bearers

Canadian Press Special.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE July 17.—The British to-day captured German trenches in the neighborhood of Posieres, which strengthens a new British line in this vicinity. The British also cleared out nests of German machine gun operators, who had been holding out in the cellars and behind barricades in the ruins of Evillers and La Boiselle. A total of about one hundred officers and men surrendered to the British, who had steadily closed in upon them, using bombs and trench mortars, the Germans being short of food.

In an enormous cellar at Bezantin Le Petit, the British found several hundred wounded Germans who had taken refuge there. It was tragic work for the British litter bearers, bringing them back through German shell-fire which was meant for British reserves and gun positions, but they persisted until all who had not received a final wound in the transit were safe in the rear.

The captured record of the German battalion shows six hundred of its numbers were killed or wounded by British shell-fire in the bombardment before the attack began.

Quebec Criticised by Sir Sam

Lays Cornerstone of Dominion Arsenal at Lindsay—Site Selected Because of Isolation

"Quebec has not done its duty in this great war as it should have done, and I believe it would have done if the young men of the Province had been taken in hand by the proper people."—Sir Sam Hughes.

(Staff Correspondence of The Globe.)

LINDSAY, June 16.—However he may be regarded elsewhere, General Sir Sam Hughes is at present the "white-haired boy" in Lindsay. Manifestation of this was conspicuous on Saturday when the Minister of Militia came to his home town and riding to lay the cornerstone of the new Dominion arsenal. Sir Sam maintained that Lindsay was chosen for the location on its merits, and disclaimed that he was bringing a new industry into the constituency because he was the representative at Ottawa. All the same, the people were saying on the streets of Lindsay that the arsenal was going to be a help to the town and to Sir Sam belonged all the credit for bringing it there.

The Minister of Militia in the course of his address, declared: "Let me assure you that, much as I am prepared to do for the town of Lindsay, highly as I esteem it as a centre of intelligence, skill and industry, I would not, as Minister of Militia, have been a party to putting this magnificent institution in this town if Lindsay had not been properly situated in every regard, in population, distance from the coast, isolation, and freedom from any likelihood of invasion. In every sense it is admirably situated from a physical and natural viewpoint." Sir Sam alluded to the necessity of having an arsenal in addition to the one at Quebec.

PORTUGUESE ARMY READY TO ANSWER THE CALL OF ALLIES

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, July 17.—The latest casualty lists announce 227 officers dead, 457 wounded or missing, 597 men dead, 1,832 wounded.

The Allied advance has now brought the Allied troops to about a mile from Combles, which when the offensive began was the German headquarters on the sector where the British and French lines unite.

The crossing of the river Somme by the French will involve serious fighting with probable heavy losses, but the result of a joint offensive seems daily more assured, as there is no evidence of any new units of reserves coming from the interior of Germany, and news has been received that the Portuguese Government has an equipped army with everything necessary to enable it to fight side by side with the Anglo-French armies, and that this army is ready to answer a call whenever required.

Her Atonement

A Story For Memorial Day

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

The summer of 1863 was an eventful period of my life. I was then a girl of eighteen, and the war between the states was at its height. I was living in Pennsylvania just north of the Maryland line and on a road leading up to Gettysburg.

One morning persons began to pass our house, making all the haste they could. Some of them were on foot, some in vehicles of different kinds, and nearly all carried articles of furniture or household utensils. When asked why and whence they were moving so hurriedly they said that a great army of Confederates was advancing to invade the northern states.

We held a family conclave to decide what to do. We were all Union sympathizers and knew we had nothing to expect from the southerners. But it didn't make much difference which side we were on, for the fences were sure to go for firewood, and soldiers who are bent on pillage don't mind which side they loot. We decided to stay at home and protect our property as far as we could. We buried the valuables—some silver and a little jewelry—and I walked back and forth over the ground under which it lay so that the recent digging might not be noticed. Father took down his fowling piece and started off northward to join the Federals.

When we had hidden everything that was hidable we waited. Father and the boys—the boys had long ago enlisted in the Union army—had always kept guns in the house for hunting and two or three revolvers. After father's departure I found that one revolver had been left, and I took it and put it in my pocket—for women had pockets in their dresses in those days—not knowing but that I might have occasion to use it.

It seems to me now, an old woman, that I must have been a plucky girl, though I didn't think so at the time. Indeed, the idea of a horde of men, with weapons to kill, sweeping over us like a cloud of locusts was enough to terrify any one. I felt the danger, but I kept my self possession. And I have noticed all through my long life that it is the unexpected that happens. Vice versa, the expected does not happen.

Surely this was illustrated in the first locust which came in advance of the swarm. A young fellow in gray uniform, with gold braid on his sleeves, rode up to the house. I was on the porch. He took off his sombrero, smiled and said in the most deferential manner and voice:

"Can you tell me if there is a road leading eastward within a few miles north of us?"

There was certainly nothing to be afraid of in this young fellow, and I bravely answered:

"I can, but I won't."

He seemed rather amused than offended at my blunt reply. At any rate, he smiled, showing a set of very white teeth.

"You are a Unionist, I suppose?" he said.

"I am," was my firm reply.

"Then you are quite right to refuse information to a Confederate."

He looked up the road, hesitated, then spoke again.

"Would your Union sympathies prevent your giving me a crust of bread? I've been on the go for twenty-four hours with not a bite."

This was certainly not what I had dreaded. I had pictured a lot of rough men coming to the house and helping themselves to what they could find without asking permission. Here was a handsome young man deferentially begging a crust of bread.

"I will give you what we have," I replied and went into the house. He dismounted and, throwing the bridle rein over a picket in the fence, followed me. The cook had run away with other fugitives, and since there was no one to do anything but myself I set some cold meat and bread and butter on the table and made a cup of coffee. The young man was really hungry—indeed, he seemed famished. And it did my heart good to see how he enjoyed the coffee.

"That's the first cup of real coffee," he said, "that I have tasted in more than a year. You northerners have no idea what privations our southern people are enduring. The blockade has cut us off from every luxury."

While he was eating I was wondering why he wanted to know about a road running eastward. I asked him some questions, which he answered frankly, and from his replies I learned that he was an officer on the staff of a general commanding one of the corps of the Confederate army and that he wished to reach the general commanding troops on the road next east and running parallel with the one on which we were. In his sword belt was a folded paper, which I presumed he was carrying to this commander.

The only persons in the house besides myself and the officer were mother and Aunt Charlotte, and they had locked themselves in a room on the second floor. My eyes were fixed on the paper the young man carried, and, womanlike, I was curious to know what was in it. Then the idea popped into my head to do my country a service by appropriating it. Had I been a man this might have been easy, for I had a revolver in my pocket and could produce it instantly, while his own pistol was in a holster on his hip. A man might have pointed his weapon at him and ordered him to throw up his hands, then possessed himself of the paper. But this was a good deal for a woman to do. At any rate I shrank from it. I determined to use more feminine means.

I noticed that it was difficult for him to keep awake while he was eating. There was nothing surprising in this, for I have heard that in wartime a man may pass several days without sleep, and many a man has slept under fire. When he had finished his meal I went to the cupboard where father kept his cigars and, taking the box, offered it to the officer. He opened his eyes with delight, and taking one bit off the end, and I lighted a match and held the flame to the cigar.

I now had an object and softened my manner toward him decidedly. Pointing to a lounge, I invited him to take a nap on it. He protested against the nap, but could not refrain from stretching himself upon it for a few whiffs of the cigar. I asked him if he would not take half an hour's doze, provided I would awaken him at the end of that time. He positively refused, though he confessed that he had had no sleep for two days. While he was refusing to sleep he passed into slumber.

He had hardly fallen asleep before I had the paper from his belt. I read it and it proved to be a message to a general on another route just when and where to meet the corps on our road and march together toward Gettysburg. Leaving the young man sound asleep, I went outside, mounted his horse and galloped away northward.

It was evening when I reached the camp of one of the corps near Gettysburg and delivered to the general the dispatch. He read it with great interest and said that it indicated what the southern forces were intending. Then he sent it to the commander of the Federal army.

All was changed when I reached home. An army—or part of one—had swept over the place, but though the fences and other articles that could be moved were gone, the place was not injured beyond repair. Our buried valuables had not been disturbed. The officer from whom I had taken the dispatch had, of course, vanished. Notwithstanding the service I had rendered the Union cause my heart smote me for the position in which I had placed him.

Then a boom coming down on the north wind announced the great historic battle that proved to be the turning point of the war. For three days we listened to the booming, like distant thunder; then down the road came the Confederates in retreat. They did not stop, but we expected another visitation when the Federal army would follow them. This, however, did not occur at once.

The Confederates left numerous wounded men in the different houses along the route, and we all took hold to care for them. I was very busy preparing such articles as they needed. Several wounded men were quartered at our house, but I left them much of the time to the care of my mother and my aunt, while I devoted myself to the production and distribution of supplies. This led me to a great number of the neighboring houses.

One day I went to a farmhouse to leave some lint. When I entered the living room, where several wounded men were lying on cots, there, pale and helpless, lay the officer whom I had robbed. Though I had done a legitimate deed of war, I felt as guilty as if I had run a knife into him. Perhaps if I had met him strong and well I should have triumphed over him. As it was, I was seized with a desire to atone for what I had done.

I did not dare face him and beat a hasty retreat. But the next day, summoning my resolution, I returned and walked into the room where he was lying. He recognized me at once, but I did not receive the look of reproach, of bitter antagonism that I deserved.

"I presume," I said, "that you despise me?"

"Why should I despise you? All is fair in war." Then, with that pleasing smile with which he had greeted me the first time I saw him, he added, "and in love."

It would be impossible to express my feelings as I stood over him looking down upon him, that smile on his face, which grew sad as he thought of the disadvantage that had accrued to his cause through his yielding to the fatigue which had overcome him.

"Forgive me," I said.

"I have nothing to forgive."

"I will do what I can to atone for what I have done. I will nurse you back to health."

"I shall feel a pride in being nursed by so brave and energetic a woman."

I kept my pledge. I devoted as much of my time to him as I could spare from my work for his wounded comrades. And when he had recovered he declared that my tender care had saved his life.

Three years later he reminded me of my words, "I will do what I can to atone for what I have done," and declared that it would require a lifetime of devotion on my part to enable him to bear the position in which I had placed him with his commander and brother officers. I replied that my life would be devoted to that purpose.

We are now an aged and feeble couple. Our grandson is an officer in the United States army, and my husband participated in the war between his united country and the Spanish at the end of the last century.

Lieutenant Herbert Asquith, the author of a little volume of poems being published, is a son of the Premier. "There are only eight poems in the little volume," says Mr. Jackson, of Sidgwick and Jackson, the publishers, "and several of them were written in Flanders, where the author was wounded on service. The manuscript was delivered to us from Downing Street a fortnight ago, and is being rushed out before Christmas. Lieutenant Asquith is now home on leave. It is the first volume he has published, but he has been an occasional contributor to The Spectator under the pseudonym of 'Subaltern.'"

They Remember Byron.

There is at least one Englishman for whom Greek affection has never wavered—Lord Byron. Not only is he commemorated in Greece by statues and street names, but his portrait is to be found everywhere in the most unlikely places. Mr. W. Miller, in his "Greek Life in Town and Country," tells how he came upon a portrait of the poet in a provincial restaurant. The moment he took notice of it "the proprietor, a stout, prosaic-looking man, whom no one would have suspected of sentiment, stepped towards the picture, clasped his hands in pathetic gesture, and, with a far-away look in his eyes, stood for a time in rapt admiration of the great Philhellene."

INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE AT LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

A small but very interesting audience was present at the lecture given by Mr. T. H. Race, the Field Secretary of the National Sanitarium Association, in the lecture room at the Y.M.C.A. last evening.

Mr. Race is an old journalist, having travelled a good deal, and is a splendid orator, describing the nature, methods of treatment, and prevention of tuberculosis.

In introducing his subject, the speaker stated that in all the places he has travelled, there were none he liked as well as Canada. Canada has the beautiful St. Lawrence River, the Great Lakes, vast grain producing arears, minerals in abundance, and the purest atmosphere to fight this great scourge. Tuberculosis cannot be cured, but the disease can be arrested and confined to that individual. There are many consumptive patients at Muskoka, who are unable to pay, and the speaker made an appeal for funds to carry on the work of crushing the scourge known as the "Great White Plague."

The lecture was illustrated with lantern views, dealing with the methods of arresting the disease, and views of the cottages and surroundings at the Muskoka Hospital.

FATE OF NEXT FORTY DAYS DECIDED BY ST. SWITHINS

Saturday was St. Swithin's Day, and according to an old legend, if it rained it will rain for forty days, and if it's fine it will be fine for forty days.

In the year 880 there lived at Winchester a Bishop named Swithin. After his death he was canonized a Saint, and the popular superstition attached to his name is expressed in the following ryme.

St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair
For forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

The origin of the popular belief that St. Swithin's Day—which falls on the fifteenth of July—affects the weather for forty days thereafter goes back to pagan times. St. Swithin was bishop of Winchester in the ninth century, but the superstition with which his name has since been connected was old before he was born. In England, as in other countries, the pagans believed that the weather in mid-July might be accepted as a sample of the kind that would be supplied during the remainder of the summer. Just because St. Swithin's festival happened to come at this time, the old weather lore was connected with his name, and fables were then invented to support the theory that Swithin had something to do with the rainfall. According to the old notion, if it rains there will be a wet period of forty days following, while fair weather means a "dry spell" of similar duration. Meteorological records lend no support to the St. Swithin Day legend, but at that it is about as accurate as any of the weather "signs" in which our ancestors firmly believed.

Little About Saint.

Very little is known of Saint Swithin's life, for his biographers constructed their "lives" long after his death, and there is hardly any mention of him in contemporary documents. Swithin was one of the two trusted counsellors of Egbert, King of the West Saxons, helping him in ecclesiastical matters, while Salstan of Sherborne was his chief adviser in secular business. He probably entrusted his son Ethelwulf and caused the saint to be elected in the Bishopric of Winchester in succession to Helmstan.

On his death-bed, Swithin begged that he should be buried outside the north wall of the Cathedral, where passersby should pass over his grave, and rain-drops from the eaves drop upon it. More than a century later (931) his body was taken, with great pomp, to a shrine within the new church erected by Bishop Ethelwulf. A number of miraculous cures took place and Swithin was canonized by popular acclamation. In 1093 his remains were again taken to the new church built by Bishop Walkelin. The shrine was destroyed and the relics scattered in 1538.

WITHOUT USE OF LEGS HE OPERATES AUTOMOBILE

Crippled Frenchman Invents Device For Motorists Who Have Lost Their Lower Limbs

B. C. Baudry has received an award from the Society for the Encouragement of National Industry in France for the invention of an arrangement by which a person whose legs have been paralyzed or amputated can operate an automobile. Beaudry's lower limbs are paralyzed, so that the spur of necessity drove him forward to find a contrivance that would serve in his place of his helpless legs. After months of work he succeeded and demonstrated his achievement by driving an automobile, and exercising complete control over it by means of his arrangement. It is expected that the invention will open up useful means of employment for some of those who lost their legs in the armies of France.

Two main points of Beaudry's arrangement are that the clutch is operated by means of a second wheel on the steering pillar which slides down for engaging the clutch and up for freeing it, and is also capable of graduated adjustment; control of the brake is by the back; what appears to be a back rest, at right angles to the seat and a few inches forward from the stationary back, is the brake connected by an ingenious system of rodes with the brake pedal.

FARM HELP PROVES TO BE VERY SCARCE

There is Just Now a Surprising Shortage of Labor in Canada

Due to the number of Canadian farmers who have enlisted to fight for the Empire as members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, there is a surprising shortage in labor, particularly on the farm, although commercial firms notice the difficulty.

Some time ago the Militia Department at Ottawa decided that as a concession to the farmers who enlist they would be allowed leave to work on their farms after having donned the khaki. Hundreds of farmers have tried to secure men and in the 156th Battalion 125 have made the request of Lieut.-Col. Bedell that they be allowed furlough to work on farms.

Soldiers Guarded Pay Car at Barrie Field Camp

About nine o'clock on Friday morning a big automobile turned into the camp grounds and drove quietly to the branch of the Bank of Montreal. The car could be distinguished only from many other cars on the road by the fact that soldiers with fixed bayonets guarded two large boxes of good, real Canadian five and ten dollar bills. The money was unloaded at the branch of the bank, and from that time until late in the afternoon a constant line of soldiers marched in one door and out the other, having their cheques changed into currency.

The immensity of the amount of money that is handled cannot be easily estimated, but fully half of the 5,000 soldiers on the heights have their cheques cashed at this branch on Friday.

FREAKS OF A GENIUS.

The Man Who Smashed Glasses In a London Tavern.

One day a bulky, tall, pale faced gentleman with bushy, restless eyebrows entered a London tavern. The waiter did not ask him for his order, but immediately brought him a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of ale. Having consumed his lunch, the guest sat upright in his chair for awhile, leaning his hands on a heavy walking cane and staring blankly at the opposite wall as if in a dream.

Of a sudden he gave a start. He seized the empty glass and dashed it to the floor with all his might, smashing it to atoms. He then reflected for a moment, laid a coin on the table, got up and left the inn without a word to any one.

After his departure another guest had the curiosity to ask the waiter whether the gentleman who had just gone out was not wrong in his head. Quoth the waiter:

"Oh, no, sir! That's nothink unusual with 'im, sir. 'Ee's broke maybe a 'undred glasses since 'e's been a-comin' to this 'ouse. 'E don't seem to know it when 'e does it. 'E just gits a-thinkin' and seems to git hangry at somethink e's thinkin' about. It's the great Lord Macaulay, sir."—St. James' Gazette.

What Love Is.

Love is a journey into a new country, and, like any other journey, its length depends entirely on what the country has to show. There should be woods with silent undergrowth, where comfort lives; bright rivers of vitality, clean cities, built on foundations of fine tradition and splendid with the towers of learning and religion; green fields, where simple thought and senses play like young cattle, and mountains so high that as one climbs one breathes quickening air not known to ordinary men—so high that by day the earth lies clear beneath like an open map, and by night the stars are just beyond arms' length above. In such a country a man can live forever.—Rebecca West in New Republic.

In Either Case.

After walking together from the station the two men paused at the corner of the street. Then said one of them, a newly married man:

"We are just close to my house. Won't you come in and have a bit of dinner?"

"Thank you!" said his friend hesitatingly. "But your wife"—

"Oh, that's all right!" the young husband quickly assured him. "If her cooking is a success she'll be pleased to have another to eat it, and if it's a failure—I shall!"

Filth of Erzerum.

Erzerum, the Armenian city, is, from the European point of view, one of the most undesirable places of residence upon earth. It stands more than 6,000 feet above the sea, and in winter the temperature falls to 20 degrees below zero, while in the passes by which it is approached rages the tipi, a terrible blizzard. But Erzerum is at its worst in summer owing to the appalling lack of sanitation. The people simply pile their refuse of all kinds on the pavement before their houses, which pavement has long become invisible, and mortality is so heavy that of twelve children, a common family, it is lucky if six survive. —London Chronicle.

Wearing Your Rubbers.

How to elude your wife when she insists that you positively must wear your rubbers when you go out:

First.—Tell her you positively will not do it. This will produce in her an attitude of resignation, and she will almost forgive you for not wearing them for giving her a chance to act the role of a martyr.

Second—Say that you never wore rubbers before you were married. She will then tell you that you were always sick, too, and will work herself into a jovial glow by thinking what good care she is taking of you.

Third.—Wear the rubbers to keep peace in the family.

LET UP PROTEINS.

Avoid "Spring Fever" by Cutting Down Fuel.

SUMMER DEMANDS LESS FOOD

Warm Weather Means You Can Replace Hot Soups, Thick Gravies, Heavy Sweets and Rich Pastries With Greens, Salads, Fish and Fruits.

It will be only a few days now before some one will be heard to complain of "that tired feeling" so inseparably connected with springtime. But why not try a little modern therapeutics and see if you cannot escape that tired feeling this year? The tired feeling comes from only one thing, and that is an overclogged system. To use the hackneyed but nevertheless illuminating comparison, the body may be likened to a steam heating plant which has been going at a pretty high pressure all winter, but now, when the weather becomes warmer, we must open the furnace door, shut down the drafts and keep the fire as low as possible if we do not want to be overheated. Similarly we must cut down the fuel supply of the body with the approach of warm weather. It is foolish to keep on stoking our engines when the higher temperature about us does not require that the body work so hard to keep warm.

The only way to keep cool and thus not feel tired is by avoiding those foods which create heat or build tissue too generously. First of these are all the fats and then the starches or sweets. Let us therefore avoid the alluring doughnut, the elusive croquette, the pastry tray and the meats with rich gravies, for foods that are fat or heavy should be shunned in the changing season, when the body most particularly cries out for foods that are cooling, refreshing and light. Avaunt with puddings, discard the pot roast, and in their places substitute salads, fish, fruits and the uncooked cereals. Give the body a chance to work off the clinkers of winter without choking it up with new fuel. Patronize nature's medicines and you won't need the doctor's. Drink plenty of water, lemon and fruit juice. Cut down your helping by a third and see if you don't feel as sprightly as a robin instead of logy and weak. Your spring tonic is on the vegetable stand, and your spring prescription is to eat less and drink more.

The group of foods called proteins, of which meat is most important, are those which, science tells us, build up body tissues. Now, the spring is not the season to build up tissue unless we have been overworked during winter; also the protein of meat is particularly likely to leave a residue of uric acid in the body. But our aim now is to house clean the system, and we want to avoid complicating the housecleaning by eating foods which will leave still more refuse. Elimination of meat almost entirely is one of the wisest plans for summer health. Cheese also is not an advisable diet for most.

SETTING HER CAP.

One of the New Bath Helmets That Are Ever So Smart.

Spanish modes influence even our bathing togs this spring. The cut shows an ultra cap of best quality red rubber, daintily embossed and rigged with a back flap that may be tied up on to the band when not actually protecting the ears.

READY TO DIVE.

The Vogue of Wicker.

Many of the wicker materials—reed, rattan, cane and bamboo—are of Asiatic origin, Singapore being the world market for them. Reeds are used both whole and split.

Bamboo, while not strictly wicker, is often used with rattan or with grass matting. Its chief merit is its cheapness.

Grass, too, is hardly wicker, but is used as an outer textual covering rather than as a material for construction, the base being some light wood like willow.

Baked Breast of Lamb.

Remove the skin, put the meat in a stewpan, cover with boiling water and simmer twenty-five minutes. Bone, dredge with flour, pepper and salt, roll and skewer into shape, add one cupful of the water in which the lamb was cooked and bake until tender and brown, basting frequently. Serve with cucumber sauce.

THIS IS THE 637TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

SEE GOOD PAVEMENTS WORTH WHILE— GO WEST

"Go West, young man," was Horace Greeley's advice when asked what one should do to ensure future prosperity. Such advice is now tendered to Aldermen of the city and others who desire to see the streets of their city present to visitors a respectable modern appearance, and not for the purpose suggested by the philosophical Greeley, but in order that those who are responsible for the proper government of the city may learn and realize from practical eye-seeing what good, clean, well constructed streets do in creating business, and in giving pleasure to visitors, who to a certain extent give life to a city.

The results of the policy adopted and acted upon by the enterprizing people of our western cities and towns, though comparatively young in years when compared with cities such as Belleville, has been the construction of permanent roads, not only in the different streets in their cities and towns, but also in the townships whose roads lead business men into the city to do their selling and buying. Merchants and others realize this fact and profit by it.

Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, Victoria and many of the smaller places in the west, from which the Publisher of The Intelligencer has just returned, have scarcely a street that has not been as substantially paved as is Front Street from Dundas to the Upper Bridge, thereby adding beauty to their cities and towns, and comfort to the people.

On reflection, students of municipal government will ask themselves the question, what have we in Belleville been doing during the past hundred years in road making and rendering the city, situated as it is on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, more attractive and beautiful than it is? The answer will be "nothing," except to annually crush tons of limestone, spread it upon the streets in the fall or following spring and, when ground to powder, scrape it up after being over-watered during the summer, cart it away and dump it into some receptical, repeating the same thing every year.

Is it not about time this useless, wasteful expenditure of money ceased and a system of constructing permanent roadway adopted?

Taxes, is the reply. How much greater would the interest be upon the amount expended in the building of permanent roads throughout the city, than the sums now expended annually in the quarrying, crushing, carting and repairing the streets with limestone, crushed and carted away in the fall? Not much, if any, more, we venture the opinion. Even if it did, the character of the city, and the comfort of the people, would more than compensate for the extra expenditure.

Let it not be forgotten that in making the calculation for the purpose of comparison, that the cost of the present old foggy system is borne by every tax-payer, while the expense of the construction of permanent highways would have to be met to a great extent by the imposition of a frontage tax upon those owning property fronting upon such roads. True, this would be an additional tax upon such owners of property, which would not come out of the general taxpayer to any appreciable extent, but it would be paid with pleasure.

Will our City Fathers grapple with this important subject? If so, let it be done at once, the people have been wallowing through mudholes long enough. Let us prove, though late in life as a city, that baby cities and towns, in comparison to Belleville's age, are not superior in enterprise.

Should we not as a city learn a lesson from the baby towns and cities in the west and begin to mend our ways by following the example set us in constructing our highways.

Monetary Times: One of the chief reasons for the increase in Eastern freight rates is the substantial gain in railroad expenses. The cost of fuel to operate 100 miles was 30 per cent. higher in 1914 than in 1907. While from 1899 to 1914 train-mile earnings increased 89 per cent., the cost of service per train-mile increased 112 per cent., notwithstanding economies attributable to locomotive power, lower rates, better loading, and increased traffic. Between 1910 and 1914 earnings increased 10.6 per cent, and expenses 12.4 per cent. Railway ties now cost 45 per cent. more. In the five years from 1909 to 1914 railroad salaries and wages increased 52 per cent. The Dominion Railway Board state that the increases which they permitted in freight rates are justifiable "entirely on the mere fact of the increases in railroad expenses and having regard to traffic of normal years." In short, the cost of living for the railroad has appreciated just as it has in other spheres.

Mr Lloyd George says: "We have crossed the watershed and now victory is beginning to flow in our direction." He also explains the reason why. "This change is due to the improvement in our equipment." Henceforth it is all marching down hill until we reach the banks of the Rhine—both banks. We may be delayed a little by the weight of our equipment, but that is much better than being delayed by the want of equipment. The Allies are in the same position of preparedness now that the Germans were in at the opening of the war. They are all magnificently equipped, and they have unlimited reserves of men. The Germans today are better off for equipment than for men. They have got the gun all right, but the man behind the gun is a little fellow not big enough to handle it. The war has put about three millions of their their troops out of business, and they are losing men at a rapid rate every day.

Montreal Herald: What a mass of exaggerated rubbish has been written about the arrival of a German submarine at an American port! Judging by some of the American papers, anybody would think it was the most outstanding feat of the war, while the accounts from journalists in Berlin would seem to indicate that the German people think the incident is going to turn the world upside down and win the war. We read that it was in Herr Lohmann's gigantic brain that the scheme for a line of submarines was hatched, that he is now constantly interrupted by a continuous stream of messengers bringing telegrams of congratulations, and that "the epochal event has created a tremendous sensation throughout Germany."

When peace is mentioned now, the British people put aside the idea for the one outstanding reason that the objects for which they entered the war have not yet been attained and, says Sir Edward Goschen, "it may be taken as certain that until there is a prospect of their attainment the British people will never tolerate peace, and that no British government who so much as ventured to discuss it would stand for a moment." As far as Britain is concerned, she is fighting to prevent the domination of Europe by ambitious militarism. The Allies have not yet impressed upon Germany the fact that she cannot dominate Europe. Until they have made Germany realize this truth there will be no peace.

The latest rumor at Ottawa makes Sir Robert Borden High Commissioner for Canada at London, and Sir Thomas White Prime Minister. We can understand why Borden wants to get out, but why does White want to get in? Why look for trouble —Toronto Star. The Star is troubled with a bothersome flea in its ear.

We all welcome the Shriners, because we all have a shrine somewhere. At heart we are all builders, and therefore all masons, whether we belong to the craft or not. The desire for building, the desire for growth, are the strongest and most persistent of all the longings of the human heart.—Toronto Star. And yet, true success depends largely upon what and how we are building.

This continual preaching of Money! Money! Money! is false and bad. It tends to destroy the pleasure and the content which men might get out of their lives. If it were certain that the possession of money brought these, then the preaching might be right, but the experience of centuries is that it does not, very often quite the reverse. We might do Shakespeare:—"There is thy gold."—Kingston Standard. If the Standard man is thinking of throwing away his bank deposit there is an opening for it up this way.

The Poets' Corner

A CREED.

Our churches are founded on dogmas
Of differing, varying kinds,
That proves how exacting and varied
Are the needs of enquiring minds.
And each church doth dwell on the future
Of heaven, of souls and of death,
But what are the needs of the present?
While taking our moment of breath.

The Master can be but the Father,
His children are seeking His face,
But so pitifully many are falling,
While free are salvation and grace.
To rise—but by crowding down others,
Then by struggles to be crowded down,
'Tis disconcerting watching the efforts,
Of city, country, village and town.
The lesson so hard of the learning,
As children we early should learn,
'Tis Sin doth destroy as a furnace,
The Devil seeks souls here to burn,
And the souls that cause souls here to suffer,
Ah, so deep and complex lives become,

But the Master shall judge at the reckoning,
When we as His children go home.
In the days of the infinite future,
And now are the scores paid to-day,
And again through the sufferings of others
Every soul that doth sin—it shall pay.
Oh, if we would learn that by living
Each hour of life doing right,
We would not fret at the hour of dying;
Our record would be clear and white.

And if we do right by the living,
And if we have learned how to live,
We shall smile when our time comes for going:
And the fate of our soul will not grieve.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER V.—Continued

There was an ominous gleam deep down in Nick Carter's gray eyes while he read these display lines. His lips twitched slightly, then drew firm and hard over his even white teeth. He did not then feel inclined to read the details of the judgment rendered, which he saw was printed verbatim; but he sauntered over to a chair near the throng of men gathered around Todd, and sat down to listen to their remarks and consider the entire case, as well as certain combinations of circumstances of which he alone was informed.

The remarks that fell upon his ears were about what he anticipated. Many were of a congratulatory nature. Some evinced the elation of the speaker, and his glowing expectancy of quick profits from an immediate rise in the price of the stock. Others were in derisive commiseration with Fenno over his overwhelming defeat, with predictions of his speedy failure, his ruin, his utter collapse and relegation into obscurity, as spectacularly as he had arisen, with comet-like swiftness, into the financial firmament a few years before.

Under his disguise, while he listened, the face of Nick Carter steadily grew more grave and austere. He was thinking of Fenno, of the work he had done, the chances he had taken, the sacrifices he had made—and Nick again was thinking of what he had said to him the previous night.

While his mind and ears were thus employed, his eyes were not idle. He watched the faces of the men who were talking, that of Todd, of McNulty,—the latter a coarse, red face, not in the inviting, the face of a man lacking the culture of those around him,—of a man whose outdoor vocation had not served to smooth his natural roughness.

Incidentally, too, Nick observed the coming and going of people who had no interest in these matters—dignified men, fashionably dressed women, young couples and old, some of these the guests of the house, some departing, others arriving.

Glancing up at an inlaid clock in the richly frescoed wall of the office enclosure, Nick saw that it was half-past four.

Passing directly in front of him, having just come in from the street, an elderly man hurried through the main office and disappeared into an adjoining corridor leading to the elevators.

Quick to notice personal characteristics, or anything out of the ordinary, Nick saw that this elderly man was nervously inclined, that his legs were a little unsteady, as well as his bowed figure. He evidently was a man approaching seventy, with gray hair and beard, and he carried in one hand a stout ebony cane, and in the other a black leather bag of medium size.

Nick Carter observed these few facts while the man was passing out of view, and his attention was then drawn to two ladies who came up the vestibule steps, near one side of the broad marble rail skirting which he was seated.

Both were fashionably dressed, evidently young women, yet both were veiled. They stood talking for several moments after entering the big office, drawing nearly into an alcove at one side of the entrance. One appeared to be giving advice or instructions to the other, who seemed to be somewhat agitated, yet who nodded as one might do who understood the remarks or instructions of her companion.

The latter presently turned sharply around and hurried out of the hotel.

The Joy of a Vacation may be turned to the sorrow that comes from indigestion. The battle with hotel menus is a losing one for the man with a weak stomach. Happy is the man who listens to the call of the wild—who goes fishing, hunting and canoeing—who takes with him Triscuit, the Shredded Whole Wheat wafer. Triscuit is made of the whole wheat, steam-cooked, shredded and baked. A tasty Summer snack, supplying the greatest amount of nutriment in smallest bulk. Delicious with butter, soft cheese or marmalades.

Made in Canada

The one that remained, a tall, slender girl clad in a navy-blue street costume, with a hat and veil to match, walked over to the broad marble counter on which the hotel register was lying and began to consult the book, turning the leaves backward, as if seeking the name of some guest not recently registered.

Her back was toward Nick while she stood at the counter, yet he could see that the gloved hand turned the leaves was trembling nervously. With one dainty foot, too, the girl was tapping rapidly on the tessellated floor, as if hardly able to suppress her feelings.

Presently one of the office clerks approached her, and she asked him a question, which he politely answered. Then this voiled girl in navy blue moved away, seeking the same corridor into which the elderly man had vanished about five minutes before.

Nick Carter observed these persons and incidents with only a cursory interest, no greater than that in many others that came within his view; but his trained mind retained all that he saw, and the impressions created at the time.

Ten minutes passed and brought no material change in the scenes being enacted around him.

The dusk of evening had begun to gather out of doors and the glare of electric lights filled the vast hotel.

Still the center of an animated group, Todd continued to receive congratulations of his friends and followers, now talking with one, now with another, but Nick Carter, though he listened constantly, caught no remark that seemed to warrant suspicions.

A hallboy, looking pale and excited, suddenly emerged from the corridor mentioned. He ran to the clerk's desk, said a few words, then rushed across the office to speak to a man with whom Nick was personally acquainted—James Holman, a private detective employed by the hotel management

"By Jove, that signifies something wrong!" thought Nick. "That chap's face is as white as his shirt front!"

As if in confirmation of these misgiving, Detective Holman at once hurried through the office and headed for the elevators.

Nick's first impulse was to intercept him and ask what had occurred. Recalling that he was in disguise, however, and thinking that the matter might be one in which he would not wish to interfere, he merely arose and followed him.

Upon entering the corridor, Nick saw Holman bolting into the elevator, when the clang of the iron door instantly followed, and then the upward rush of the car. Through the latticework of the car, however, he caught sight of the face of the man operating it, as white and horrified as if he had seen a ghost.

Now convinced that something very unusual had occurred, Nick did not delay to ring for an elevator, but dashed up a broad, thickly carpeted stairway that was constructed from floor to floor adjoining the elevator well. As he approached each floor, leaping up three stairs at each stride, he could easily see whether the car had stopped. Not until he had nearly reached the corridor of the fourth floor did he discover it.

At the same moment there fell upon his ears a single, piercing shriek, blood curdling in its intensity, instantly followed by the heavy thud of a fallen body.

In another moment Nick was in the broad, brightly lighted corridor, and rushing toward the open doorway of one of the nearer rooms—at the same time taking in with rapid glances the startling scene already presented to his view.

A woman, obviously a guest of the house, was hurriedly approaching the open door, coming in the opposite direction from the detective.

rurec- s.up ta sths-t amikfme kinfq..

Some ten feet from the door, in a dead faint on the corridor floor, still veiled and gloved, lay the young woman clad in navy blue, whom Nick had seen in the hotel office less than fifteen minutes before.

Detective Holman was just entering the open room, closely followed by the elevator man.

Nick Carter did not stop until he reached the threshold—but there he abruptly halted, petrified for an instant by the scene that met his gaze.

Held fast by two men, whom he evidently had been vainly resisting, with his imposing figure now drawn erect, with his hands and linen red with blood, and his hueless face drawn and distorted, stood Mr. Percival Fenno—a vivid picture of an assissin caught red-handed above his victim!

For upon the floor, nearly at his feet, was tretched the motionless figure of a man, from whom the last breath had just departed, the last of whose lifeblood was still ebbing from gaping gashes in his neck and breast, and whose sightless eyes still retained the dreadful horror of moments that were hardly passed.

Nick Carter recognized him instantly—

Judge Ormsby Packard, of the Court of Appeal.

Mr. Buddington's Fortune

It Was Bestowed Where It Would Do the Most Good

By ETHEL HOLMES

Young Mrs. Buddington was a model bride. Perhaps the word "enduring" would better describe her. She had married a man's man, and a man's man, especially when very young, is easily drawn from his home. Tom Buddington had scarcely returned from his wedding journey before he was waylaid by his former associates and induced to spend an evening with them, leaving his wife at home alone.

Tom knew this was all wrong. At midnight he succeeded in tearing himself away from his companions and went home. The house was dark and without sound. He put his latchkey into the lock very quietly and went upstairs softly. This was not because he feared to awaken his wife, for he didn't believe she was asleep. It was rather the result of a guilty conscience. He would have liked to hear a sweet voice say: "That you, dearie? Had a good time?" But he entered the dressing room next the bedroom without any greeting. Looking in where Bess was sleeping, by the light turned low he saw her peacefully slumbering.

Tom was both relieved and disappointed. He was pleased that his bride had not lain awake waiting for him, but he would have liked a brief chat with her before going to sleep himself. The lady was not asleep; she was pretending. She was a wise woman. If she cheerfully received her husband after his return from his bachelor friends she would have encourgged him to go to them again. If she upbraided him it would have a tendency to drive him away from her. Tom went to sleep ungreeted and unreproached. He resolved that he would not do so any more.

But Tom's effort to be good proved a failure. A young man, especially a man's man, needs relaxation. His error was not in this; it was in failing to provide his wife with relaxation also, or, rather, in forcing her to spend a considerable number of evenings alone. If it was not practicable to furnish her with company he should have remained with her, even if he did need relaxation, for she needed it as much as he did, probably more, since her place during the day was at home, and it was natural that in the evening she should need change of scene. Unfortunately Tom's income was not sufficient to enable them to go out to theaters or such other places of amusement.

"Just you wait, dearie," Tom said to his wife one evening when he was going out with a couple of men friends, "till Uncle Alec shuffles off this mortal coil, and I'll stop this going out without you. You shall have all the opera and the other amusements you like."

Now, Uncle Alec was a childless bachelor, who had worked and saved, never having married because he thought he couldn't afford to marry, till he had come to old age and a fortune without any one except his nephew to inherit his money. He had therefore pitched upon Tom for the purpose, and it was all settled that the young man was to have $100,000 after the old man's death.

Tom, being sensible of this prospective advantage, aimed to show his uncle proper attention. Since both were engaged during the day, the evening was the only time that the dutiful young man could pay his respects to the old gentleman. Bess understood that one night every week was to be devoted to this purpose. Tom went to see his uncle with tolerable regularity, and when he omitted to do so his wife understood that he had made the visit, though on such omissions Tom was enjoying his bachelor friends. Sometimes on his regular nights for visiting his uncle he would take Bess with him. She was a great favorite with the elder Buddington, which pleased Tom very much, for it strengthened the younger in the matter of his prospective fortune.

When the Buddingtons had been married a decade the wife did not need her husband's companionship so much as at first because she was taken up with several little children who had come to her in the meanwhile. Tom continued still to be a man's man and found a good deal to take him out. Indeed, there was more to absorb his attention every year. He dabbled in a small way in politics, having some taste for wire pulling, and was a member of various associations. He needed no excuses for going out evenings, for there was always a committee meeting or something of the kind that served the purpose. None of these engagements brought in any money, and the practical Mrs. Buddington was not made the better satisfied with her husband's absences by pecuniary gain.

But she did not complain. Tom said that it was the duty of a citizen to take an interest in the government of his country, his state or his city, as each needed his attention. There was no gainsaying this, and Bess was not the woman to interfere with whatever her husband considered his duty. She made the monthly stipend go as far as it was possible to make it go, patched the children's clothes and pinched in every way. The elder Buddington might have helped the family, but men who devote their lives to piling up money usually do their giving in a way that will afford a return, even if that return is merely a higher standing in the community in which they live. They are not likely to hide their lights under a bushel. Buddington senior held on to every cent he had and only arranged for the disposition of his fortune after his death because he could not take it with him.

But for this reason and because it had absorbed his whole life he was much concerned as to its going where he wished to have it go when he could no longer use it himself.

One evening he sent for Tom to come and see him. Tom was away from home and had told his wife that he was going to a meeting of householders of his ward to select a candidate for councilman. Bess sent word to Mr. Buddington to that effect, giving the place of the committee meeting. He telephoned there and was told that Tom had just left for his club. Mr. Buddington had not been aware that his nephew was a member of a club. He had never considered that he could afford such a luxury himself and could not see how Tom with his limited income and a family could do so. The old gentleman did not send to the club for Tom, but he did send to his home after 11 o'clock for him, to learn that his nephew had not yet returned.

When Tom came in at 1 o'clock in the morning and learned that his uncle had sent for him he was troubled. He knew the old gentleman's proclivities well and had not informed him of any expense that he incurred that his uncle would consider he should avoid. He went to see his uncle the next evening, but the old man merely said that he had wanted him to witness an important document and, not reaching him, had called in some one else.

This lulled Tom's fears, and he did not know that the wily old man, through parties unknown to him or Bess, had made inquiries which had put him in possession of the situation of affairs in their household. He also by similar indirect means learned that Tom was inclined to take an interest in unprofitable affairs and spent very little of his time at home. But the uncle made no mention to any one of his discoveries. He did a job of thinking over the matter and came to some conclusions that would have caused his nephew to open his eyes had he been aware of the fact.

For awhile after his uncle had sent for him—not to find him—Tom was uneasy about going out. But his uneasiness did not last long. His uncle's manner was the same that it had been, and there was no indication that there had been any unfavorable turn. But Bess, who had been for a long while striving to make ends meet, had been unable to do so, and the family financial affairs were on the ragged edge. Bess had been ill on several occasions, and a doctor's bill to a considerable amount had accumulated.

Perhaps if they had applied to Mr. Buddington he might have helped them out. Perhaps he might have told them that if they had lived within their income they would have provided for the doctor's bills as they occurred. But they did not dare inform the old man of their condition. He was getting feeble and might drop off any day. If they could worry along till he had passed away they could pay all their bills a hundred times over. So they concluded to endure the situation. But Tom as his uncle's feebleness increased rather increased than diminished his personal expenditures, banking on his soon possessing a fortune.

When Mr. Buddington passed from earth he did so without warning. He died so suddenly that his nephew did not have time to reach him to bid him goodby and receive his blessing. When he reached the house where the rich man lay he received something that he did not appreciate as he would have appreciated a blessing. The housekeeper handed him a note written by the deceased shortly before his death, which read as follows:

> My Dear Nephew—I have led you to believe that at my death you would inherit what I have been a lifetime in accumulating. During the last few years I have concluded that you are not a safe person to be intrusted with a fortune. I have therefore decided to place my estate in other hands. Don't feel hard toward me for this. I have always been very fond of you and am fond of you still. Goodby.
> Your affectionate UNCLE.

Tom staggered under the blow. His wife, who was with him and read the letter over his shoulder, took him in her arms. She was too disappointed to speak encouragingly to him, but spoke no word of reproach. Sadly they left the house, the wife looking the future in the face resolutely, the husband limp as a cloth.

When the will was opened Tom and his wife were present more out of curiosity than anything else, though they thought that some memento might be left them. The will was very short, reading as follows:

"I give and bequeath to Elizabeth Buddington, wife of my nephew, Thomas R. Buddington, all my property, real and personal."

Tom looked at Bess, and Bess looked at Tom. Then the woman took the man's hand in hers, and what she felt was indicated by a pressure.

It was evident that Mr. Buddington had noted the difference between the two—that the wife was fitted to dispense an income and that the husband was not. During the years that they enjoyed their inheritance Bess conscientiously carried out the intent of the [illegible] and resisted all attempts of her husband to induce her to turn the fortune over to him or to permit him to have anything to say in its management or the disposition of the income.

But she was very liberal with him not grudging him any reasonable sum, making sure, however, that it was spent for a legitimate purpose.

A LONG, NARROW SWORD.

Verdun as a Man's Name Appears in Shakespeare.

The name Verdun signifies "a long, narrow sword." Shakespeare mentions the "Lord Verdun of Alton" in Act 4, Scene 7, of the first part of "King Henry VI." where Sir William comes "to know what prisoners thou hast taken and to survey the bodies of the dead." He asks:

Where is the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?
Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,
The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the noble order of St George,
Worthy St. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
Great mareschal to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France?

And to this Shakespeare has the Maid of Orleans respond after this fashion:

Here is silly, stately style, indeed!
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this,
Him, that thou magnifiest with all these titles,
Stinking and flyblown, lies here at our feet.

Well Congratulated.

Commodore Tyrwhitt, who commanded the cruisers and destroyers in the recent raid on the German Zeppelin base, commanded the Arethusa when the attack was made on Heligoland Bight in the first month of the war. After that battle he got a telegram of congratulation from 2,081 miners which cost that number of pence.

SENDING A MAN BY MAIL.

It is Quite Possible Under British Parcel Post Rules.

The parcel post has made its usefulness felt in many ways, unexpected as well as foreseen. But the English parcel post does one surprising thing that has not yet been introduced into our own system.

An Englishman wished to reach a customer living in a remote part of Balham, one of the suburbs of London, and it was very necessary that he find him quickly. Knowing nothing of the district, he called at the general post-office at St. Martin's-le-Grand to consult a directory. On explaining his case to a clerk he was amazed to learn that he could be sent to the address by parcel post by paying a fee of threepence a mile.

The gentleman had never heard of such a thing, and it is said that very few persons in England know that it can be done. He was placed in charge of a messenger who was familiar with all parts of the city and was soon on his way. The boy carried a printed slip on which was written a description of the "parcel" in charge under the heading "Article Required to Be Delivered," and before leaving the customer's house both the customer and the gentleman had to put their signatures on the paper.

The limit in weight for anything delivered by parcel post in England is generally understood to be eleven pounds, but there is one clause that reads, "A person may be conducted by express messenger to any address on payment of the mileage fee."

Objections to Seriousness.

If everybody were able to see clearly, think straight and reach sound conclusions there could be no objection to seriousness except its mortal monotonousness. But, inasmuch as about 90 per cent of what serious people think and know and say is incorrect, the evil effect upon the social body is tremendous. It may be, probably is, equally true that 90 per cent of what nonserious people think and know and say is incorrect, but as nobody takes them seriously, no harm is done to the community, and these nonserious ones have at least added to the sum total of enjoyment. The people who take themselves seriously ought to be carefully selected by law and their number rigidly limited.—Life.

The Spitting Snake.

A snake found in Africa is called the spitting snake by the Boers. It is between two and three feet long and is especially bold and active, readily attacking every one who approaches it. In confinement it is very savage, opening its mouth and ejecting its fangs, from which the poison may be often observed to drop and even sometimes to be forcibly ejected, whence the name given it by the Boers.

LIKE A TINY SOLAR SYSTEM.

Power and Possibilities That Are Locked In an Atom.

The most generally accepted theory about the structure of the atom—which is no longer regarded as the ultimate indivisible particle of any element, as this of course could have no structure—is that it is a positively charged nucleus surrounded by a system of electrons which are kept together by attractive forces from the nucleus. Thus it becomes a sort of infinitestimally small solar system.

In an article in the General Electric Review Dr. Saul Dushman draws the following conclusions from a discuscussion of the laws that govern the atoms of the several elements:

"Considering the relationships exhibited by the different radioactive elements, one realizes that the dream of the alchemists may not have been as fatuous as has appeared until recently. The concept of an absolutely stable atom must be discarded once for all, and its place is taken by this miniature solar system, as it were, consisting of a central nucleus and one or more rings of electrons.

"But the nucleus itself is apparently the seat of immense forces, and in spite of its exceedingly infinitesimal dimensions it contains both alpha particles and electrons. Once in awhile the nucleus of one of the atoms will spontaneously disintegrate and expel an alpha or beta particle. A new element has been born. What causes these transformations? Can they be controlled? These are questions which only the future can answer. But if we had it in our power to remove two alpha particles from the atom of bismuth or any of its isotropes, not only would the dream of the alchemists be realized, but man would be in possession of such intensely powerful sources of energy that all our coal mines, water powers and explosives would become insignificant by comparison."

A Fine Judge of Eggs.

The ichneumon is an animal that every housewife should possess. There is no finer judge of eggs in existence. The ichneumon, in fact, makes a study of eggs all his life, and he is not particular whether they are hen's eggs or turtle's eggs so long as they are eggs. It is impossible to deceive the animal with regard to their freshness. If a dozen fresh and partly fresh eggs are mixed up together the wily little animal will pick out the fresh ones with a certainty and quickness that are positively amazing. At the zoo he is provided only with the genuine newly laid. He would have to be in a very bad way before touching an egg that was "shop laid."

Man and the Mouse.

Did you ever see a mouse in a revolving cylindrical trap trying to climb up what it thought was an endless wire ladder? Well, that is a picture of man in the universe, and, like the mouse, it is his own active desire that keeps the whirling cylinder forever in motion.

Easily Explained.

"Jones has been made manager of his company. How do you account for his good luck?"

"I don't know, but I presume the fact that he's been working eighteen hours a day for several years has had something to do with it."

Wrong Diagnosis.

"Get my kit quick," excitedly boomed the doctor. "Some fellow telephones in a dying voice that he can't live without me."

"Just a moment," interposed his wife. "That call is for daughter, dear."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Matrimony.

Matrimony is like freemasonry—no one knows the secret until he is initiated. It is like an eel trap—very easy to get into, but hard to get out of. It is in its first stage like a wind that fans the flame of love, but too much fanning blows it all out. It is everything contradictory, sweet or bitter, just as it is taken. In short it is—

Like a glaring light
Placed in a window on a summer's night,
Alluring all the insects of the air
To come and singe their pretty winglets there.
Those who are out butt heads against the pane;
Those who are in butt to get out again.

A Widow at Nine.

Marriage at the age of thirteen, as in the case of a woman who has just died at Shoreditch, would not have been regarded as extraordinary in the seventeenth century. In those days children of noble families, particularly wards in chancery, were frequently wedded at the age of nine and sometimes even at five. Little Moll Villiers, the Duke of Buckingham's daughter, was not merely a wife, but a widow, at nine, and we read of her romping in the garden and climbing cherry trees in her widow's veil. In almost every instance, however, such marriages were in name only, and the little wives were allowed to reach their teens before taking up the burdens of wedded life.—London Telegraph.

Office Ornaments.

"Yes, ma'am," commented the office factotum whom long tenure of office had made a bit censorious, "some of these here young ladies about this office does precious little work. They seems to think they's intended for office ornaments."

Then, seeing a shade cross the lady manager's face, he hastened to add reassuringly, "But, ma'am, you ain't no ornament."

Study of Synonyms.

Little Dulcie was asked by her teacher to define the word "whimsical." "It means 'odd,'" she replied. "And now," the teacher went on, "please write a sentence containing the word properly used."

Hesitatingly the little ten-year-old took up a pen and after a moment's thought wrote, "There are two kinds of numbers—whimsical and even."

The Similarity.

"Lucky at cards, unlucky at love," quoted the wise guy.

"Well, either is simply a case of holding hands," said the simple mug.

SCENTING A CRIME

How a Russian Police Inspector Formulated a Theory.

WORKING UP A MURDER CASE.

He Made All the Known Facts in the Case Fit Into Each Other Perfectly and Then Proceeded to Demonstrate His Accuracy of Deduction.

We are not encouraged to believe that the Russian police inspector is the equal of the trained French official if Anton Chekhoff's story of the deductive method in Russia is illustrative.

One morning a young man hurried into the office of an inspector of police and reported that his master, an officer of the guard who had been separated from his wife and lived alone, had been murdered. He was greatly excited. The inspector went with him at once to the scene of the tragedy.

When he arrived at the house he found the door to the officer's bedroom locked, the key on the inside. The servants, unable to awake their master, had concluded that he was dead. The inspector found the door uninjured. He had it forced open. The bed had been tossed about, the pillows on the floor. On a table near the bed was the officer's watch and some silver coins. The officer and his clothing were gone except for a single boot that lay on the floor. The inspector examined the room carefully. The only thing he found was a partly burned safety match. It was known that the officer did not smoke and used only sulphur matches for his candles. He examined the garden below the window. The grass and some bushes had been trampled. He found a piece of cotton on some twigs and some fine threads of dark blue wool. At some distance from the window, in the garden under a bush, he found the second top boot.

The inspector came to the conclusion from the evidences, that the man had been strangled and his body taken out through the window.

The fact that the watch and money were undisturbed showed that the purpose of the crime was not robbery. The safety match indicated that some person above the ordinary was connected with the affair, since peasants or common servants would have only sulphur matches. The fact that one boot remained in the room made the inspector believe that the guardsman had been killed while he was undressing. The finding of the other boot in the garden indicated that this one had been partly removed and had fallen off while the body was being carried away.

The inspector in his report reconstructed the crime: On the evening in question the guardsman, who had been on a prolonged debauch, went to his room drunk. As he sat on his bed, taking off one of his boots, he had been attacked and smothered with the pillow. During the struggle the candle was knocked over and afterward one of the assassins relighted it, striking a safety match. When the man was dead his body had been taken out through the window and carried across the garden. As it passed the lilac bush the remaining boot, partly removed by the man before he was attacked, dropped off.

The inspector, having arrived at this deduction, determined to locate the safety match. He went to all the shops in every direction, but not one of them carried in its stock such a thing as a box of safety matches. Finally, at some distance from the scene of the tragedy, he found a shopkeeper who had a single pack of such matches. It was a broken pack, with one box missing. The shopkeeper remembered precisely who had purchased this missing box. It was the wife of the guardsman, a big, masculine woman of unusual physical strength. She lived near the apartment in which the guardsman had been murdered. It was now night, but the inspector went at once to the woman and charged her with the murder of her husband.

"I know all about it," he said. "Take me at once to the place where you have concealed your husband!"

She got a key from a nail on the wall and went out into the courtyard. The inspector followed. They finally reached a little house at the end of the garden. The woman unlocked the door and they entered. By the light of a candle the inspector saw the long body of a man lying motionless on a bed in the corner of the room. He approached to examine the murdered body.

But here his deductions went to pieces. The supposed dead man sat up, and the explanation of all the tragic incidents appeared. The guardsman was going to bed every night drunk. His wife heard of it and went across the garden to his window to remonstrate with him. He put the window up and, seeing who it was, threw his boot at her. She was a resolute woman in masculine efficiency. She climbed in through the window, thrashed the drunken guardsman soundly, dragged him across the garden and locked him up in the bathhouse, where she determined to keep him until he should be sober. He had been thus a prisoner for one day, while with swift deductions the inspector had worked out his complicated murder.—Melville Davisson Post in Saturday Evening Post.

A Museum Sensation.

There was a sensational incident in the British museum on Feb. 7, 1845—the disastrous attack by a visitor on the priceless Barberini vase, belonging to the Duke of Portland. As there was no law then for the punishment of such an act of vandalism, a fine of £5 (the value of the glass case) could only be imposed. But it led to the passing of an act for the protection of works of art from similar danger.—London Standard.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM LESLIE YEREX

Whitely Camp, June 28th,

Dear Mother:—

I just posted a letter to you yesterday but as I just received six letters from Canada (the first I've had for nearly a month) I'm feeling pretty well so will write again. I just arrived back in camp after a six day leave, and am back at work once more. I don't remember what I said in my last letter so I will tell you about my trip. A chum of mine and I left camp about 4.40 Monday afternoon, arriving in London about 6.40 where we spent the night at the Union Jack Club, a large club devoted entirely to men in uniform, where you can get every convenience you could get in a first class hotel, only at a more moderate price. The next day we went to Gravesend, a nice town about 20 miles from London at the mouth of the Thames. We arrived back in London late in the afternoon, had tea there, went across the city to Paddington station and at 9.15 p.m. boarded the through train to Wales, a distance of about 160 miles to the town where we were going. We passed through some swell scenery and saw some of the famous Welsh coal mines on the way. Wales is very hilly and much wooded, and the towns and villages are very old-fashioned, therefore it is a very pretty country to see. At one point of our journey the railroad goes through a tunnel under a river and under the ground for about seven miles. The village we stopped at is called "Llanybyther" I don't know if you can pronounce it or not. I had to practise for about an hour before I could say it right. My chum had friends there, and we spent the day with them and the next day we went to a little town on the coast called Aberayron, passing through a fairly large town called Lampeter on the way. Aberayron is just like the little old-fashioned fishing villages you see sometimes in the movies. When we were there the tide was out and the beach was covered with seaweed and shells of all description. We walked along the coast through two or three little villages and then went back to Llangbyther. We left there about 5.15 that afternoon arriving in London at 3.30 next morning. We went to a nearby Y.M.C.A. and had lunch, then went to bed for a couple of hours. There are Y.M.C.A. men at all the stations watching for men in khaki. to direct them to the Y. M. C. A. rooms. We were all through Hyde Park, and it covers some miles of ground. In the evening we went to the "Gaiety Theatre" and saw (To-night is the Night) it is some show with a cast of about 200 people. The rest of our stay in London we spent in wandering around the Strand, Luster and Trafalagar Squares and Piccadilly. I guess I told you about meeting Billy Hudson on the Strand. He is looking fine, and is fat as can be. London is a pretty fair village, although its pretty dark. We visited Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral, they are worth seeing too. I must close now as I have used up nearly all my paper. We are having fairly decent weather now. I received my badge as a qualified gunlayer to-day.

LES.

P. S.—All the Belleville boys are O. K.

FROM TOM VANCE

Belgium, June 27th.

Dear Father, Mother and all:—Just a few lines in answer to your most welcome letter, which arrived yesterday. I am glad to hear you are all well, as this leaves me the same, only a cold, and you know that is a usual thing for me. Sergeant Hutchinson, who came from Belleville with us is wounded, and a fellow by the name of Frank Barnum, is back in Blighty again, so there are not many of the old Belleville lads here now. I hear Will Styles has gone home on a month's pass.

I have been in the firing line longer than I was before, and I am thankful I have not been touched yet. I would very much like to be home and get a good home-made meal again. I have been away from home so long I forget what one tastes like. Hope the crops are good this year. Give my love to all the family, and answer soon.

Your loving son,
TOM VANCE.

HUMBLE PIE

By Huth Cameron

It takes a good deal of courage to apologize. Many otherwise good and brave people do not seem to have the courage to own that they were wrong. I have known people—men especially. I think this is particularly a masculine fault—who would do almost anything rather than own in so many words that they have been wrong. They would try to make up to you by being unusually kind and thoughtful, but when it came to saying, "I was wrong; I am sorry,' 'there they absolutely balked.

There Are Other People Who Depend Too Much On Apologies.

Of course there is another type of person who seems to think it doesn't matter what he does if he apologizes for it afterwards. Over and over again he will offend in the same way and then expect you to freely forgive him when he says he is sorry, though you know all the time the same thing will happen again.

People like this have only themselves to blame when penitence wears thin and their apologies are ungraciously received. They know how they can earn a more gracious response.

But to the person who is apologizing for an offense that one has no reason to think will be repeated, one owes a decent gracious response for one's own sake. To respond ungraciously is to prove one's self a boor.

Humble pie is the most disagreeable eating in the world. Be sympathetic enough to help it down with the relish of your gracious reception.

Do you know how to accept an apology graciously and generously?

The other day I happened to hear one woman apologizing to another for an unkind thing she had done. She didn't try to excuse herself, she said bravely and simply that she had done an unkind thing and was sorry.

And what do you suppose the other woman answered?

"So am I."

Just that. Nothing to soften it, or to show that she appreciated the other's penitence.

It was like a tub of cold water emptied on one's head. I fairly gasped in sympathy.

She Won't Apologize Very Soon Again.

The woman who had apologized turned scarlet and shut her lips tightly together. I doubt if she will be to blame.

On another occasion I heard a mother whose daughter had come to her and, with what was evidently a painful effort, said she was very sorry she had been naughty, answer coldly, "That does no good now."

That Was a Brutal Answer.

What a cruel answer to give a child! True, apologies cannot wipe out the consequences of a wrong, but they at least put one on record as regretting it and meaning to try to do better the next time.

The photoplay which is in 5 parts and features, Samuel Ryan and Ruth Blair, will be exhibited along with "Clothes Do Not Make The Man," a highly amusing Edison comedy.

A WOMAN'S PROBLEM AT PALACE TO-NIGHT

The celebrated Universal emotional star, Cleo Madison, is featured in "Her Bitter Cup," a 5-part Red Feather Photoplay, which will be shown at the Palace Theatre to-night and Tuesday, Matinee and night. Her Bitter Cup, is the story of a woman's sacrifice for her people—the poor and lowly. It contains thrilling and intensely gripping and striking scenes, shows a rescue from a burning factory, and the realistic dream of a dope fiend wherein he crucifies the woman he loves. This last is one of the most daring scenes ever filmed. It has been handled in a big and reverential way. The picture was directed by Cleo Madison, who also plays the leading role, and is an unusually distinctive sort of photoplay. In addition to the above 5-part offering, 3 new and sparkling comedies will also be exhibited.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir—I would like to inquire through your columns why the park in the west side of the river is receiving no attention this year. The grass has not been cut, no seats have been placed thereon, and the stones from the sewer have not been removed. Surely the Council is displaying negligence and indifference, in allowing this beauty spot, which former Councils worked so hard to bring to perfection, to be neglected in this manner.

Wedding Bells

DILLON—DONOGHUE

A very pleasing wedding was solemnized at St. Michael's Church at 8.30 this morning by the Rev. Father Hyland, assisted by Jesuit Father Lally, when Nellie Helen, second daughter of Michael Donoghue was united in marriage to J. M. Dillon of Toronto. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk crepe de chine trimmed with Irish lace with picture hat to match, carrying pink and white roses. She was assisted by Miss Maggie Latchford, who wore white georgetta crepe with black lace hat who also carried pink and white roses. The groom was assisted by his brother, Joseph Dillon of Toronto.

After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the bride's residence, Octavia street, where a tasty repast was partaken of.

The happy couple left on the flyer for Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. On their return they will take up their residence in Toronto. Their many friends wish for them a long and happy wedded life.

Mrs. Chamberlain To Wed Rector

Statesman's Widow Engaged to Canon Carnegie of Saint Margaret's Westminister

LONDON, July 15.—It has been announced that Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, widow of the British statesman, had become engaged to Canon William Hartley Carnegie, rector of St. Margaret's, Westminster. Mr. Carnegie is 56, a man of fine presence and with a good record of social work. The son of a Scotsman, he was born at Terenure, near Dublin. From Magdalen, Oxford, he went to Pudsey, Yorkshire, as a curate, afterward becoming rector of Great Witney, Worcestershire.

In 1892 he married a daughter of Sir Thomas Crawley Bolvey, Bart., of Flaxey Abbey, Gloucester, but was left a widower in 1901. Becoming rector of the Cathedral Church of St. Philip, Birmingham, he not only did a great deal to improve the aesthetic attributes of the edifice, but also did fine educational work among the poor children of the city, and naturally he came much in contact with the Chamberlain family during his nine years at Birmingham.

In 1914 he succeeded Canon Hensley Henson as rector of St. Margaret's, Westminster, which lately quite obscured the faded glories of St. George's, Hanover Square, as the church for society and fashionable weddings. May last, on the death of Archdeacon Wilberforce, he was appointed to the honored post of Chaplain to the House of Commons.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Chamberlain was Miss Mary Endicott, of Massachusetts, daughter of the late William C. Endicott, Secretary of War in President Cleveland's Cabinet.

Mrs. Chamberlain came to America in May of this year after an absence of seventeen years, to spend several weeks with her family in Boston. She sailed from New York on June 3 on the steamship St. Paul of the American Line.

She married Joseph Chamberlain when he was Colonial Secretary under the late Marquis of Salisbury. She enjoys the distinction of being the only woman of American birth to receive the offer of a British Earldom in her own right, and who declined the honor. It was offered her by King George after her husband's death, both in recognition of his services to England and of the devotion with which she nursed him through his last illness. She declined the peerage, she said, because her husband had repeatedly refused the offer of it from Queen Victoria.

Canadian Press Special.

The enemy were driven out of several strongly defended points.

Lightning Kills Three Horses

W. J. Darling, of Smith, Lost a Valuable Team

PETERBOROUGH, July 17.—The electric storm that swept over Peterborough yesterday did considerable damage to the country in the neighborhood of Pigeon Lake, Chemong and the outlying parts of Smith. Trees were struck and shattered but fortunately no buildings were burned.

The principal loss was in live stock which were pasturing in the ranches and fields.

W. J. Darling, of Smith, as soon as the storm was over, went out to the field where his stock was grazing and found a valuable team of horses lying dead.

At a ranch near the Indian Village at Chemong, where nearly 20 horses were on pasture, the animals became terrified at the first severe thunderclaps and lightning. They all rushed towards the house and when about 30 feet from the structure, another flash occurred and three horses fell dead. The horses belonged to R. D. Tobico, D. Jacobs and Thomas Quinquick, all of the Indian Village.

SAW AEROPLANE

Some State That It Was Flying a German Flag

HAMILTON, July 17.—On Sunday morning about 6 o'clock the people in the west end were disturbed from their slumbers by hearing the whir of machinery. Upon investigating they found it to be an aeroplane which was flying directly overhead in a southeast direction. A few people who saw it say that it appeared to have a German flag; others say it had a British flag on it.

GLOOM SAID TO RULE AMONG GERMAN PEOPLE

The Latest Greatest achievements by The Anglo-French Armies on The Somme Have Caused Worrisome Concern in Interior of Germany—Result is a Manifestation of Public Dismay

ROTTERDAM, July 18.—(Special.)—To say there is a panic in Germany would be an exaggeration, but it is well within the truth to describe the present feeling as one of deepest gloom.

I am assurred that a few days ago there was hardly a man in Berlin who believed that a serious military effort was to be made by Britain.

The present attitude of the German people is as if a new enemy had entered the field against them. Their most trusted commentators talked for months about Britain's paper army. Events have now shown the German public that the paper army has materialized into a great host of trained soldiers, who are driving their own best troops from positions they believed impregnable.

The result is that there is manifestation of public dismay that is giving the Government the gravest concern. In Berlin they are talking, for the first time, of the possibility of their iron wall in the west being broken. The vast majority of the German people long ago gave up any hope of conquest and any desire for anything further than a speedy peace. They believed, in the termination of the war on the ground that the allies would exert their maximum strength in an attempt would fail and that they then would be prepared to negotiate a compromise peace. The possibility of the allies' efforts succeeding had never been contemplated until last week, when the British captured the second line positions.

PUTTING "INVALID PORT" TO PROHIBITION TEST

Important Case in Police Court is Adjourned For Eight Days

TORONTO, July 18.—(Special.)—An important prosecution, which puts invalid port wine to the test, has been brought up in the Police Court at the instance of the Ontario License Board. Three breaches of the patent medicine act are being pressed against Ernest J. Morrow. In the first case it was alleged that he sold Dr. Kilborn's invalid port wine, which, it was claimed did not contain sufficient medication to prevent its use as an alcoholic beverage.

Testimony was given to the effect that two bottles of the wine had been purchased for $3, and had been tested by four gentlemen, who were of the opinion that the wine was not medicated, but tasted the same as ordinary wine.

A Government analyst stated that he had made an examination of one of the bottles purchased, and had found that it contained 18.36 per cent. proof spirits. He did not examine the sample for its other ingredients.

At the request of Mr. L. Heyd, K.C., who represented Morrow, the case adjourned until the 25th. Mr. Eudo Saunders, K.C., appeared on behalf of the License Board.

Influential Quarters of Russia Think Allies Willing

LONDON, July 15.—According to the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post, there is a strong feeling, in many influential quarters in Russia that if Austria again throws out feelers for a separate peace they should be welcomed by the Allies, none of whom feels toward Austria as they all feel toward Germany.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Mail learns that about a quarter of a million Germans have been detached from the other fronts to try to stop General Brussiloff's advance.

Was it the Ross rifle controversy that caused the improvements in the Lee-Enfield?

GRIP OF GENERAL HAIG IS GRADUALLY FIRMER

British Drive Deeper into German Front — Latest Advance Wins Enemy Defences For 1,500 Yards — Total Prisoners Taken Since July 1, 10,968, Besides a Large Number of Guns

LONDON, July 18.—(Special.)—In a driving storm, which is still sweeping across the battlefield, the British have driven their Albert salient deeper into the German front, and to-night are battering against the crest of the great plateau across which the two weeks' battle has been fought. On this high ground stretch the German third system of defences, which are immensely strong. The British heavy batteries, brought up with tremendous difficulty across the marshy terrain, have opened a powerful fire against the Teuton positions.

General Sir Douglas Haig announced last night that since July 1 a total of 189 German officers and 10,779 men have been made prisoners. A large number of guns have also been captured.

During the stormy night the British brought a sharp halt to the counter-offensive, which the Germans were developing, by a strong blow in the sector northwest of Bazentin-le-Petit Forest. After an artillery bombardment, which cut the wire before the rain-filled trenches of the Germans, the British advanced to the attack on a mile front. Across the storm-swept terrain, which in places was little more than a bog, the British troops moved forward at the double quick, and on practically the whole front of attack seized the positions which were their objective. The German trenches were carried for a distance of 1,500 yards. This success gave the British complete control of the German second line in this region.

At about the same time another strong blow was struck east of Longueval, were the strongly-fortified Waterlot Farm, in reality a small hamlet, fell into British hands. During the night also the last German was [illegible] from Ovillers and La Boiselle, villages on the British left flank, where for ten days the fighting had been without cessation.

SHARKS UNDISPUTED MASTERS OF THE ATLANTIC OCEAN

NEW YORK, July 18.—(Special.)—Sharks are the undisputed masters of the Atlantic coast. The Federal Government to-day abandoned its proposed campaign of extermination by the coast guard along the New Jersey branches.

The enemy were simply too numerous. The Government's marine experts acknowledge that the coast is in a state of blockade by living submarines.

Bathers must look out for their own safety. Torpedo-net barriers are being installed wherever there are bathing houses on ocean or bay.

The largest specimen to be captured since the scare began was a 15-foot hammerhead shark hooked by the sailors of the battleship Texas while on her way to Newport, R.I. It took eight sailors to haul him on board.

Long Island Sound has been invaded, and three sharks of man-eating size were harphooned and brought ashore near a crowd of bathers at Greenport, L.I., to-day. Two measured over two feet and the other over seven feet long. They had companions, but these disappeared when the harpooners sailed out in a dory.

"Your son went up on patrol duty and met eight hostile machines coming over the lines. He attacked, and against such heavy odds he was, of course, badly handicapped. Eye-witnesses say they watched the gallant act of a British aeroplane attacking eight hostile machines. Your son was shot in the head, so all must have been over instantly. He died a hero's death."

ENEMY FAILS TO GET FOOTING SPITE OF PERSISTENT ATTACKS

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 18.—(Afternoon statement.)—South of the Commen the Germans attacked yesterday evening and last night our positions from the village of Biaches as far as La Maisonnette and not withstanding repeated efforts, which cost them heavy losses, they were not able to obtain possession of La Misonette. German detachments spread along the canal on the east side of Biaches, where the fighting continues.

On the left bank of Meuse (Verdun front) a surprise attack against our trenches at Hill No. 304 was repulsed by our fire. On the right bank of the river the night was marked by fighting with grenades in the vicinity of the Chapel of Sainte Fine and west of Fleury. The enemy was repulsed everywhere. There was active artillery fighting in the region of La Laufee and Chenois.

On the remainder of the front calm prevailed through the night.

In order to have good milk during this hot weather, both the producer and the consumer must keep the product in a cool place. With the exception of a few cases the producer in above samples must have taken proper care. We gathered the samples from the wagons from 6 to 8 o'clock this morning and placed them in a large open vessel with iced water, and with the few exceptions mentioned the milk was in excellent condition at 5 p.m.

A large number of complaints have been coming in that the milk sours quickly after delivered. In my opinion the consumers allow it to spoil by keeping in warm storage. Milk must be kept below 65 deg. F., either in a cool cellar or in a refrigerator or ice box or it will spoil in a few hours during this hot weather.

I would strongly advise the milkmen to stop mixing the night's and morning's milk until the warm milk is cold, at least to 65 deg. F. Special care must be taken to bring all milk up to standard quality. We will test again in the near future.

Bottles should be thoroughly scalded every day before filling, as dirty bottles is one of the greatest sources of milk troubles in hot weather.

Belleville Heroes Slated For Honors

Captains O'Flynn and Vanderwater in Line For Military Cross

The news has been received in this city from Lieut.-Col. A. E. Swift, Commanding Officer of the Second Battalion, C.E.F., that he has recommended Captain Edmund D. O'Flynn of this city, and Capt. Roscoe Vanderwater of Sidney township, for the Military Cross. Capt. O'Flynn is strongly recommended for devotion to duty on the afternoon of April 26, 1916, at Ypres, opposite Hill 60. During and after a very severe bombardment this officer carried out the distribution of ammunition and grenades to the front line, helped the Medical Officer and organized parties to look after the wounded. His energy and the way he looked after the details were of great assistance to his commanding officer.

Capt. Roscoe Vanderwater, who left Belleville with the 39th Battalion in June 1915, is recommended for special gallantry and coolness under most trying circumstances. On the afternoon of April 26, 1916, when a mine was exploded in the trench held by his company, he at once took charge and directed his men. He had rapid fire opened on the enemy and prevented them from crossing and occupying the crater, and by his example stimulated the men to heroic service. His handling of this very difficult situation is said to be worthy of the greatest praise.

It is believed that this is only a temporary measure to curtail petty smuggling, which is alleged to have been extensively carried on.

SPEEDY RUNAWAY

About 11.30 this morning a team of horses, attached to a heavy wagon, took fright while standing in front of the Frost & Wood agency on Front street. The team ran down in the centre of the road, causing no damage to the many vehicles that were lined along the pavement during the busiest hour of the morning. As the team approached Bridge street, they were brought to a stop by Mr. Jack Blaind, whose plucky act, was perhaps the means of averting the serious damage which would have occurred had the team reached Bridge street.

The outfit was owned by Mr. Wm. Smith of Holloway, who came to the city to secure farming implements. At the time the runaway occurred, the wagon contained a crate of machinery, which, other than the breaking of the crate remained intact.

Fifteen Hundred Craftsmen to Gather in London, Ont. — 61st Annual Communication

When the Sixty-First Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario, opens in London to-morrow morning, one fact will not be forgotten by the general public, that eighteen thousand Masons of the Dominion have donned the khaki under the Union Jack, and that about ten thousand have been from the jurisdiction of Ontario.

Many a supreme sacrifice has been made 'neath the Masonic symbols. For example, the late Major-General Mercer was a Mason, and a past master.

A London brother may be a candidate for the position of Grand Senior Warden.

CANADIAN CLERGYMAN AND WIFE MURDERED IN JAPAN MISSION FIELD

Rev. W. A. F. Campbell and Wife, Sent to Far East by Canadian Methodist Church in 1913, Brutally Stabbed to Death During The Night By a Japanese Burglar

TOKIO, July 17.—The Rev. W. A. F. Campbell and his wife, Canadian missionaries, were stabbed to death early this morning in their summer cottage at Karuizawa by a burglar. The weapon used was a Japanese short sword. Karuizawa, which is an American missionary summer center, has been greatly excited by the murder.

At 2.30 o'clock this morning, according to the police accounts, a Japanese, dressed in foreign garb, entered a second-storey window of the cottage and after awakening the missionaries demanded money. This beig refused, the intruder plunged a short sword into Mr. Campbell's breast, mortally wounding him.

Mrs. Campbell struggled heroically with the assailant and was stabbed repeatedly, succumbing to her wounds a few hours later.

At the point of his sword, the burglar, the police say, forced the Japanese maid to disclose the cash box and he then made his escape with the $10.50, which it contained.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell recently volunteered for service with a Canadian contingent in the European war, and was about to return home.

The Rev. W. A. F. Campbell and Mrs. Cambpell were sent out to the Far East by the Metnodist Church in Canada. They had been engaged in evangelistic work in Japan since September, 1913.

Karuizawa is a small town at an elevation of 3,180 feet in Shinano Province, 87 miles northwest of Tokio. It is a favorite summering place for Protestant missionaries who assemble there between July and September to discuss church and mission questions.

Belonged to Toronto.

TORONTO, Ont., July 16.—Rev. W. A. F. Campbell and his wife were both from Toronto, the former being a graduate of Victoria College, and the latter of the Methodist Deaconess Training School in this city. Rev. Mr. Campbell, who was in his thirty-third year, was ordained in 1913, and preached one year in Toronto, where he was a member of the Toronto conference, before leaving for the Far East.

Mrs. Campbell, whose maiden name was Miss Jean Collinson, was a daughter of the late William Collinson, of Toronto.

Hetty Green, the Woman Who Fought Financiers

Boston—The Boston News Bureau says:

Hetty Green did not die the richest woman in the world, as alleged in some newspapers. For many years she had not been in good health and had not husbanded her properties. She was born under influences which made her a man miser. She wore men's high top boots and had more financial sense in them than most men. She was truly feminine at heart, but veiled her femininity with faded garments and frayed cloak, under which she schemed and fought both as man and woman. She was New England born and often sought advice in Boston. The advice she wanted was not financial, for, like all true financiers, Hetty Green listened and acted and never sought the guidance of anybody in financial affairs. The advice she wanted was usually how she could whip somebody and then how she could whip her lawyers, for she was averse to anybody naming the figure which she should pay for any service.

She fought from New England through New York, Chicago and St. Louis to Texas. When somebody wanted to get away with a railroad in Texas, they found Hetty Green on the spot. She redeemed the road, set it going and won the cheers of the Texans.

When she felt that an unrighteous decision had been rendered against her in Chicago she bided her time. Then, when money was ungettable in Wall Street, Hetty Green had it to loan. When the Clearing House Committee appealed to her she remarked, with a nonchalant air, that she was just a poor lone woman and did not know much about investments, but did the Clearing House Committee hold for the banks and demand loans of railroads terminating in Chicago. They replied that they had such paper by the million. Hetty Green in a innocent kind of way passed over her millions and scanned the paper that she had invested in at a very reasonable rate of discount. The Wall Street bankers were happy and so was Hetty.

Delighted in Calling Loans.

Those who knew her can imagine the delight which she took in penning a few notes to those Chicago roads in a dainty feminine hand, announcing that she held their demand loans and would they kindly come along with the cash.

The telephones and the telegraphs rattled busily; the Clearing House Committee was bearded and the Chairman of the Committee attempted explanation. He called up Mrs. Green and she responded in her sweetest tones, "Just send those Chicago boys up to see me and perhaps my bite is not so bad as my bark."

Up to Mrs. Green's they went, an humble lot of Chicago railroad men. But Hetty was more humble than they. She said she was only one lone female in the world with no man to help her, and that the railroads owned Chicago and could alone secure justice. She, of course, could not.

She said she was not at all particular about the money, in fact, did not have any use for it, but would like a little co-operation for the ends of justice.

The railroad managers were very agreeable to a partnership if they did not have to pay those loans. She asked their opinion of a certain judge and her partners thereupon determined that he was not much of a judge after all, and Hetty coolly said: "Well, you put him on the bench and you can now take him off or you can pay your loans to me."

They piled a banquet board in Chicago high with fruits and wines, dined the judge and nominated him for a higher office while he resigned the lower one. And then said Hetty, in privately telling the tale, "they left him to elect himself; the last I heard of him he was drinking himself to death."

Fought Her Relative

Hetty Green fought her relative, W. W. Crapo, of New Bedford, for many years. Money she was to inherit he invested in Kansas railroad bonds that declined to 10 cents on the dollar and she sued him to make good.

Suspicion was a large part of her nature. When engaged in this litigation in New Bedford she would not trust a living soul, even to cook her food. She bought supplies at the corner grocery, selected her own eggs, cooked them herself and, absolutely independent, defied the world and all antagonists.

"So my foolish old trustee, Mr. Crapo, wants to be Governor of Massachusetts, does he?" said Hetty Green—and she looked over the political field as no other woman had looked over it before. Then engineers and a gang of workman began building a dam across a big New England river while the political war bosses in Massachusetts were sparring for position. "Here, what do you mean, Mrs. Green?" a New England multi-millionaire who had his paper mills below on the river. "Are you going to build a factory?"

"Not at present," said Mrs. Green, "I am just building a dam and it will take some time to float water behind that dam."

"I guess it will," said the large manufacturer. "Why, Mrs. Green, do you know that if you build that dam and hold back that water, my mills must be idle all summer? I will buy your dam and your water rights."

"No," said Hetty, "I must hold my water rights; you hold my political rights. I cannot vote; but you men can make the politics in the Republican party of Massachusetts. You are planning to nominate W. W. Crapo for Governor and a nomination is equivalent to an election."

"Well, what of that?" said the manufacturer.

"Only this, that you are the one man in Massachusetts that can prevent it, and if you don't your paper mills will dry up this summer at least. I am only a poor lone woman with no political voice, but I know my relative is no proper business man."

The bargain was quickly struck. The dam was never finished, and W. W. Crapo was never Governor of Massachusetts.

Hetty Green, with all her inborn passion for getting and holding money, knew the basis of credit just as well as J. P. Morgan. When John Barrett of the Washington diplomatic service, applied to the Chemical Bank for a financial accommodation, Mrs. Green, who for years made her headquarters there, settled the matter in a jiff. "Why, John, if you want anything out of this bank, you can have it. Mr. Cashier, I have known this man since he was a boy; he is honest; let him have what he wants."

Hetty Geren neither gave nor took advice regarding investments. She sought out a good investment, made it, and took the consequences so long as the company was honestly and properly managed. One day many years ago, Wall Street was filled with rumors that Hetty Green had sold a large part of her Louisville and Nashville and other shares. The writer asked her, when she called upon him one day in Boston, concerning the report. She spoke with the frankness of a child, and said she had never sold a share of that stock, nor of—

This bit of financial wisdom was once laid down by her in private conversion:

"When a corporation begins to engage in a business other than that for which it has been organized, it is time to sell the stock."

JUMPED FROM WINDOW

Woman Commits Suicide on Way to Sanitarium

BALTIMORE, Md., July 17.—Using a ruse to elude a nurse and her brother-in-law, Nicholas Hills, of East Orange, N.J., who were taking her to a sanatorium in New York, Miss Elizabeth Berry plunged from a window of a speeding train near Orangeville, Md., this morning, fracturing her skull and sustaining injuries that this afternoon resulted in death.

Miss Berry had been undergoing treatment at the Johns Hopkins Hospital for several months. Upon advice of the hospital doctors Mr. Hill decided to remove his sister-in-law to a sanatorium in New York. When the train, bound for New York, neared Orangeville, Miss Berry went to the toilet. Here she locked the door and opening the window leaped out. The train was stopped and Miss Berry was brought back to Baltimore. She was rushed to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, where it was found that she was suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. Miss Berry lived with her brother-in-law in East Orange, N.J. The body will be held here pending an inquest.

Will Prove He Is Not Afraid

Friends Said He Did Not Dare to Enlist — Goes to Orange Celebration and Joins Army

(Watertown, N.Y., Times)

Because many of his fellow workers at No. 4 paper mill had told him he was afraid to join the Canadian army and referred to him in a joking way as a coward, John A. Holmes, of 833 West Main Street, took all of these things seriously, and as a result he is now a member of the 75th Canadian Artillery now being recruited in Kingston, Ont., for overseas service. He went to Brockville, Ont., with the Orangemen's lodge Wednesday to attend the celebration in that city. His wife accompanied him. Upon their arrival there Mrs. Holmes said that he left her at the train, and when he returned to meet her at noon she learned that he had joined the Canadian army.

Mrs. Holmes said at her home today that while her husband had been very enthusiastic about joining the army, and that he talked with many about, they all joked with him and never thought for one moment that he seriously harbored such a thought. She said that he had been a member of the 5th Field Battery of Deseronto, Ont., for the past twelve years, and had drilled each summer with them. She said he continually talked with her and his fellow employees about joining the army. She said she often asked him in a joking way why he didn't join, if he desired to so badly. Men where he worked also made jesting remarks about him, but said he was afraid to enlist.

While his wife and two children, Charles, aged thirteen, and Phyllis, aged eleven, are heart-broken, Mrs. Holmes said to-day that she would not take any action to have him discharged. She said she believed that something worse might happen if she did so.

Mrs. Holmes said that after her husband enlisted, her friends told her that she could prevent it if she desired to, but she said she would not interfere, and returned home alone from Brockville Wednesday night.

Mrs. Holmes hopes that her husband will never see overseas service. She said today that army officers told her that her husband would be in training at Barriefield camp for at least ten months before leaving for England, and that he would probably be there a year before going to the front. She hopes that the war will be ended by that time. She said her husband enlisted for one year or until the end of the present war.

THIS IS THE 638TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

CONTROL THE FRUIT MARKET BY PROPER MEANS.

With fruit abundantly grown in Canada it is surely strange that immense quantities should be imported from the United States. Yet, Bulletin No. 47, dealing with precooling, recently issued by the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, states that "during 1913, when tons of tender fruits rotted on the ground in Ontario for want of markets, and when calamity stared the fruit-grower in the face, the Dominion of Canada imported from the United States 12,149,207 pounds of peaches, 6,197,700 pounds of plums, 6,026,692 pounds of grapes and 11,354,228 pounds of pears, apricots, quinces and nectarines."

It is further stated that these importations are increasing and that they largely go to the Prairie Provinces. Is this not due to the fact that in the Eastern Provinces sufficient attention and care are not paid to the fruit in gathering, storing, packing and shipping. The object of the bulletin, which can be had free on application to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, is to overcome this state of things.

Detailed advice as to precooling and refrigerating all kinds of fruits, with results of experiments at the Grimsby precooling station, is given with the rates charged for precooling and storing.

A second bulletin, No. 48, issued by the Branch and which like the other can be had free on application to the same source, supplies additional details of precooling investigations and contains a vast deal of practical information regarding packing, shipping and marketing. Fruit grower and shipper will profit by an earnest study of each of these bulletins.

NEVER SAW GERMANY.

One desiring to obtain a legitimate analysis of the most recent Liberal logic will need to study the problem from a variety of viewpoints. Up to within a week or two Opposition papers and orators were assuring the Canadian people that the Borden Government was permitting any quantity of Canadian nickel to reach the Germans; and one Western Liberal went so far as to charge Sir Robert Borden with being in alliance with the Huns.

More recently a German submarine arrived in Baltimore with the announcement that nickel "was sorely needed in Germay," and that the undersea boat proposed taking back a cargo, if it could get it.

The confession of the German captain that nickel was "sorely needed" in Germany didn't quite fit in with the positive assertions that Sir Robert Borden was allowing the Huns to get any quantity of it, but the Liberals were by no means confounded. Not they. They simply shifted their sails without batting an eye-lash and shrieked that the Government was taking no steps to prevent that Hun commander from getting his cargo of nickel.

In the meantime, of course, the Government quietly pursues its course, conscious of the positive fact that, owing to an arrangement made with and approved by the British Admiralty, not a pound of Canadian nickel has reached the Germans since the war began, nor will reach them while the war continues.

◆

A SUBJECT FOR THOUGHT.

The following paragraph from a London newspaper article entitled "New Zealand's Charmed Life," has something in it for Canadians to consider:—

"The Commissioner for New Zealand, Reuter's Agency is informed, is sending to his Government as a memento of the Jutland fight, a portion of the flagstaff of the New Zealand, which was hit during the engagement. In a communication to Sir Thomas Mackenzie, the captain of the battle cruiser, after sending his heartiest greetings to all New Zealanders, says: "This ship was in the battle cruiser line and I can say we gave a very good account of ourselves. We seemed to have a charmed life, for shell was falling heavily all round, and we were only hit once. Our casualties were two slightly wounded."

Just such an inspiring message as this might have come on Canada, with a threefold force, had the Borden Government been permitted to give effect to the wish of the Canadian people and place with the British Grand Fleet three great ships of war, each one as powerful as the New Zealand. But for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's action in withholding this help from the Empire, we in Canada might to-day be receiving from the Canadian High Commissioner in London the message that "These fine ship were in the battle cruiser line and gave a very good account of themselves."

Canada has no part in the great work that is being done in the North Sea, because in this greatest theatre of the war we have been forced into the position of slackers at the bidding of a man whom the Toronto Globe still describes as "the greatest living Canadian." It is not the fault of the Laurier Opposition that the Germans failed in the Jutland battle, in which a ship of a sister Dominion "gave a very good account" of herself.

Montreal Gazette: In the New York Surrogate Court application was made for permission to increase the allowance of a young lady of sixteen—who will "come into" a fortune of $150,000 a year when she attains the age of twenty-one—from $7,487 a year to $18,500, the young lady's mother, with whom she lives, submitting that the smaller sum was insufficient to pay for necessities. This list was submitted as containing only "actual necessities" for the girl:—Rent, $2,500; household expenses, including flowers and gratuities, $3,500; wearing apparel and toliet articles, $3,000; education, with private instruction in French and music, $2,000; autos, $3,500; travel and entertainment, $3,000; prysician, optician and dentist, $1,000. The report says that the increase was refused by the Surrogate "without comment." It is a safe guess, though, that the court officer "thought a lot." A maiden of sixteen ought to do pretty well on $7,497 a year. If her mother considers $18,500 will buy only "necessities," it would be illuminating to have her definition of a "luxury."

New York Tribune: It may be doubted whether there ever was a blockade under which the victims were so utterly helpless as the Germans are to-day. The wild excitement of the populace over the exploit of a single successful blockade runner is a pathetic demonstration of their plight. Hardly less pathetic is the bewilderment of the German editors who are so anxiously asking whether this feat does not "raise another question as to the legality of the blockade." It is to be feared there is not much hope for them there. In our civil war Hobert Pacha made six successful voyages to Wilmington, and in ten months the E. R. Lee ran the blockade no less than twenty-one times. Yet even then no one talked about the downfall of the federal navy, and though the blockading squadron did not pretend that it could stop more than one-third of the attempts to run the blockade, it was nevertheless held to be an effective blockade.

Hamilton Spectator: We do not need to be told by the Toronto Globe that Sir Adam Beck is not now a member of the Ontario Government. But he was for many years a member of it, and his personality is felt in it yet. Indeed, one of the favourite fictions of the Liberal press is that a large portion of the Cabinet acknowledge him as their true leader, and that some day he may head the Government. We knew whereof we spoke when we said the Globe represented the Ontario Government as hopelessly divided. For some time past it has been alleging the existence of a Hanna faction and a Beck faction, the promotion of Mr Hearst signalizing the temporary ascendency of the former.

The latest explanation of the presence of man-eating sharks off the New Jersey coast is that "these sharks may have devoured human bodies in the waters of the German war zone and followed the Deutschtoll of drowning men, women and children." Such a gruesome suggestion may seem far-fetched, yet it is not unlikely that a shark's appetite for human flesh should grow by what it feeds on.

Current Comment

Liberal prohibitionists who would not punish Sir George Ross when he refused to give prohibition seem willing to punish Mr. Hearst because he is giving prohibition.—Toronto News.

Infantile paralysis flourishes where there is dirt. One more reason why the sanitary system of every city should be as efficient as possible. Belleville is fairly clean, but it can be made cleaner still.

Bourassa says he may yet be hanged for what he says. No danger, Bourassa is too much like his grandfather Papineau, who ran away to the States, leaving his deluded followers to suffer the consequences of his treasonable acts. There was a yellow streak in the grandfather, and it is even more conspicuous in the grandson.—Hamilton Herald.

The Globe last week, doubtless with its tongue in its cheek, remarked that "the people" need leadership in these critical and awful days, and they turn to Sir Wilfrid Laurier for that object. Ye gods; Does it think the people it addresses are fools? With the "loyalty" of Quebec as an object lesson, it is welcome to the sole proprietorship of a French-Canadian leader.—Hamilton Spectator.

The population of the State of New York is greater than that of Canada, yet the Dominion has 150,000 men in the British army with thousands more in training. In two years that the war has been waged, 53,000 Canadians have been killed, wounded or reported missing. This is twice the number of men in the National Guard of this state. * * * There can be no question, however, that Canada is doing her full duty to the Empire.—Rochester Express.

The Poets' Corner

KITCHENER'S TOMB

Which of our nobly brave
Need ask a goodlier grave,
A tomb that has no cover from the sky?
Out of the city's maze,
Free from the curious gaze,
Shrine of our sea-kings great in days done by.

Under the rhythmic beat
Of many steel-shod feet,
That tread the ocean on their watchful way,
Waves in perpetual shrift,
Over his great heart drift,
Telling their red stone heads, they chant and pray.

Each hour of day and night,
Sea-sprays of foamy white,
Shorn from the fertile borders of the deep,
Garland the nameless tomb
Swathed as in lily bloom.
Where Britain's Warrior Lord is laid asleep.

Lamps hung in Heaven line
The dome of that vast shrine,
Bird choirs intone to the sea-organ's bass;
Eternal glory falls
Over the rude rock walls
Round the high altar of a sea-born race.

A ROYAL NURSE.

The Czarina of Russia as Red Cross Worker.

HER DAUGHTERS ALSO SERVE.

Empress, Along With Her Daughters, Has Taken a Complete Course in Nursing and Has Acted in Capacity of Nurse in the Military Hospitals Both in Petrograd and Elsewhere.

Mrs. Marye, wife of the former U. S. Ambassador to Petrograd, writes interestingly regarding the war work of the Czarina of Russia.

Mrs. Marye had an audience with the czarina a few days before leaving. The meeting took place in Tsarskoe Selo, one of the royal palaces.

"The czarina seemed very sad and sorrowful over the troubles of the war," commented Mrs. Marye in speaking of the visit. "She is a most beautiful woman, but her features show her inner sorrows.

CZARINA OF RUSSIA AS A RED CROSS NURSE.

Mrs. Marye speaks also of the British and American hospitals in Petrograd. They have been visited from time to time by the czarina, who, with two daughters, took a complete course in nursing. She has actually acted as a nurse in military hospitals too.

"There are forty-five beds in the American hospital, and they are always occupied; also the institution has always been taxed to the utmost of its capacity, even though native hospitals have had empty beds in lulls in fighting.

"One of the most picturesque little figures in Russia is the eleven-year-old czarevitch. He hasn't ever been in good health, you know. But he's a game little youngster, and every time the czar goes to the front his little boy is certain to be in the trenches with him. The child is a great favorite with the soldiers."

Mrs. Marye said that, except for the omission of evening dress and the use of ordinary garb, Petrograd goes its merry way as usual. The opera and ballet continue despite the war.

Hotels are so crowded that they have to turn away persons every day. Many of the guests, she said, are American and English business men.

Are Domestic Women Stupid?

A home and children cannot be at their best when given indifferent care. Beautiful homes and children do not grow on the wishing tree. They are the result of painstaking care and continued loving effort. This is merely another instance of the universal law that we must pay for everything we get.

There are people who consider the domestic woman stupid or at least inferior intellectually to her professional sister. The fact of the matter is that there are many stupid domestic women, just as there are many stupid teachers and stenographers. And at the same time some of the smartest women living are essentially domestic. It takes brains and ability to succeed in any line of endeavor. The difference between the domestic woman and the business woman is that each has developed along different lines.

There are a-plenty of wrong ways of beginning married life. There are a few right ways. One of these is to start on a cash basis.

Some furniture paid for, a little home ready, and enough money on hand to start paying cash for everything—that is a right way. To go in debt for furniture at the beginning and to start charge accounts for food and clothing usually mean to begin an interminable labyrinth of debt.

Debt is the easiest thing in the world to get into and the hardest to get out of. As a rule, a young couple have enough to do to manage to pay livnig expenses. If they have furniture to pay for they are likely to not have quite enough left to pay running expenses.

Charge accounts have a way of growing by leaps and bounds. It is so easy to charge a little more than one ought—to charge more than one would pay out if one were paying cash.

Start on a safe level and plunge into the gorgeous adventure of life with all your might. The tides wash away the drifters first of all.

And Older Girls, Too.

A girl of 16 never sees a play without noting a striking resemblance between herself and the heroine.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY

NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER VI.

The Women That Vanished.

Nick Carter took in with a glance the superficial features of the tragic scene.

The room was a large single chamber, with a small bathroom adjoining it. A bed stood against one of the side walls, a bureau between the two lace-curtained windows, the shades of which were closely drawn.

Nearly in the middle of the room was a round, marble-top table, on which a small service tray was lying, also some bits of thin glass, evidently parts of a broken whisky tumbler, the other fragments of which were scattered upon the carpet near the dead man.

An overcoat and soft felt hat, obviously those of Judge Packard, were lying on one of the chairs.

The white spread of the bed, near the foot of it, was slightly soiled in spots, as well as somewhat indented, as if a square package, or article of some kind, had recently been placed upon it, having considerable weight, and a little soiled on the surface that had touched the spread. Nick noticed this evidence almost immediately, but thought no more about it until later.

Only two thoughts, in fact, were uppermost in his mind for a few seconds: One, the declaration he had made to Fenno the previous night—that he would not, under any reasonable circumstances, believe him guilty of the very crime that had just been discovered.

The other was a question—whether he should at once reveal his identity and take charge of an investigation of the murder, or defer the disclosure until we could see what attitude Fenno would take, if not informed of his presence. Nick promptly decided upon the latter course, and left Detective Holman to take the first steps.

The latter, an energetic man of middle age, whose face evinced more natural force than subtle detective acumen, quickly overcame the feelings occasioned by his first view of the shocking scene.

"Hang onto that fellow," he cried, addressing the two men who were detaining Fenno, at the same time hastening to examine the stricken man. "Good heavens! this is Judge Packard. Dead—foully murdered! Can this be one result of——"

"You'd better call the house doctor," Nick interrupted, stepping into the room. "Get him here without delay."

"Who the devil are you?" growled Holman, starting up from beside the body. "The judge is dead, and what——"

"And a physician's testimony may be needed to convict the assassin," Nick again interposed, with curious dryness. "Besides, a woman in the corridor has fainted, and should have immediate attention."

"I guess you're right," Holman allowed, ending his sharp scrutiny of the detective and abruptly turning to the elevator man. "Go at once, Soley, and bring Doctor Blaney up here. I saw him come in less than five minutes ago. Stop a bit. Don't spread the news of this affair too quickly, or we shall have the whole house around our ears. I want time for a partial investigation. Bring the doctor and nobody else."

"I understand, sir," cried Soley, hastening from the room as if glad to leave the shocking scene.

Holman glanced inquisitively at Nick, wondering who he was; yet at the same time he drew out a pair of handcuffs and said, approaching Fenno and the two men still grasping his arms:

"I'll relieve you two men of holding this fellow. We'll slip these on him, and——"

"Oh, there is no occasion for handcuffs, Detective Holman," Fenno interrupted, drawing up his fine figure and speaking with perfect calmness, despite the look of distress on his pale face. "I shall not attempt to escape, nor have I any wish to depart, as these men were led to infer from my resistance when they first seized me. You are greatly mistaken, all of you, if you think I am guilty of this appalling crime. Evidently, Mr. Holman, you do not know me by sight."

The significance of the last remark caused Holman to defer adjusting the handcuffs, from which the speaker had instinctively shrunk. He regarded him more sharply for a moment, saying bluntly:

"No, I don't know you. What I see, however, is enough."

"What you see is misleading. I am sure you know my name, at least. It is Percival Fenno."

"Great Scott!" Holman stared, startled, then glanced at the gory form of the murdered judge. "If you are the man you claim, there's all the more reason for——"

"For suspecting me and placing me under arrest," Fenno calmly interposed. "I cannot blame you, Holman, in the light of what I have learned since entering this house. I came here only to——"

There he stopped short with his gaze momentarily turned from the face of the house detective.

Nick Carter was the only hearer who noticed this one swift glance, and his own eyes were at once furtively turned in the same direction—toward the open door leading into the corridor.

Now standing on the threshold of it, gazing steadily at Fenno, was the woman whom Nick had seen coming through the corridor when he approached the deathchamber. She wore no street garments, and evidently was a guest of the house.

Seen in the glare of light from the electric chandelier, with her superb, richly clad figure framed in the dark woodwork of the open door, she presented a rather striking picture.

She was about thirty-five, as dark as an Italian, and remarkably handsome, with black hair and eyes, regular features, a firm mouth and chin, a finely poised head. She was evidently dressed for dinner. Through the network of her black lace waist could be seen the velvety whiteness of her superb neck and shoulders, her shapely arms and tapering hands, with fingers ablaze with jewels.

Her somewhat sensuous beauty and striking attire, however, did not impress Nick Carter. He saw only her eyes, their intense gleam and glitter, while they remained fixed for another moment on those of the man who had begun to explain his presence on the scene of the murder.

"She's held him up," thought Nick, noting the abruptness with which Fenno checked his utterances. "She's choked him off with a look, that's what. I wonder who the dickens she is, that she warns him thus, or fears what he might have said:

Not having observed the woman, Detective Holman at once picked up Fenno's remark.

"Came here for what?" he sharply demanded. "What did you come for that you hesitate over disclosing?"

"I had no intention to hesitate," Fenno haughtily replied, yet frowning in momentary confusion. "I did not intend coming to this room, nor had I any idea who occupied it."

"What brought you here, then?"

"I was passing through the corridor and heard terrible groans, evidently coming from this room," Fenno explained. "I thought some person might be alone and seriously ill, possibly dying, and I knocked on the door, then opened it. I saw this man, whom I did not recognize at first, writhing in a death struggle on the floor. I ran to him and raised him, thinking he might be able to name his assassin, at least; but he was too far gone for that. He died in my arms, in fact, and without uttering a word. As I rose, covered with blood, these two men rushed into the room and seized me, then shouted for help. Their cries brought the elevator man, who told them to hold me while he sent some one to notify you. That's all I can tell you about this affair, Holman, and I'm a thousand times more shocked and horrified than I could possibly tell."

"That's the truth is it?" queried Holman, not much impressed with the story.

"My word is good, sir, where I am known," Fenno curtly answered, instantly resenting the other's incredulity.

"If what you say is true, Mr. Fenno, I don't see why you should have thrushed a disguise into your pocket when you saw us enter," put in one of the men who had detained him. "I'll swear I saw you do that."

"A disguise, eh?" Holman cried, with suspicions redoubled. "What do you say to that, Mr. Fenno?"

"It is true."

"You were in disguise?"

"Yes, when I entered this room."

"Let's see the disguise."

Fenno complied without protest, drawing a black combination beard and mustache from his breast pocket and handing it to the detective.

"It was displaced during my efforts to raise the wounded man and fell to the floor," he coldly explained. "When I heard these men entering, I obeyed an impulse natural to one who instantly realized that he might be in a threatening situation. I picked up the disguise and thrust it into my pocket."

"But why were you in disguise at all? What was the occasion for that?"

"That," Fenno icily answered, "is a matter which, since it can have no possible bearing upon this crime, I shall decline to explain."

"Are you mad?" cried Holman. "Decline to explain?"

"That is what I said, sir."

"And you really mean it?"

"I invariably mean what I say."

"You leave me, then, an only alternative." As quick as a flash Holman snapped the handcuffs on Fenno. "Take that chair in the corner until I am ready to remove you."

Fenno turned deathly pale and shrank for an instant, then quickly governed his feelings.

THROW AWAY YOUR RUBBISH.

The Wisdom of Cleaning Out Accumulations of Gowns and Mustiness.

In some houses the first thing that greets one is a faint musty odor arising from carpets which have grown old, but which, though probably swept frequently, have never been sent to the cleaner's and, being down for years, have accumulated deposits of dust underneath them. In old houses, too, the flooring will have shrunk and provided receptacles for insects under the carpets. Constant traffic and the soil of the street brought in on dirty boots also get into both carpet and flooring.

It is cheaper to do away with rubbish of all kinds than to suffer the results in ill health. Bedrooms are often used as receptacles for stores of old clothes, old trunks and other things, the occupants forgetting that these things are but so much cubic capacity cut off from the air space of the room and that they harbor germs and cause infection.

If household furnishings are worn out and there is difficulty in renewing them, better eliminate them than retain them to the detriment of health. The bare room is a healthy room. If rooms require repapering have them distempered instead. Paperhangers are at a discount just now, and the cleanly distemper which many women who are handy can manage by themselves is healthier and cleaner than a cheap and soiled paper.

When Jackson Dined.

When Colonel David Crockett was a member of congress and was at his home in Tennessee some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at 12, the next above them at 1, the merchants at 2, the representatives at 3, the senators at 4, members of the cabinet at 5 and the vice president at 6.

"But when does the president dine?"

"What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness, "Well, he doesn't eat till next day!"

The Smallest Capital.

From the tourist point of view Cetinje is probably the least interesting as well as the smallest of European capitals. The principal building is the ancient monastery, in front of which is the old palace, now the home of the bishop and still known as "The Billiards," because until recently it boasted the first and only billiard table in the kingdom. The new palace is a modest chocolate colored villa, and by far the most imposing buildings in the little city are the Russian and Austrian consulates.—London Globe.

Sensibility.

Two highly respectable citizens of Brooklyn were strolling past the old Kings county penitentiary, now nothing but a memory. They noticed a gang of convicts working on the road and paused to watch the prisoners, who appeared to be harder than the stones they were breaking. The guard, a tough looking man, came along and said:

"Beg pardon, gentlemen. You will have to move on. It embarrasses the boys to have their friends see them in such a predicament."—New York Post.

Fine Scorn.

"Lady," said Plodding Pete, "could you spare a hungry man a meal of victuals?"

"You go away from here, or I'll call my husband."

"Is that there stoop shouldered man plowin' corn in the next field your husband?"

"Yes, it is."

"I take back what I said. I've got a heart in me, I have. If you've got a meal o' victuals for a poor starvin' man give it to your husband."—Washington Star.

YOUR RAINY DAISY.

Dress as Well For Storms as You Would For the Opera.

The up to date business woman refuses to work in unbecoming garments, no matter what the weather may be. Rain or shine, she insists upon looking well dressed, knowing that her appearance is no small part of her success. The time has passed when the efficient worker was content to wear any sort of clothes. She dresses herself for the office just as immaculately as for a drawing room.

An essential to a neat, attractive appearance on a rainy day is some sort of waterproof coat. This need not be a hideous affair of rubber, drab in color, shapeless as to fit. Really smart waterproof coats are to be found in these enlightened times, one seen recently being in pewter gray waterproof tweed, designed to withstand the wickedest weather. It was lined with a lovely wedgwood blue shade of silk. The coat buttoned at the top with two large tweed covered buttons, or it could be worn open. It had two capacious pockets at the sides, and the garb was completed by a jaunty and sensible little hat in blue straw, with a gray ribbon and untarnishable steel buckle, and a pair of high waterproof boots.

The whole was a judicious mixture of the picturesque and the practical and proved that we can wear the most perfectly weather resisting garments and still look quite charming on a wet day. The idea that "any old clothes" will do for bad days is quite exploded nowadays.

Bulbous Plants.

Many amateur gardeners when their bulbous plants are through blooming are in great haste to let the bulbs dry out and pull them up. This is a mistake. As soon as crocuses, hyacinths, tulips and narcissuses are through flowering remove blooms and begin a systematic preparation for next season's flowers. It must be known that just after a bulb has finished flowering is the time when it stores up nourishment for the next season, and if the flowers are not to degenerate in a few years the bulbs should be given attention. Give doses of liquid manure once a week for at least a month after the flowering is done and do not neglect to water the dry stocks. In this way one can materially help them to store up food. Rich soil is not necessary for very young plants, as they derive most of their sustenance from the air and moisture. The soil should, however, be kept light and porous.

How to Retick Feathers.

Get your new ticking ready for the beds, have it all sewed up, but have about ten inches open at one end. Now take your old tick from which you wish to change the feathers and rip it open about ten inches at the end. Then take your new ticking and sew it on to the old ticking, having the two openings together. Now you can shake the feathers from the old tick into the new without losing one of them. Before closing up your new tick turn your old tick inside out and pick all the down out of it and put into the new ticking. Now you can close up your new tick.

HOW BLOTTERS ABSORB INK.

Being a Simple Explanation of Capillary Attraction.

Every student of physics knows that water will run up a narrow tube by capillary attraction. Anything immersed in water has a similar attraction for the water—that is, the object becomes wet by the water that clings to it. The amount is limited by the weight of the liquid itself. Place your hand in water and your hand when withdrawn is wet. The limited attraction between the hand and the water is gauged by the weight of the water that clings to the hand.

Imagine several hands placed close together in water, but not touching one another. If this composite hand were formed of ten single hands it would attract ten times as much water as the one hand would attract and hold on its surface. So a wisp of hay, composed of a hundred spears of dried grass, placed in water will remove a hundred times as much of the fluid as would cling to one spear. Bushes in a marsh will remove a certain amount of water, which will by capillary attraction cling to their submerged parts.

Under the microscope fibrous blotting paper when absorbing ink resembles on a small scale a marsh matted with shrubs and sticks and twigs around which water is flowing, as ink runs about and among the fibers that together form the spongy paper. There is a limit to the amount of liquid which a blotter will absorb, as there is a limit to the amount of water that a marsh will absorb without overflowing. That limit in the blotter is the combined capillary attraction of the fibrous shrubs and sticks and twigs that together form the paper.—Popular Science Monthly.

EQUINE EVOLUTION.

There Was a Time When the Horse Was Only Two Feet High.

The variations which lead up to the formation of a new species are so insensible, they stretch over such a vast period of time, that their survival value from generation to generation is and must be very slight. Take the case of the horse, for instance.

The development of the horse seems to stretch over a period of at least 3,000,000 years, or from the eohippus of eocene times, an animal less than two feet high and probably weighing less than a hundred pounds, to the horse of late tertiary times, the pliohippus, much like the superb creature we know today, five feet high and weighing 1,000 or 1,200 pounds.

If this animal increased in height only one-quarter of an inch in 10,000 years he would be six feet high in less than 2,000,000 years. So, if we allow him 3,000,000 years to develop in, his increase in height must have been even less than one-fourth of an inch in 10,000 years.

Think of it! Our horse of today might be increasing or diminishing in size at that rate and the fact never be noticed during the whole period. In weight the same—one-eighth of a pound in a hundred years, and he would weigh 14,000 pounds in less than 2,000,000 years, a rate of increase that our scales would hardly detect in a century of time.

The transformations of the other animals have probably been equally slow. Science would feel safe in saying that a flying fish never becomes a bird. But can we conceive how slight the change would have to be in every thousand years to bring it about in geologic or biologic time?—John Burroughs

Don't Whip a Child In Anger.

It is absurd to whip a child who is overcome by anger. The best thing to do is to let him alone and let his passion wear itself out. If he could be taken before the anger gets the upper hand of him he might be controlled.

What the parent should do is to study the things which will arouse the child's anger and then avoid these things. It is the height of folly for a parent to excite anger in a child and then try to control it by punishment. It is worse than folly; it is brutal and is likely to ruin the child.—Mother's Magazine.

Cremation In Ancient Greece.

Cremation obtained among many ancient peoples. Especially did the Greeks find spiritual grandeur in the concept of the soul arising from the ashes of the dead—the natural body—into the empyrean, to dwell thenceforth with the stars. Cremation was, indeed, an honor denied the bodies of suicides, those who had been struck by lightning and others deemed to have forfeited the favor of the gods.—Scientific American.

A Hard Problem.

FOOTGEAR.

A Vivid Comparison of This and Last Year's Styles.

Anybody who predicted that so called "fancy footwear" would be out of fashion this spring made a wrong guess. It may be true that last autumn many of the extreme styles of ornate footgear that had been worn during the summer were discarded, but it is also true that they were discarded simply to make way for other styles of fancy footgear.

This spring the shops are as far from showing plain black boots and shoes as they were last year. Yet the boots and shoes of this spring are quite unlike those of last.

To begin with, a novelty is the return of the colonial pump. It is here in all its glory of tongue, and most women are thankful to see it again, for surely the colonial pump is comfort itself. It stays on without rubbing at the heel, which is something few other cuts of pump do.

Colonial pumps are made in patent leather, in black kid and in colors. Tan kid in various shades shows buckles of brown enamel or brass. Some of the black kid pumps have cut steel buckles, and the colored ones have either silver buckles of true colonial pattern—which also grace some of the smartest dull black kid pumps—or buckles covered with the colored kid.

Buckskin shoes are worn this spring. There are some very good high cream and light tan buckskin boots, both buttoned and laced, with French heels, that are admirable for street wear with light frocks.

The blind eyelets are still used for laced boots and the round laces. Cut work is shown on some of the white kid and buckskin boots and also on those of black patent leather. It forms a decorative band on each side of the front lacings.

Although leather or kid of two colors is not combined so much as it was last year, there are many sport shoes of white buckskin or canvas and tan leather. The combinations differ. Sometimes tan heel and toe caps on white boots with tan laces are found. Sometimes the vamps will be tan, with a white top and toe.

There are high buttoned or laced suede boots in violet, dark blue, green and other colors to wear with silk frocks of the same color.

Three buckled straps are found on some of the new low shoes. The buckles, of nickel, are small, but heavy. Sometimes the straps come from the edge of the sole.

SISTER'S HAT.

Suitable Headgear For the Small Girl's School Days.

A rather fine tan straw with a turndown brim to ward off freckles takes a navy blue velvet ribbon band and bow fore and aft. On the left side is a fruity cluster in gay colors. This hat answers the prime need of durability for everyday wear.

HER PEACH BASKET.

Women Make War Machines.

An exhibition of the work women are doing to replace the men who are at war is being held in Kensington, England. All that is best in women's industry is shown, including what is done in the home, in the munitions and Red Cross work and women's ability to provide new careers for others. One woman, a consulting engineer, demonstrates how the aeroplane depends on women. Careful and responsible workers are necessary, for the safety of the aviator depends on the women's work. In Glasgow the women are instructed in tram driving so that as male employees leave for enlistment their places may be filled quickly.

Fresh Gloves.

Soiled gloves are an abomination, especially in the spring. There may be a day when we shall look back upon the soiled white and colored gloves of which some of us are guilty occasionally with as much distaste as we now look on soiled shoes. Work out some scheme now whereby your gloves can always be fresh. Wash fabric gloves, wash kid gloves and silk gloves can all be kept spotlessly fresh without much trouble.

To Cream Hard Butter.

If butter is hard to cream don't warm it. This changes the texture of it. Instead run it through the vegetable ricer. This breaks it into small pieces, and it can then be readily creamed.

WAR WEAPONS OF THE PAST.

Crude Originals of the Modern Long Range Death Dealers.

The commonest injuries produced in war are gunshot wounds. Until fifty years ago a soldier's musket carried only about 835 feet, and this degree of efficiency had not been exceeded for more than 200 years—namely, from 1640 to 1859. In other words, the wars of Louis XIV., the struggles of the French revolution, the Napoleonic wars, the Crimean war and our war of 1812 were all fought with firearms which had no effect at a distance greater than 835 feet. In 1857, however, the smoothbore gun barrel was replaced by the rifled barrel, and this change caused an immediate increase in the carrying distance to 2,000 feet. At the time this result seemed to the whole world nothing short of a miracle, but as early as 1866 a French officer, Chassepot by name, invented a rifle having a caliber of 15 millimeters, which carried 4,000 feet. Ten years before this accomplishment would have seemed quite impossible. On Nov. 3, 1867, the new Chassepot rifle was submitted to a practical test. The French sent a detachment of men to occupy Rome and to hold it against the advancement of Garibaldi. The effect of the new rifle in the engagements was so remarkable that the entire French army was immediately equipped with Chassepots.

The Chassepot rifle weighed nine pounds, and the Gras rifle, which was introduced in 1874, weighed nearly as much, but it had a carrying distance of 6,000 feet. After remaining the same for 217 years, the carrying distance of firearms was thus increased in fifteen years by 5,165 feet. At the same time the firearms of the Austrians, Prussians and Italians were also greatly improved, and a repeating rifle firing sixteen shots a minute and having a carrying distance of 9,000 feet came into practical use.

The rifles in use today are much lighter, are more easily handled and carry a distance of more than 12,000 feet at the rate of 2,700 feet per second. The revolver was first introduced in 1850; since then it has also undergone great improvement. Its carrying distance, which at first was only about 100 feet, was increased to 330 feet, then 680, and finally 4,000 feet.

In comparison with such means of defense and offense it is interesting to call to mind the weapons of the ancients. A javelin could be thrown about eighty-four feet; the sling ordinarily hurled its missile 200 feet, the Balearic slingmen being famous, however, because they could hurl a stone 333 feet. The wooden bow was in use until the middle of the fifteenth century; by means of it an arrow could be propelled a distance of 295-330 feet, while the steel crossbow, which came into use later, carried from 830 to 940 feet. The old blunderbuss of the pilgrims, which was supported on a fork, was effective for about 500 feet. The early musket carried about 600 feet. This firearm was much improved, so that it could shoot a distance of 835 feet, and this was the best the world knew until 1857.

Forecasts In the Almanac.

While in modern times almanacs commonly concern themselves only with the known facts of the year with which they deal, for many years after they came into general use about the middle of the sixteenth century, predictions not only with regard to the weather, but also concerning the supposed planetary influences, were a vital part of their contents. The "prognostication" generally dealt with "the varieties of the ayre and also of the windes throughout the whole yere, with infortunate times to bie and sell, take medicine, sowe, plant and journey, etc." In France a decree of 1579 forbade all makers of almanacs to prophesy concerning affairs either of state or of individuals.—London Chronicle.

High Praise.

"That was a fine commencement oration of yours," said the young graduate's father.

"I'm glad you like it, father," replied the youth proudly.

"I liked it so much that I'm going to cut off your allowance from this time on. Any man who can settle the fate of nations right off the reel like you did oughtn't to have any trouble in rustling a first class job and holding it."

First Life Insurance Policy.

The first life insurance policy of which the details are on record resulted in a lawsuit. William Gybbons insured himself on June 15, 1583, for £383 against dying in twelve months. He did die on May 18 of the next year, and the disgusted underwriters (the company of those days) contested payment on the plea that he had lived twelve months of twenty-eight days each.

On His Guard.

"You say you have quit smoking?"

"Yep; never going to smoke again."

"Then why don't you throw away those cigars?"

"Never! I threw away a box of good cigars the last time I quit smoking, and it taught me a lesson."

The Story of a Castaway

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was a morning of early spring in New York harbor. On the shores of the two rivers that flow east and west of Manhattan Island and the great bay south of it yachts were being overhauled, their engines oiled, their sails repaired, their furniture uncovered. Indeed, everything was being done to prepare them for commission.

From the dock of a yacht club in the East river a party was pulled in a dinghy to a trim auxiliary craft anchored a short distance out in the river. It had already been prepared for a lengthy trip. They were Dr. and Mrs. Mortimer and their daughter, Evelyn, a girl of eighteen. Frederic Doerr, engaged to Evelyn, went out with the others to the yacht, but after going down the companionway, ostensibly to inspect the cabin, but really to bid each other a fond goodby, the young couple returned to the deck, and Doerr was pulled ashore. There he lingered while the anchor of the yacht was got up and began to steam down the river. Then, with a last wave, which was returned by his young fiancee, he turned away.

Dr. Mortimer and his family were bent on a cruise in southern waters. It was late in the season for a land trip to the south, but not on the ocean, and it was their intention to visit Cuba, the Panama canal and other objects of interest, remaining ashore only a day or two at a time.

They had reached a point off the coast of Florida and were steaming along at midnight in a fog when there came a crash. Those in their berths below arose, dressed hastily and went on deck. Down in the hold the water was coming through a hole. Dr. Mortimer examined it and, believing that the yacht would surely sink, went on deck again and told his wife and daughter that they had better prepare for such a result. Mrs. Mortimer preferred to die aboard the yacht rather than commit herself to the black waters, but Evelyn, remembering her lover and that it was her duty to try to live for him, suffered her father to get together articles for a raft, and when he had bound them together and lashed her to it he launched her upon the deep.

This was unfortunate. The water did not gain in the yacht as rapidly as had been expected, and when dawn came and the fog cleared away there was a steamer on the port bow not a mile away. Assistance was immediately afforded, and the pumps were manned. Before the day ended the yacht was in condition to pursue its journey and arrived safely at a Cuban port.

• • • • • • • •

The sun shone down on the stretch of white beach on the fringe of palms bending in the soft south wind.

Blake Worthing at the wheel of his motorboat idled in these pleasant Florida waters, wondering if it was time to return to his cottage on the beach and waiting for his mother's signal that luncheon was ready.

Something strange came bobbing over the waters toward him. In the distance it looked like a gray island. Later it resolved into various articles of a ship with a human being lashed upon it.

As soon as Blake made this discovery he turned the motorboat about and met the approaching raft.

When he had made it fast to his own craft he gently touched the sea soaked bundle of humanity and discovered it to be a girl—a girl so pale and lifeless that he believed her to be dead.

His mother met him at the little pier and took the bundle from his arms. She was a tall, majestic woman, strong and vigorous and young.

"Where did you find her, Blake?" asked Mrs. Worthing.

Blake told her in a few words.

"I'm going over to Barnacle after the doctor—do the best you can for her, mother," said Blake, as he changed his wet clothing and hurried off up the beach.

Mrs. Worthing put the castaway into her little spare room under the cottage roof, and with the help of Mandy, the maid, she endeavored to bring consciousness to the girl.

But in vain. It was not until after the physician had arrived and worked over her for another hour that at last the girl opened a pair of forgetmenot blue eyes and smiled faintly at the anxious face bent above her. Then she went to sleep.

She did not awake until morning, and Mrs. Worthing discovered that while she remembered many things about the dreadful wreck of a vessel bound for South America, she could not piece together her past life or identify herself completely.

"My name," she said slowly, "is Evelyn Ames—my father is Dr. Ames—and we were taking a vacation—father—oh, my poor father!" Then she broke down and cried because she could only guess her father's fate. She could not even remember where she had lived, and although Mrs. Worthing and her son labored patiently to brighten the dulled memory their efforts were in vain.

"Please don't bother about me. I cannot remember," she would cry wearily.

Mrs. Worthing was not ill pleased at this. She had always longed for a daughter, and now she proposed to adopt Evelyn Ames for her own. Blake, who had fallen in love with the beautiful castaway, smiled secretly and thought that if he had his way the stranger would be his mother's daughter, but she would also be his wife.

And in the meantime the Worthings could find no trace of the nameless vessel on which Evelyn had sailed for Rio Janeiro. There had been no vessels lost, and investigation showed that there was no physician by the name of Ames who might be the father of Evelyn. They advertised and wrote letters, and in the end they were no wiser than before.

Then one fair morning, while the sun shone on the summer seas and the wind murmured among the palms, Blake Worthing told Evelyn of his love. Blushingly she gave her heart and hand into his tender keeping. Mrs. Worthing, delighted at the outcome, gathered them both to her heart.

It was when the engagement had been two weeks old that a blow came to Blake Worthing. He was preparing to go to Barnacle, where the offices of his fruit industry were situated, when he heard a sharp scream from the front veranda.

He dashed downstairs and found Evelyn gazing, pale and wide eyed, at the ocean.

"Dearest, what is the matter?" he asked.

She shuddered and hid her face in her hands.

"Oh, Blake, I have remembered!"

"Remembered? That is splendid, dear. Tell me."

"My name is Evelyn Ames Mortimer—my father is Dr. Ames Mortimer of New York—and, oh, Blake, how can I tell you?" Her slender shoulders shook with sobs.

"Tell me," he gently urged.

"I cannot marry you," she breathed.

"Why not?"

"I have remembered"—tragically.

"You have remembered what?"

"That I am already engaged."

"You are engaged? You were engaged when you sailed away? And you had forgotten that?"

She nodded listlessly.

"Then you do not love me," he said, rising and drawing his hands away from her grasp.

But she clung desperately to him.

"Ah, I do—I do love you, Blake! That is the misery of it all. I look back and think of Frederic Doerr, and I wonder how I could have dreamed of marrying him."

"Let me think it over, Evelyn," said Blake as he went away. All day while he dictated letters or interviewed customers Evelyn's pale, frightened face came between. Toward night he sent a telegram to Frederic Doerr's address in New York, and the second day afterward he met him at Barnacle station and took him to the cottage.

Frederic Doerr was a tall, thin, dark man with grave eyes and a preoccupied manner. He appeared to be extremely nervous when speaking of Evelyn, although he talked freely of her father, Dr. Mortimer, who had been saved.

He told Worthing how the Mortimers had sailed on a private yacht, and in the excitement following a collision, with visions of immediately sinking, Evelyn had been lashed to a raft and cast adrift.

The storm tossed yacht had reached a Cuban port, and Dr. Mortimer, although giving his daughter up for lost, had made every effort to find her. It was strange that the threads of inquiry instituted by the Worthings and Evelyn's father had never crossed.

"She has told us of her engagement to you," said Blake in his blunt way. "You will want to see her alone, I suppose."

"If you please. I think you and Mrs. Worthing had better be present," said Doerr nervously.

So when Blake told Evelyn that he had brought her fiance to see her and that her father was still living her joy in the latter news was dampened by the approaching interview with the man she had ceased to love.

"I must keep my promise to Frederic," she assured Mrs. Worthing, as they descended the stairs. "He said once that he did not care to live if I would not marry him."

Mrs. Worthing smiled wisely, but her arm tightened around the shrinking girl's waist as they entered the living room.

"Evelyn!" cried Doerr, starting forward with outstretched hands. "How delighted your father will be! I wired him at once of your safety."

He made no attempt to embrace her, and Evelyn was manifestly relieved.

The Worthings turned to leave, but Frederic Doerr put out a detaining hand.

"Please do not go," he said, with embarrassment. "There is something I must confess, and Evelyn will need her friends around her. I am ashamed to say that"—his voice dropped almost to a whisper—"I have been faithless to Evelyn Mortimer, one of the sweetest girls God ever created! Believing her to be dead, I permitted myself to be attracted by another woman—and, to make a long story short, I am married. I am no longer free."

Frederic Doerr did not expect the demonstration that followed his news. Mrs. Worthing clasped her hands and cried for joy, while Blake opened his arms to receive Evelyn Mortimer.

"Why, nobody seems to care very much," remarked Mr. Doerr, with a whimsical smile.

Then Mrs. Worthing took him outside and explained, and while they were gone Blake and Evelyn sealed their betrothal with a long kiss.

"You belong to me, sweetheart," whispered Blake. "The sea gave you to me—you drifted into my heart."

A SINGAPORE DISH

Ricetafel Is Not a Mere Meal; It Is a Whole Banquet.

A SORT OF CULINARY MARVEL.

It Contains About Everything From Fish to Dessert, but Its Great and Crowning Delight Seems to Be the Highly Odorous Bombay Duck.

More odds and ends of humanity are thrown together here in Singapore than in any other city in the world. Singapore is halfway between Arabia and Japan, halfway between India and China. On the street they stream past—Sikhs, Tamils, Parsees, Armenians, Arabs, Malays, Mohammedans, Filipinos, Chinese, Portuguese, Siamese, Japanese, Javanese—as if they were made up for a procession, some with no clothes and some swathed in them.

Every day at noon on the bill of fare in Singapore you find a dish called ricetafel, which will live long in my memory. It is the most fearfully and wonderfully made dish in the world. It staggers the imagination to think of what it is composed. An ordinary intellect stands appalled when it begins trying to figure out what the dish is made of. Only a Kelvin dare try to resolve it into its elements.

The first day I ordered it in a reckless, care free moment. I had never heard of it before and supposed that it was just an ordinary single dose dish, but in a few minutes I began to find out that it was a tafel of another color. An ordinary sized boy came up bearing a plate of rice and gave it to me. Hardly had the boy turned aside when another boy came up with some meat. I piled on the meat, but just as I was picking up my knife and fork a larger boy came up bearing a plate divided off into sections piled to the cargo line with spices, cinnamons and other tropical products. I looked to see if there hadn't been some mistake, but his confident manner and bearing showed plainly that I was to put them on too. I did, even though it looked as if I were going on a cruise, and had just leaned back to study the mound when another bun bearer came up. I began on his dish and worked my way around, helping myself to the more prominent articles, and after he had gone on I picked up my spoon and was just wondering which side to make my first encroachments on when another outrider came up with another dish of odds and ends. After him came others, some little and some old, some shy and some bold, the line forming at the left and rhythmically tramping by, while I threw on and rounded up until it began to look as if the mound builders had gone back into business again. After the tail of the procession had gone by, I located a favorable spot and went to work.

These are some of the actual things that were in the final draft: Rice, curried meat, mincemeat balls, fried onions, shredded onions, white onions, banana fritters, hard boiled eggs, sliced cucumbers, Chinese macaroni, peanuts, French beans, Indian chutney, cocoanut, red fish, shrimps, fried fish, fried chicken, goose liver, chili, limes and Bombay duck.

I'll take my word for it that every single one of these destroyers was in my rice tafel.

I put Bombay duck last, for I know that the other ingredients would rather not associate with it. You could readily understand their attitude if you had once tasted Bombay duck, for there is no other thing its size in the world that makes such an impression on you. It has the worst odor of anything I ever went up against, and without wishing to boast I have smelled some things that were pretty pungent in their way, but for hard, consistent smelling day in and day out Bombay duck has them all in the Yankee division. In comparison with it limburger cheese has a delicate perfume.

How it ever got that name is more than I know. It is really a dried fish, which, broken and powdered, lends a seasoning, but as for myself I would rather take my seasoning in some other form. Old residents and missionaries who have been in the country a long time say that after a time a person comes to be very fond of it, but personally I know that there could never be anything between us—unless it was distance. It is all that I can do to stay at the table where one of the parties is an old resident or a missionary a long time in the service.

The people in Singapore do not call ricetafel a dish. They consider it a meal. And that's what it is. It looks as if it had been meant for the noonday repast at a Woodmen log rolling. Many and many a person here has ricetafel at noon and nothing else. In fact, after eating a ricetafel there isn't room for anything else. A person then wants to crawl off and go to sleep. And that is what everybody does in the suburbs of the equator. The shops all close at noon for a couple of hours while everybody lies down and sleeps off the effect of the ricetafel.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

Ancient Basket Makers.

The Worshipful Company of Basket Makers dates back to 1569, but basket making was a recognized craft in London more than a century before then. In 1403 basket makers "and other foreigners" were banished by the common council to the old manor of Blanche Appleton, and in 1538 even those English basket makers who were still permitted to live in the city were similarly dealt with, on account of their indifference to the danger from fire.—London Chronicle.

TIRES OF A MOTORCAR.

Why They Are Found Heated After a Long and Fast Run.

It is well known that after a long and fast run the tires of an automobile are found to be very hot, and many have supposed this is the result of the friction of the tire on the road. The Scientific American says that such is not the case, at least as to the greater portion of the heat.

"The real cause of heating," says that magazine, "is the internal friction of the tire itself, for as the tire is being constantly deflected by contact with the road the various plies, or layers, which compose the tire do not act uniformly, and consequently there is more or less motion between them that results in friction and heat. The greater the change in shape in the tire as it contacts with the road the greater will be the friction.

"Of course the harder the tire is pumped the less will be the friction, but it is evident that, while a perfectly rigid tire would generate but little heat, it would fail in giving easy riding. So we must put up with some heating and consequent wear of the tire. The subject is one that is being successfully studied by the tiremaker."

Hanged the Clever Forger.

Of curious petitions against the death penalty being enforced one recalls the eighteenth century case of William Lyland, who was sentenced for forging a bill for £7,114 on the East India House. The forgery was a work of art. No less than thirty signatures were imitated, and at the trial not one of the victims could swear that the signature was not his own. However, with the help of the paper manufacturers Ryland's guilt was brought home. Then came the petition of his friends. So clever a man ought never to be hanged, they pleaded. His craftsmanship should save him. It gained him a respite. He was allowed to finish a fine engraving he had begun, but nothing more. Though the engraver was a favorite of George III., that king quite failed to see how a forgery could be excused on the ground that it was a clever forgery.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Don't Talk Too Much.

Recently a voluble salesman was trying to close a deal with a good customer. The salesman was doing all the talking, and the buyer was becoming not a little annoyed. Several times the customer started to speak, but the salesman would choke him off and start on another line of argument. Finally the manager saw what was up and suggested to the seller that he allow the buyer to say something. This the buyer did and quickly. He said that he had been trying for half an hour to tell the salesman that he would take the goods. — Farm Machinery.

His Gilded Promises.

"Why did you break off the match? Didn't you love the girl?"

"Yes, I loved her, but I saw that our married life would not be happy. It was better to part in time, was it not?"

"I suppose so. But how do you know that your married life would not have been happy?"

"Well, I had promised her a grand piano and an automobile. In fact, I had made her more promises than I could keep."

Squaring Herself.

He—But I asked you, dearest, to keep our engagement a secret for the present. She—I couldn't help it. That hateful Miss Oldun said the reason I wasn't married was because no fool had proposed to me, so I up and told her you had.

All things are possible, except an ability to fool all the people all the time.

How can a man make both ends meet if he keeps perfectly straight?

Happy is the man who gets what he wants, and forgets what he doesn't.

to prevent its use as an alcoholic beverage.

Once again it is reported that the Emperor of Austria is dying, which has been a bad habit of his for some years.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

FORTUNATE INDEED is the baby who is nursed by its mother and who thus avoids the danger of summer complaint which follows in the track of dirty milk. But the baby must be weaned sooner or later! It cannot go on nursing forever. When shall the baby be weaned? The careful mother will endeavor not to wean the baby in very hot weather; and, while this is of importance, other considerations of equal or even greater moment must be taken into account by the nursing mother. A healthy child should be weaned at the ninth or tenth month. At the sixth or seventh month the front teeth appear. What does this mean? It indicates that the child is getting ready to take care of other food than the mother's milk. In weakly children the eruption of the teeth may be delayed somewhat, but whenever the teeth do appear they must be taken as a sign for new rations.

WEANING THE BABY

The weight of the baby, increasing as it should from week to week, is one of the most important indications of the baby's health. If all is going well, the weight increases steadily; if the weight is stationary or if baby is losing weight, it is evidence that the breast milk is unsuitable, and the baby should be weaned, or partly weaned, irrespective of age. If the mother is suffering from any acute or chronic disease, or if pregnant, the baby should be weaned.

As to the best time for weaning. Do not depend on the time of the moon or any such nonsense. All things being equal, the early spring or late fall is the best time.

When the first teeth appear along about the sixth or seventh month, substitute first one regular nursing with four (4) ounces of good cow's milk and two (2) ounces of barley water sweetened with a little sugar of milk. After two days substitute this for two regular nursings, and at the end of a couple of weeks the milk and barley water may be given alternately with the nursing. By the ninth or tenth month the breast may be discontinued altogether. In this way the baby will be weaned gradually and will not usually miss the breast.

The greatest trouble is with the anxious mother, who is apt to think that the baby is not getting enough. Many mothers think the baby is always hungry and they give it too much food; the more food the baby gets the more irritable it becomes. It cries not because of hunger but because its stomach is overfilled. The cry is interpreted wrongly and more food is given, making matters worse.

After weaning, the diet should comprise milk and barley water or milk with the broth of oatmeal, chicken or beef, some stewed fruit, orange juice, a crust of bread, and later a soft-boiled egg.

Be sure and give the baby plenty of pure water, and keep it in the open air as much as possible.

If the baby is fretful, keeping it in its cot or carriage in the open is the best sedative. Don't give it soothing syrup, paregoric, or any other dope.

The pulse is produced by the action of the heart forcing the blood through the arteries, just as a fire engine forces water through hose at a fire. The blood is sent from the left side of the heart through the arteries, capillaries, and veins of one's body to the right side of the heart, thence to the lungs, where it is purified by the air we breathe. From the lungs it passes to the left side of the heart and then through the body again. If one presses one's finger on an artery, such as the radial, on the instant an impulse is felt; this is the pulse. If, as is commonly the case, it beats 70 times to the minute the pulse rate is 70. Various factors influence the pulse rate. When one is lying down it is slower by seven to ten beats than when standing erect. In most diseases the purse becomes more rapid; in some instances rising in the same ratio as the temperature (which in a well person is 98 Deg. F.) For example a pulse of 110 should carry a temperature of 104 Deg. F., but there are exceptions.

THE PULSE AND TEMPERATURE IN CONSUMPTION

In typhoid fever, with a temperature of 104 Deg. F., the pulse would probably be lower than 110. In diphtheria the pulse runs higher, a temperature of 100 Deg. F. often giving a pulse of 120.

Some infections like diphtheria and tuberculosis stir the pulse-rate to a high degree. A consumptive with a temperature of 100 Deg. F. would likely have a pulse of 120. A very slight infection of consumption will raise the pulse five or ten beats, while the temperature may be raised very slightly.

THE NORTHEAST PASSAGE.

Only Two Expeditions Succeeded In Getting Through It.

Most attempts of European countries to find a comparatively short passage from the Atlantic to oriental countries were by way of the northwest passage, north of America, because, having first tried the northeast passage, north of Europe and Asia, and in every instance having met with dire failure, they concentrated attention upon the northwest passage as probably more feasible.

Practically all the arctic expeditions from Sir John Ross to Sir John Franklin were fitted out most of all to find the northwest passage. The passage was found during the search for the lost party of Sir John Franklin, but it was never traversed by a ship till Amundsen took his little boat, the Gjoa, through it in August, 1905.

The attempts to make the northeast passage began with the hardy Dutch sailor Barents in 1593, whose party was the first to spend the dark winter night in the arctic "in most greate cold and extreme miserie." The only achievement of the northeast passage prior to Vilkitski's success in 1914-15 was by Baron A. E. Nordenskjold, who sailed from Tromsoe with his Swedish expedition in June, 1878, triumphed over the great obstacle of Cape Chelyuskin and was within 120 miles of Bering strait when winter closed upon him. He entered Bering strait in July, 1879, thirteen months from the time he sailed.—Cyrus C. Adams

The Woodshed Test.

A city man, familiar with life in the country, uses the "woodshed test" to determine whether it is safe to lend a farmer money. If he finds a good stock of wood on hand, with plenty of it split and neatly piled and some split very fine, so that it will kindle easily, he concludes that the man is forehanded, looks out for his wife's comfort, does not spend his rainy days at the store and is a good risk. If the woodshed shows shiftlessness he refuses to lend.—Youth's Companion.

When Wagner Fled.

Richard Wagner, the composer, was an ardent republican in 1849. In the archives of Dresden there is a document setting forth a case of high treason against the musician. He was accused of having written to a friend a letter proposing to turn Saxony into a republic. "But whom shall we make president?" he asked. "I see nobody competent for the office except our present sovereign, Frederick Augustus II." Frederick Augustus does not seem to have appreciated the humor of the suggestion that he should doff the crown and content himself with the dignity of a republican president. For this flash of unconscious fun Wagner had to bolt to Switzerland.

Cottage Bedspread.

Nothing is more appropriate for the summer cottage than a bedspread decorated with colonial applique embroidery, which is nothing more or less than patchwork in a glorified state. Unbleached muslin is used for the spread, and it is bound with an inch and a half border of blue chambray. A design in vines and flowers is cleverly carried out, with blue and yellow chambray for the flowers and green for the vines. A long sham to cover both pillows may be worked out in the same manner.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

ROBERT WARWICK AT GRIFFIN'S TO-MORROW

By popular request of an appreciative public, the management of Griffin's Opera House, announce the appearance here to-morrow and Thursday evening of the popular dramatic star, Robert Warwick in a stirring 5-part Shubert photodrama entitled, The Flash of an Emerald, the story is as follows:—

Lucius Waldeck, (Robert Warwick) is a social vulture, preying on his friends and diverting suspicion by his gentlemanly graciousness. In a New York hotel lobby, he is attracted by the porter carrying in a sickly child. While thus engrossed, he sees a magnificent Emerald pinned in the dress of the child's grandmother. He determines to possess the jewel.

Mrs. Weston has gone to St. Ann De Beaupre, near Quebec, Canada, in order to appeal to St. Ann's for the recovery of her granddaughter, at the time of the visit of the pilgrims Waldeck follows.

During the procession of the pilgrims, Waldeck locates Mrs. Weston, who is still wearing her emerald. That night, he crawls up over the roof of the stable and gains admission to Mrs. Weston's rooms. He chloroforms Mrs. Weston, and repeats the same operation with the child and the maid. Then he secures the emerald. Later he passes himself off as a secret agent of the Russian revolutionists. He insinuates himself into the good graces of two ladies, to one of whom he presents the emerald. The lady is the daughter of the woman from whom he stole the jewel. Indirectly this leads to his undoig, and he commits suicide.

The part is a great one, and Mr. Warwick does it the fullest justice. Besides the above special 5-part offering, 3 other selected comedies and dramas will also be exhibited.

"THE FOURTH ESTATE" PLEASED MANY LAST NIGHT

While the 11th 2 part episode of "The Iron Claw" at Griffin's Opera House last evening, portrayed many incidents, in which Miss Pearl White, as Margery Golden, figured to advantage, and The Iron Claw experienced one more defeat, "The Fourth Estate," a 5-part masterpiece, featuring Samuel Ryan and Ruth Blair, was particularly fascinating. It was a thrilling story of political life in a great city, in which a learned jurist went wrong and a party boss carried a high hand, until a multi-millionaire, whose pretty wife the judge attempted to ensnare, purchased the Chicago Herald, and proceeded to deal out justice in spite of vicious threats. Many of the incidents, including a female intelligence bureau, which was used for immoral purposes, were only too true to life, and how Manager Dolan and Editor Brand got busy, even to the minutest detail, and photographed a couple of the society criminals, was well worth seeing. A tender love thread wends its way through the photoplay, giving it a charming trend. Also "Clothes do not Make the Man," proved a humorous skit, with a garrison finish. The programme will be repeated this evening.

"HER BITTER CUP" AT THE PALACE THEATRE

Another fine programme was screened at The Palace last evening, which included "Her Bitter Cup," a 5-part photoplay of rare merit, and touching the heartstrings of the large audience present. A woman in the case always attracts, but as in this story, when the woman is young and pretty, and modest and true, there is a groundwork worth while. Cleo Madison, in the leading role, proved a brilliant actress, and many of the scenes were intensely thrilling. Three other new and attractive comedy plays put a finishing touch on a splendid programme that will be repeated to-night. We might add that the new plan of ventillation renders this theatre a delightfully cool spot to spend an evening.

CIRCUS TO-MORROW

When the two trains of the Coop and Lent United Monster Shows roll in on the siding of the Grand Trunk Railway in Belleville early in the morning of Wednesday, July 19th, a goodly number of Mr. Jonnie old boys as well as crowds of eager little Jonnie young boys, their sisters and their cousins and their aunts are sure to be well in evidence for the interesting event.

There is an indefinable lure about the Circus that is never completely overcome—that compels interest and takes Mr. Old Boy back to the days when he was Jonnie young boy like the little fellows there that will be dodging ceaselessly everywhere but the right where, or rooted to the spot in gaping amazement as the travelling city of wonder is unloaded with a speed that makes their eyes bulge.

The Coop and Lent Shows are extensive and the Exhibition expensive. The bosses and mechanics of a well-regulated Circus are graduated masters in their different lines and like well oiled machinery their work fits like a unit, so that the loading and unloading of the trains the constructing and removing of the huge amusement institution day after day is one of the modern marvels of organization and execution and the ordinary beholder finds it difficult to comprehend how it is so smoothly accomplished, or in fact accomplished at all.

The Coop and Lent Circus is a 3-ring aggregation with numerous acts and features of high class American and European novelties of every arenic description, Fancy riding, Hippodrome speed contests, trained animals and a famous corps of graduate fun makers who intersperse their artistic nonsense and buffooneries throughout the entire whirlwind performance of skill, art, daring, beauty and sensation, providing a continuous two hours of keen enjoyment, wonderment and happiness for the multitudes of Jonnie old boys and old girls and little Jonnie young boys and young girls that are sure to be in the big canvas coliseum to-morrow.

The big street parade is declared by the Press of other cities. "A revelation in street pageantry." The cavalcade, fully a mile in length will leave the show grounds between 10.00 and 10.30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

MILITARY DIVINE SERVICE.

The Divine service at the camp on Sunday morning was the first to be attended by the men of the Depot Artillery Brigade, which came under canvas last week. The service was most impressive being conducted by Capt. T. Dodds chaplain of the 155th Battalion Captain Hagar, chaplain 156th Battalion, assisted in the service. The bands were out in force, playing sacred music and adding greatly to the beauty and simplicity of the soldiers' sacred hour. As usual the number of visitors present was large, and as a consideration a number of benches were in place for the use of the many ladies who motored over for the event.

The services are conducted on the parade grounds near the Y.M.C.A., the parade being at 9 a.m. They are attended by every man in the camp, as Divine service is considered one of the most important of parades.

FARM FURLOUGHS OF 154TH.

The applications for farm furlough from farmers of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry are beginning to pour into the office of Lieut.-Col. A. G. F. MacDonald, commanding the 154th Battalion. In certain cases the men before joining the colors were given the promise that they would be allowed to work on their farms for a couple of weeks during the harvest time, and now with such a shortage of help the promise is being kept.

NOTES.

Capt. H. O. Boyd, Army Medical Corps, has been detailed as medical officer to the 109th Battalion.

The bomb and grenade course is really proving itself to be one of general trench warfare as the instructors incidentally gave many hints to the men in attendance of the kind of work they will be called on to do at the front.

The flower-beds at the Ongwanada Military Hospital are being very much improved, and add greatly to the general appearance of this place. The soldiers who have been treated there seem to be more than delighted with the excellent service and the efficiency of the staff.

Hon. Andrew Broder, M.P. for Dundas, whose home is in Morrisburg, was in camp on Sunday, visiting his sons in the 154th Battalion. One son is a captain and the other is a sergeant in the signalling section of the Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry unit.

On Monday night the 109th Battalion paraded to the school grounds where a scheme of an attack on trenches was carried out. By using flares and other war-like equipment the result was likened as much as possible to actual service conditions.

The presence of the artillery at the camp has filled a gap caused by the transfer of the 130th, 136th and 139th Battalions to Valcartier. As soon as the recruits begin to come in, the camp grounds will be filled out more in the rear, as at present the line is only at the front. The solid line from the 109th to the Y.M.C.A. adds greatly to the general appearance of this part of the camp.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh, looking, bright, fluffy wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

The Algonquin Provincial Park of Ontario is a region of extensive lakes abounding with the gamest of fish, of hurrying streams, primeval forests of pine, spruce and fir, where almost every species of Canadian fauna roams in freedom; cool winds; ideal camping spots and sylvan retreats—everything, in fact, that is dear to the heart of the lover of outdoor life. 2,000 feet above sea level, 285 miles west of Montreal; 170 miles west of Ottawa and 200 miles north of Toronto. This unspoiled tract of 1,754,473 acres is one of the most attractive playgrounds of Canada. Unlimited attractive canoe routes, splendid fishing purest of air and great opportunities for the kodak operator. For those who desire city comforts in the wilderness there are hotels and log cabin camps.

To Canvass For Recruits

Names of Eligibles and Non-Eligibles to be Secured— Result of Conference

KINGSTON, July 17.—A canvass will be made of the Third Military District for the purpose of ascertaining the men who are eligible to go to war. This was decided at a conference of military men and civilians from different parts of this military district. The object of the conference was to devise ways and means to stimulate recruiting.

A resolution was passed to the effect that a system of registration should be adopted.

One or two of the speakers advocated conscription, but no vote was taken on the matter, as the meeting seemed to feel that such a step would be impracticable at the present time.

Lieut.-Col. E. G. Williams, chief recruiting officer for Canada, occupied the chair, and seated on the platform were Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams, chief recruiting officer for No. 2 military district; Lieut.-Col. Hamilton, special recruiting officer, and Lieut.-Col. Mulloy.

Lieut.-Col. Williams.

Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams was the first speaker. He referred to the number of men Canada desired to raise for overseas service, namely, 500,000. Of that number 340,000 had been enlisted, and the remaining 160,000 could be raised without paralyzing the industrial life of Canada. To secure the number needed there should be perfect organization and effective inspiration. Conscription was impossible at the present time; the Government had given its mandate. The only coercion possible was the coercion of moral sentiment and public conviction. The private citizen, the press, which had proved itself to be the best coadjutor of the recruiting officer.

ANCIENT MUSEUM FOUND

Discovery Is Made in Palace of Pharaohs

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 17.—The museum of the University of Pennsylvania has just made public a report from Dr. Clarence S. Fisher, leader of the Sckley B. Coxe, Jr., expedition to Egypt, in which he tells of what appears to be the discovery that Meremptah had in his palace at Memphis an archeological museum something like those of the present day. Meremptah was the son of Rameses the Great and by many is identified as the Pharaoh of the oppression as described in the Book of Exodus.

The palace was discovered early in the present year, the report said. It was large and elaborately decorated, but at some time was destroyed by fire, traces of which are abundant. The palace was about 180 feet long and 100 feet wide and contained about twenty rooms.

The throne room was a magnificent chamber of about 60 x 40 feet. In describing this room the museum announcement stated that "it is probable that this throne room, if not the same one, is similar to the one in which Moses and Aaron confronted the Pharaoh demanding that the people of Israel be permitted to go. The authorities in Egypt admit that a great discovery has been made."

In the throne room were found gold ornaments, scarabs, vessels for various purposes, and vases.

Women Will Take Place Of Soldiers

Mrs. W. Fred Jackson Elected Vice-Chairman of Women's Emergency League

KINGSTON, July 17.—A local branch of the Women's Emergency League was organized here when delegates from the places in the third military district met. The objects of the league are to secure women to take the place of men in the shops and stores and also to stimulate recruiting. The league will also aim to place returned soldiers in positions.

The first meeting was held in the red room at Queen's, where Mrs. (Col.) Hemming, Mrs. W. H. Macnee and Miss Gordon had charge of the lunch. The decorations were supervised by Mrs. Hugh Nickle. Delegates were on hand from Belleville, Perth, Brockville, Cornwall, Prescott, Napanee and locally. After luncheon the delegates attended the meeting in the city hall and then adjourned to the council chamber where a discussion on organization was held. Mrs. G. H. Ogilvie was elected chairman of the central committee: Mrs. W. Fred Jackson, of Brockville, vice-chairman, and Mrs. (Captain) Campbell general secretary.

The district was arranged in sections; Mrs. Douglas, of Perth, having charge of the east and Mrs. MacColl of Belleville, the west. The district heads for Cornwall and Bowmanville will be selected later.

FLOATING DIAMONDS

A curious story of diamonds found floating in the North Sea was told recently in a London court when two trawler deck hands were charged with being in the unlawful possession of 98 polished and 75 unpolished diamonds.

One of the accused made a written statement, in which he said: "About five or six weeks ago I was engaged in sweeping for mines, when I saw a package floating in the water. I got a boat hook and picked it up and took it on board. No one saw me. I took it to my bunk and opened it, and found it contained brilliants, afterwards coming to the conclusion that they were good stones.

"We had no orders to report anything of the kind. I threw the outer cover away. When I got seven days' leave I tried to sell them to a jeweller at Cardiff: 'He had not enough money to give me, and told me to come to Holborn Viaduct.

"I took them to Messrs. Bax & Strauss, and they rang up the police."

Artillery Fighting Vigorous — Allied Advances in Hand grenade Battle

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 19.—(Afternoon statement.)—The night was calm over the greater part of the front. Two surprise attacks delivered by the enemy against small French posts, one in Belgium in region Paschendaal, the other north of the Aisne, near Paezzy, were repulsed by our fire. On the Verdun front east of Meuse, artillery fighting continued very vigorously in the sector of Fleury. We made some progress with grenades near the Chapel of Sainte Fine.

THREATENED TO THROW CONSTABLE IN WATER

Two Noisy Drunks Were Taken to Police Station and Afterwards Released

KINGSTON, July 18.—Two Italians who had been loading up on beer during Saturday afternoon, were at the Wolfe Island ferry wharf about eight o'clock on Saturday night, and were very noisy. Constable Earl Jenkins ordered them to keep the peace, but the men from sunny Italy did not take very kindly to the remarks of the officer, and in reply to his request to be good, threatened to throw him into the harbor. Constable Jenkins then took them in charge and landed them in the police station. The men did not attempt to carry out their threat and were placed in a cell with very little trouble. The men were allowed out on Sunday.

Another drunk was also given his liberty, and as a result there was no session of the Police Court on Monday morning.

BOY DROWNS IN CREEK

BROCKVILLE, July 18.—A sad accident occurred about 11.45 this morning, whereby Edgar Buell, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. N. Buell, Brock street, lost his life in the west-end creek at the rear of the skating rink.

The little lad was down in swimming with another boy of his own age and apparently got beyond his depth, in what is known as "The Well", which is a hole about eight feet deep in the centre of the creek at that point.

ALL NIGHT FIGHTING IN WOOD OF DELVILLE

Germans in Dense Masses Deliver an Assault, Bringing Terrific Artillery Fire to Bear on Allied Forces — Offensive Finally Breaks Down Under opposing Fire—Remainder of Front Quiet

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 19.—Official announcement in full says:—"The enemy's attacks last night, the beginning of which have already been reported, was directed against our new positions east of Bazentin village. Very large German reinforcements had been collected for this attack. After an intense artillery fire, the first assault was delivered in dense masses at about five-thirty yesterday afternoon. Fighting continued all night and was particularly violent in Delville Wood.

After suffering very heavy losses, the enemy succeeded in recapturing part of Delville Wood and also obtained footing in northern outskirts of Longueval. The struggle in these areas is still violent. Elsewhere the attack, including three separate assaults on Waterlot Farm, it completely broke down under our fire. On the remainder of our front there were no events of importance.

First Appeal Ends In The Bilingual Case

Second Appeal Called on and is Consolidated With the Third

On the fifth day of the hearing of the Ottawa Separate School appeal, before the Privy Council, in London, Sir John Simon replied for the appellants on the whole case, but His Lordship gave no indication what the decision would be. The second appeal was subsequently called on, in which the appellants are the same, and the Ottawa Corporation and Separate School Commission are the respondents. This appeal was consolidated with the third appeal by the trustees, in which the Quebec Bank and the Ottawa Separate School Commission were the respondents. Sir John Simon remarked that he said he other day in his reply to the Lord Chancellor that the decision in the case just concluded did not necessarily decide the questions in these latter appeals, which hung together. If their Lordships had intimated their judgment in the first appeal, it would be for his clients, the trustees. Then he thought it would only have been necessary to have briefly mentioned what this appeal was about, as he believed if the first appeal was allowed this second appeal would be not so arguable by the respondents. The trustees in this case brought actions against the respondents, claiming injunctions to restrain the corporation from paying to the Commission, and the latter from receiving the school rates, collected by the corporation for the trustees. The action against the Bank and Separate School Commission was for an injunction to restrain the bank from paying to the Commission moneys of the trustees deposited in the name of the appellants. In that case, too, actions were dismissed, and the hearing adjourned.

FANATIC KILLS FOUR THEN DIES WITH WIFE

CHICAGO, July 19.—Special—A negro religious fanatic, becoming violently insane yesterday, shot four persons to death, wounded three, and was himself killed with his wife after 150 police had dynamited the house in which he was barricaded.

Hundreds of shots were exchanged between the crazed slayer, H. J. McIntyre, and the police, who besieged his flat in a two-storey brick structure at 320 North Irving avenue. After three charges of dynamite had been exploded and an attempt made to fire the structure with gasoline, McIntyre and his wife, who were armed with powerful rifles, were shot to death. The police were held at bay for more than an hour.

Enemy Plan to Sink Everything

Germany No Longer to be Deterred by Regard For Neutral Interests

BERLIN, July 19.—(Special.) —The active campaign for the resumption of submarine warfare in its previous form has assumed new importance from an article by Eugen Zimmerman, General Director of The Lokal Anzeiger, whose views, as past events have shown, usually reflect the opinions held in Governmental circles.

Referring to the reasons which Great Britain gave for abandoning the Declaration of London, Herr Zimmerman contemplates the possibility that Great Britain will compel smaller neutral States to adopt an unfriendly, perhaps a hostile, attitude towards the Central powers, or even to close their frontiers completely against them. He then cites in heavy type his own comment on Germany's acceptance of the American demands in regard to submarine warfare, indicating that circumstances might arise later which would make it impossible to adhere to the restrictions on the activity of these crafts.

RETIREMENT OF GERMANS ON EASTERN FRONT

Russians Break Austrian Fighting Machine in Volhynia — Germans Vainly Try to Retake Trenches in Riga Region Cossacks Lead Advance of Brusiloff's Troops Through the Carpathians

LONDON, July 19.— Special — A Petrograd despatch to The London Telegraph states that a general retreat of the Austro-German forces on the eastern front has commenced.

The Germans and Austro-Hungarians are laying waste the country and burning villages as they fall back.

This retirement follows the futile and extremely costly efforts of the Austrians to stem the Russian onrush in Volhynia. Yesterday's official report from Petrograd says that, judging from the amount of war material abandoned, the Austrians retreated in great disorder.

The Russians are now pounding the new positions of Gen. von Linsingen, south of the Lipa, where the Germans stopped to make a stand after retreating across the river.

Cossacks are leading the advance of the Russian troops through the southern ranges of the Carpathian Mountains.

North-west of Kimpolung Pass, in southern Bukowina, Russian cavalry is advancing along the road between Kirlibaba and Maramaros Sziget, says a press despatch from the Russian front yesterday.

This information indicates that the Russians have advanced about fifty miles since the capture of Radautz, pushing past the formidable mountain barriers which had been strongly fortified by the Austro-Hungarians.

(Maramaros Sziget is the capital of the Hungarian country of Maramaros. It lies on the Theiss River at the western foot of the Carpathiains, and is [illegible] miles east of Budapest.)

Prospect of Great Crop

Sir Donald Mann, Back From Western Trip, Says Outlook is Remarkable

TORONTO, July 19.—(Special.) —"I have been building railways in the Canadian west and have been through the western country every summer for 37 years, but I never saw the crops look so good as they do at this time or promise a harvest so abundant," declared Sir Donald Mann, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway system, to a press reporter yesterday upon his return from an inspection tour that carried him to the Pacific coast. "I went out by the northern route through Edmonton," he continued, "and back by the southern route through Calgary. I was over the grain-growing districts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Everywhere indications are for the biggest crop in our history. It seems hardly possible, of course, that we can exceed the wonderful crop of 1915, but we certainly will not fall below it. The 1915 crop to-day looks better than the 1915 crop did a year ago."

German Party Leader Asks For Voice in Policy

ROTTERDAM, July 19.—Special—The most important conference in many months in Germany was held yesterday in Berlin. For over five hours Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg was in secret conference with the leaders of all parties.

A discussion of foreign policy is believed to have claimed the greater part of the time of the conference and consideration discussion took place in connection with repeated demands that the political leaders of all parties should have a greater share in framing the policy of the war.

Capture Four Lines Leading Into Hungary

Russians Achieve Three Important Advances at Widely Separated Points

PETROGRAD, July 19.—(Special.) —Although the issue of the struggle between the opposing forces in the region of the Stokhod River still hangs in the balance, and there has been during the last few days no essential change in the situation along the main Russian front, the Russians have achieved three important advances at widely separated points in the eastern war theatre.

The first is the successful drive from the new quarters in Volhynia, southeast of Lutsk. The second in an advance of the extreme southern wing of General Brusiloff's forces along the high road leading into Hungary, and the third is the improved situation in the Caucasus resulting from the taking of Baiburt. In the first region the Russian operations are now being directed against the left wing of Gen. Boehm-Ermolli's army near Sviniusky, which has already yielded ground before the fierceness of the Russian assault. Of the four Austrian army groups employed against Brusiloff's forces Boehm-Ermolli's group had been the least affected by the Russian offensive, and after its initial withdrawal from Dubno at the beginning of the Russian campaign, has held its ground firmly against all the Russian attempts to push the advance to the Galician frontier town of Brody.

NUMBER OF GERMAN CASUALTIES ON SOMME FRONT 150,000

With the British armies in France (via London), July 19. —(Special.)—Quite a number of German prisoners told me that their people were sure this war would be over in August or September. They had been promised that.

"Do you think you are winning?" I asked a man of real intelligence.

"We thought so," he answered, "and now," he raised his hands and shrugged his shoulders, "the British are stronger than we believe."

It seems that they did not believe that such defences as those of Fricourt and Montaubon could ever be broken. The new power of the British artillery amazed them. They speak of it with terror. Officers admit they did not imagine "amateur gunners" could achieve such results. They admit the possibility of their army having to retire to a new line of defence, but I have not found one man to speak of defeat. They are still convinced that the German army can never be beaten to the point of surrender.

On the other hand, German soldiers do not want the war to go on; they have a great craving for peace. They want to see their wives and children again.

The Germans suffered great loss during the attack, by their own admission, and it was reckoned, on a fair estimate, that in killed, wounded and prisoners the number of their casualties is somewhere near 150,000 men, including those inflicted by the French.

SEND ENEMY DOWN RIVER

General Smuts Telegraphs Success in German East Africa

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 19.—Telegraphing yesterday, General Smuts says the German forces which endeavored to operate against his communications north of Handeni and on the Hamabara railway between Korogwe and Tangah, have now been driven down the Pangani river, abandoning a field gun. The clearance of this area is proceeding satisfactorily.

General Smut's report also says: "On the southern shore of Lake Victoria a force under General Crowe having embarked at Kongoro occupied Munza Friday night, the enemy evacuated the town after a slight resistance, leaving many rifles, some supplies and a naval gun of the cruiser Konigsberg in our hands. The majority of Europeans in the German force fled southward on the steamship, pursued by our armed lake vessels.

Military Matters At Barriefield Heights

SUBJECT OF MUCH DEBATE

The question of battalion funds has aroused a great amount of interest, and so many inquiries have been received from civilian friends of the soldiers that the Kingston Whig has been making some inquiries to determine the facts as shown by battalions which have been trained at this centre.

"It will cost, over and above what the Government provides, at least $10,000 to equip a battalion," said an officer in command of a battalion. "The Govment provides all that is necessary for a unit, and there is very little not provided even when the unit is organizing and recruiting," said another officer.

There has been a discussion as to whether it was necessary to have a good deal of money at their command to equip a battalion with necessaries unprovided by the Government. The concensus of opinion among experienced active service officers is that the Government provides enough, even for recruiting and organizing. Officers raising units and training soldiers are just as positive the other way. There are about five principal items which may be chosen as features of the expenditure. These are as follows— Brass band, bugle band, field kitchen, mess tents, typewriters.

Capt. Campbell For Recruiting.

It is understood that Capt. Campbell, chaplain of the 146th Battalion, will be retained for some time as recruiting officer of the 3rd Military District. Capt. Campbell will be given the rank of major. The captain has made a success of recruiting for the 146th, and is a hard worker and a good recruiting officer.

A COMING EVENT

The coming of Miss Florence Wharfen, of Toronto, the well-known reader and entertainer, to the "Y" tent on Wednesday, July 26th, is being anticipated with much pleasure by the men in camp. Mrs. (Capt.) Dodds, Mrs. Evans, soloist of Queen street church; Miss Rosevere, soloist of Cooke's church, and Mr. R. Hudson, soloist of the "Y" camp, will take part in the program. Miss Radgers, Miss Nesbitt, and Mr. Hudson, will act as accompanists for the evening. Col Hemming has consented to preside.

GUARD ON BAKE SHOP

To prevent any possible interference with the making of the bread, a heavy guard has been placed at the camp bake shop in the Army Service Corps lines. This is a most important move, as a person mentally deranged or wishing to do harm might easily do immense damage by contaminating the bread used by the soldiers.

Serious Trouble

A visitor to a training camp was astonished at the extraordinary number of black eyes and bruised faces of the soldiers. "What on earth's the trouble?" he asked a corporal friend of his. "Had a row with the next regiment, that's all," replied the corporal in an offhand tone. "Why, what about?" "Oh, the beggars set a sentry to watch their shirts while they were hanging out to dry."

He Married The Widow

Lt.-Col. Bedell gave one of his men leave of absence for one month to work on a farm. At the expiration of the month he asked for two months, and now comes back and asks that his leave be extended to three months. The two months leave was granted but Col. Bedell thought that he should draw the line somewhere, and drew it at two months' leave of absence. The man has since married the widow that owns the farm and seems to prefer life on the farm with his newly-wedded wife, to drilling in Barriefield with the 156th Battalion.

Train in Canada.

The decision of the Minister of Militia to organize and train two infantry divisions for direct transportation to France from Canada means that battalions will be trained during the winter in the Dominion. Much interest is taken at Barriefield Camp in the significant announcement from Ottawa.

Minister With 109th

The Minister of Militia will likely be going overseas about the same time as the 109th Lindsay Battalion, and, according to the best information will make a special effort to be in England for their reception if unable to accompany them from their embarking port.

NOTES

Lieut.-Col. M. K. Adams, commanding the 155th Battalion, spent the week-end at Picton

The warm weather brings out the need for shower baths, which are in great demand between parade hours.

The camp detention compound situated near the rifle ranges does away with the battalion compounds, and frees six men from each unit from guard duty.

The next machine gun course will commence on Thursday, July 20th. Three N.C.O's from the 154th, 155th, 156th, and 207th Battalions will take the course, and three officers from the 230th, 235th and 240th Battalions will also attend the school.

Lieut. McGhie and Lieut. Young, of the 155th Battalion, will be the instructors of the next machine gun school.

Lt.-Col. Wilson has returned to camp after spending the week-end with his family in Belleville.

Captain Hagar, chaplain of the 156th battalion, received 1,000 copies of the New Testament yesterday for distribution amon gthe men of the 156th. These testaments are secured from the Bible Society, and are bound in khaki colored covers.

Two deserters of the 155th Battalion were put off the train at Frederickburg, and lance-corporal Welsh of the military police was sent after the men. He was compelled to walk 14 miles from the railroad for his men, and unaided brought the two men back to camp. The Corporal is being complimented by the camp authorities.

HORSE WEIGHT FOUND

A horse weight found upon the street is at the Police Station awaiting an owner.

GRANTED ONE MONTH

Capt. Wm. H. Hudson, who was wounded with shrapnel some time ago, has been granted one month's leave before his return to the front.

TORE CHILD'S DRESS

Mrs. Taylor, residing on Bettes street, reports to the police that a dog which she alleged belongs to a neighbor, yesterday tore the dress of her little girl. The canine fortunately did not bite the child, but naturally frightened her.

LIKE OLD TIMES

It seemed like old times to meet and greet Bandsmaster E. R. Hinchey, of the 155th Band, on Front street this morning. With others of the battalion he is spending a few days at home.

WILL LAY CORNER STONE

The corner stone of a new Roman Catholic church at Wolfe Island, will be laid on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Archbishop Spratt will officiate, and at 9 o'clock will hold confirmation, for which there are a large number of candidates. A large number of priests of the diocese are expected to be present.

OVERCOME BY HEAT

Mr. Henry Patton, a bandsman in connection with the 155th Battalion band, who is in the city on leave for a few days, was yesterday afternoon walking along Catherine street, near Coleman street, when he was overcome with the heat, and fell heavily to the walk. The unfortunate man was immediately taken in charge, and after being partially revived was taken to the hospital. His condition to-day showed improvement. Bandsman Patton was staying with friends in the city, as his home is in the west.

County Court Criminial Case

Before Judge Deroche, without a jury, yesterday Alex. Walkingshaw and Peter Coveney of Campbellford, were on trial on a charge of assaulting David Livingstone, occasioning him actual body harm, at the Township of Rawdon, on June 8th last. Walkingshaw preferred a similar charge against Livingstone, and both charges were disposed of at the same sitting, the evidence in the one case being taken by consent of all parties as the evidence in another. Walkingshaw, Coveney and two others were passing Livingstone's place in a car, and Livingstone alleged they ran him into the fence, and later Walkingshaw got out of the car and attacked Livingstone, who in self-defense used a knife on the former, inflicting three wounds half an inch deep Walkingshaw and Coveney denied the charge and submitted evidence to show that Livingstone threw stones at the car and that when Walkingshaw came back to ask him what he meant, Livingstone used the knife, and Walkinshaw knocked him down. The case lasted from 10.30 A.M., to 5.30 P.M. yesterday, when Judge Deroche found Coveney not guilty and discharged him. Walkingshaw and Livingstone were found guilty and were fined $100 each. Wm. Carnew, County Crown Attorney, appeared for the Crown; A. A. Abbott, (Trenton) for Livingstone, and W. D. M. Shorey, and A. A. McDonald, (Marmora), appeared for Walkingshaw and Coveney.

A PROFITABLE SEASON

The dairying season in Canada has been an excellent one and the cheese production of the Dominion will probably this year reach record figures, say Ottawa authorities. Prices are higher and exporters are finding little difficulty in securing adequate ocean tonnage. The Admiralty has made arrangements for space in the transports. The average sailing from Montreal is about one steamer per day. The total export will in all likelihood be two hundred million pounds as compared with one hundred and fifty millions last year. Western Canada is now supplying its own dairying needs and there is a surplus from British Columbia.

Accuracy is Demanded

It won't do to guess what time it is—not these days.

Every man that "does things" must own a watch that he knows will stand by him.

If it won't do that, then he should let us fix it so that it will do that.

Don't wait to have it done, hand it in at once.

It is bad for the watch to neglect it and inconvenient for you. Does this apply to you and your watch?

Advice---Often Worth Heeding

—particularly when that advice refers to habits that directly affect one's health and comfort.

Thousands, annoyed by headaches, nervousness, biliousness, sleeplessness, etc.—often due to tea or coffee drinking—have heeded a friendly suggestion to quit both tea and coffee and use

Instant Postum

This pure food-drink is made of wheat, roasted with a bit of wholesome molasses. It has a rich, snappy flavor, fine color and aroma, and it contains no caffeine—the drug in tea and coffee—nor other harmful element.

Freedom from caffeine gives Nature right of way to rebuild and revitalize the mental and physical forces.

There are two forms of Postum: The original Postum Cereal must be boiled; Instant Postum, a soluble form, is made in the cup by adding boiling water—ready instantly. Some prefer one, some the other; they are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

With most tea or coffee drinkers the change to Postum marks the start to better health and greater comfort.

THIS IS THE 638TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

PREDICTIONS.

It is recorded of the late Sir John Macdonald, that when asked by a newspaper interviewer what the policy of the Government was to be upon an important question then agitating the country, replied "He did not know as he had not seen the Morning Globe."

Sir Robert Borden will not be able to give such an answer, after reading the Toronto Telegram's correspondent of a late day, in which it is stated that—

> "A big Cabinet shift at Ottawa is indicated by private information obtained from a well informed source here.
>
> "The information is to the effect that Sir George Perley will not return to England, but that Sir Robert Borden will succeed him as Canadian High Commissioner.
>
> "The Premier, the story goes, is to be raised to the peerage as a recognition of the part Canada has played in the war. Sir Thomas White is to succeed Sir Robert Borden as Premier, and a shift in Cabinet positions all along the line must necessarily result.
>
> "It is said that Sir Robert Borden has long since tired of being pulled hither and thither by the opposing forces in the Government. He has also cherished a secret ambition to fill the high post at London, and now that the turning point of the war has been reached he feels that he may with honor withdraw from a position for which he has felt he was never fitted and which was never to his liking.
>
> "Premier Borden is wealthy, and has the qualifications to make him a satisfactory High Commissioner.
>
> "But there would be interesting times at Ottawa after his departure, for the 'machine' Conservatives, whatever they may think of Sir Thomas White's business ability, have serious doubts as to the completeness of his political education."

The Telegram is fast rivaling the Globe in prophesies.

STANDING ON OUR OWN FEET.

The frequent thrust from over the political fence, that Canada is financially speeding at breakneck speed, possesses about as much foundation as the German claims of victory in the Jutland naval battle. There is little need of retabulating the financial statement for the first three months of the present fiscal year; the shrinkage shown in domestic expenditures is too well known to call for publication.

Nor is it true that Canada is being bled by unnecessary taxation. The war measures of the Government were designed to bear upon those who had either done well out of the war in a business way or else were in a position to bear liberal taxation. They were not intended to and have not borne heavily upon the masses while agriculture is exempt from all special imposts.

The truth is that a calm survey of the national situation reveals the Dominion in a state of exceptional prosperity. Our industrial condition was never stronger or more promising. There is scarcely an idle factory between Halifax and Vancouver. Unemployment is practically unknown, and wages are the highest in the history of Canadian labor. Farmers are producing more and getting more for what they produce than at any time in the past. Earnings of our transportation companies are enormously in excess of other years. Bank deposits by the people are the greatest on record. And all indications point to one of the most successful and biggest crops since 1911.

Unlike Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in days gone by, the Borden Government does not claim to be the sole fountain and source of this gratifying national prosperity. Some of it is due to conditions brought on by the war, some of it to the genious and enterprise of Canadian business, a great deal of it to our splendid national resources, all of it, primarily to a bountiful Providence. But the Government can lay claim to having fostered by wise and beneficent administration the natural growth of a country and people richly endowed with natural resources and the intelligence to develop them.

THE DANDELION—ITS USES.

While gardeners are saying many unkind things about the poor little dandelion and seeking means to eradicate it from their lawns and boulevards, people in other parts of the world are actually cultivating and making money out of it.

The root of the dandelion has for many years been recognized as one of the most useful of medicinal herbs, being specially valuable in the treatment of liver disorders and dyspepsia. It is also regarded as one of the most potent remedies for that very common complaint known as spring fever.

Besides the commercial value of the dandelion root, the little plant has edible leaves which, when boiled, form an agreeable substitute for spinach and other greens at a much earlier period of the season than any other plant. And, that nothing of the plant may be wasted, the flower is used for making so-called dandelion wine, which is not only pleasant to the taste but can develop what is known as the "kick" quite as well as other commercial waters.

For many years America has imported the bulk of its dandelion roots from Europe, but now the weed is being extensively cultivated in this country and men are making money out of it. They sell the leaves in the early season for greens, make wine from the flowers, and find a ready market for the roots among the manufacturing drug houses of the country.

But it is not likely that even this certificate of character will serve to turn the wrath of the average Canadian away from the little plant. The work of destruction will go on against it just as vigorously as ever. Like many other things, it may be all right in its place, but out of it, it is a pest and a general nuisance.

When Prussia says that she is fighting for peace, she is speaking the truth. She is fighting for the only kind of peace which she understands, the peace which follows universal submission to the commands of authority, the universal destruction of liberty among men.

This doctrine is the central feature of Prussian Kultur, and is preached by its adherents as the conquering gospel of the twentieth century. The crowning achievement of mankind, so they say, the creation of the German people under the direction of the Prussian genius, is the development of the super State, of an organism irresistible by virtue of its physical strength, and the devotion of its subjects to itself, which will eventually give peace and good government to all the peoples of the earth.

MENNEN'S SHAVING CREAM

As a result of the trouble with Mexico the lesson of unpreparedness must surely have been brought home to the people of the United States. It must be admitted that the country was not prepared when the call arrived, and if it had been a first-class power, instead of Mexico, that was embroiling it in trouble, the consequences would have been too terrible to imagine. In no way has its national weakness been more forcibly demonstrated than in the failure of the air corps, a most important and vitally necessary part of any army. The European war has clearly shown the tremendous value of the aeroplane in modern fighting, and yet the comparison of the American Republic's aerial defence with that of any foreign nation would be ludicrous if it were not so serious and alarming.

Toronto News: It is satisfactory to note that in supplying the needs of the Allies we have relied more largely than before upon our natural resources, using comparatively little material of foreign origin. In the making of munitions about 17½ per cent. of the material is purchased abroad, and as material represents 26 per cent. of the cost of the finished article, 99½ per cent. of the whole cost is disbursed in Canada. For the fiscal year 1917, already three months old, the foreign trade returns are well maintained. Exports of foodstuffs and munitions are still remarkable, owing to the large surplus from last year's grain crops still available for shipment and to the improvment of output from munition plants.

Current Comment

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, of the Rockefeller gold belt, assures the electors of North York that service is the only basis of true citizenship in the Dominion.—Toronto News.

General Sir Sam Hughes, who has left Ottawa for Montreal, will not probably return to the Capital for some months, and probably not until the close of the war. It is said that he will inspect and reorganize the Canadian reserves in England, and then proceed to the front to take an important command.

Very little has been heard of the big International Bank to be formed by the Entente Allies to aid in the trade war against the enemy countries after the war, if not before. Germany owed her large export trade mainly to her systematized banking all over the world. The Entente Allies have learned their lesson.—Kingston Standard.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes has been seen in many roles. His latest appears to be that of the great sleuth. According to a despatch from Ottawa he now announces that he has "got to the bottom of the trouble at Camp Borden."—Toronto Star. The Star has no need for longer worry. If Sir Sam has arrived at the bottom of the trouble there is already a hole punched through and the trouble has run out. Let the incident rest there—beneath the bottom.

It is impossible to read without emotions of pride, admiration and gratitude the despatch of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe describing the great naval fight off Jutland, which is printed in full in British papers just to hand. Written simply, and even baldly, it yet conjures up a vivid picture of naval warfare as it is waged to-day with modern weapons of precision and destruction.—Toronto Star. But the beauty of the description lies in the tribute Sir John paid to the hero who led the battle—Sir David Beatty. This is true magnanimity.

Early Sunday morning a thief took a tire and rim from a Ford car standing on Queen Street, between Clergy and Barrie Streets. The theft was seen by a baker who was returning from work and knew the thief, and he communicated with the owner of the car. The police have been notified and are looking into the case. The owner of the car knows the number of the tire and there was also a mark on it by which it can be identified.—Kingston Standard. It appears to take the Kingston police a long time to get in motion. If Belleville police had been up against the incident the thief would hours ago have been arrested, tried, sentenced and now working out his prison term. Astonishing how slow some folks are.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

"Very possibly, Holman, this may be best," he said calmly. "I might be unwise, under the circumstances, if I said very much: I wish, however, that you would do me one favor as quickly as possible."

"Certainly," Holman said readily. "Any favor consistent with my duty. What do you want?"

"I want a telephone message sent without delay."

"To whom?"

"To Nick Carter, the famous detective. Have him informed of my situation and say that I need him here at once. No more will be required."

Nick smiled inwardly. This faith in the promise he had made the previous night pleased him. If he had been fond of dramatic display, he could have whipped off his disguise and revealed himself with sensational effectiveness—Hawkshaw fashion. It was not in his nature, however, thus to sacrifice the slightest advantage that might be otherwise derived.

Yet he had a purpose of his own to serve, a promise to make good. He stuck to his colors, and would not yet believe that Fenno had committed this crime, despite the terrible evidence against him. He wanted to investigate for himself, and ask questions which he plainly saw that Holman, who was convinced that the murderer of Judge Packard had been caught red-handed, would not think of asking.

Nick paved his way to so doing with characteristic artfulness. Stepping nearer, before Holman could respond to Fenno's request, at which he seemed somewhat surprised, he said pointedly:

"Pending the arrival of Nick Carter, Mr. Fenno, I can be of some service to you."

"You, sir?" Fenno exclaimed, staring at him.

"Yes, undoubtedly," bowed Nick. "As you are now under arrest, and Detective Holman so sure of your guilt that he naturally will seek only for further evidence with which to convict you, it is quite necessary that you should have an officer look for points in your favor. The sooner that is done, moreover, the better. I will do so at once, Mr. Fenno, with your sanction."

"But I do not know you, sir, nor whether you are capable of——"

"No, nor I," cried Holman, interrupting, a bit resentfully. "Who the dickens are you, anyway, that you presume to interfere?"

Nick smiled and lifted the lapel of his vest, displaying a small silver badge.

"Detective Mouser, of the Central Office," he blandly said.

"But I know no Mouser in the Central Office," Holman growled perplexedly.

"You are not acquainted with all of the men employed in Mulberry Street," returned Nick. "Besides, I am a very intimate friend of Nick Carter, who, if he were here, Mr. Fenno, would tell you that I can serve you nearly as well as himself. As for Holman, I'm sure he'll be very glad to have me discover anything in your favor. Let's see what we both can make of this case, Holman, working together. There may be something you have overlooked."

It would have been a very simple matter for Nick to have asserted his authority as a Central Office man and taken the case entirely out of Holman's hands. Knowing that the latter might be able to give him some little information, however, which a feeling of resentment might lead him to withold, Nick took this more assuasive way to accomplish his object.

He had only one reason for thus concealing his identity. He instinctively felt that Andrew Todd would, sooner or later, put in an appearance on the scene of the crime; and, since his interview with him in the office of the district attorney, Nick chose to hide the fact that he was making a personal investigation of circumstances surrounding the murder.

Without waiting for a reply from Holman, who yielded graciously enough to Nick's last suggestion, he turned to the man who had testified to seeing Fenno thrust the disguise in his pocket, and bluntly asked:

"Why did you enter this room?"

"Why?" echoed the man, briefly nonpulsed by the abruptness of the question.

"Yes, why?" nodded Nick. "You must have had some reason. Was the door open?"

"No, not open," the stranger now hastened to explain. "It was ajar, however, and I heard the fall of something heavy, quickly followed by a hollow groan. I was directly opposite the door when I heard the sounds. Naturally enough, I pushed it open to see what was the matter."

"And you saw——"

"I saw Fenno just starting up from the body, his hands red with blood, and a knife lying on the carpet near by. I rushed in here with my friend, Mr. Baxter, from whose room we had just come, and—well, that covers all I can tell you, except that Fenno put up an ugly fight when we first seized him."

"That was only because——" Fenno began.

"You keep quiet," said Nick, with a gesture. "What you say here may be used against you. I'll handle this affair for you, Mr. Fenno, and I may be able to puncture somebody's tire before I'm done with it. What's your name, sir?"

"My name is Frank Parsons. That of my friend is Joseph Baxter. He lives here in the house, but I reside on Eighty-third Street."

"Where is your room located, Mr. Baxter?"

"At the farther end of the adjoining corridor.

"Did you see any persons in the corridor while you approached this room?"

"No, sir," Baxter replied. "A young lady came through the corridor while we were waiting for Detective Holman, however, and she glanced into this room, the door of which was then wide open. I think she fainted, sir, for I saw her reel backward, uttering a scream, and then heard her fall. I did not dare leave Fenno, however, to go to her aid. That was just before Detective Holman entered."

"I heard her scream and saw her lying there," said Nick, turning abruptly toward the door. "We'll see whether she—— Ah, here is Doctor Blaney, I judge. Step in doctor, and examine this body. Note every point that might be of weight on the witness stand. I will rejoin you in a moment."

Solely had returned, accompanied by a middle-aged man of professional appearance, both of whom Nick waved into the room while he was speaking, then stepped out and quickly closed the door.

For the news of the crime had begun to spread, despite Holman's precaution, and an increasing throng had gathered in the corridor. Yet not more than five minutes had been required for the inquiries already made.

Nick glanced sharply around and saw at once that two persons had vanished.

One, the dark woman who, he felt sure, had silenced with a look some disclosure Fenno would have made.

The other, the girl clad in navy blue, who fainted.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 17.—Winnipeg wheat closed ⅜c lower for all three months today. Oats were ¼c lower for July, ⅜c higher for October. Flax was ⅜c higher for July, ⅜c lower for October and ¼c lower for December. The reason of the slight decline, in face of the strong cables and black rust reports, was that the advance on Saturday was too quick. The trade was extremely nervous and the prices kept hopping about within narrow limits.

The trade was medium, mostly spreading. Exporters were on both sides of the market, but no new business was reported. Cash demand was only fair.

IS IT CASE OF SUICIDE.

Had Bullet Wound in Temple and Revolver Lying Near.

WINDSOR, July 16.—With a bullet from a 32-calibre revolver in his right temple, the body of a man, as yet unidentified, was discovered late Sunday afternoon a few yards from the Detroit River, at the rear of the Giradot Wine Company's factory, Sandwich.

Jos. Bondy, who made the discovery, found a revolver by the side of the man, who had evidently been dead for about an hour, according to Dr. J. S. Labelle, coroner for Essex County. There were no marks on his clothing beyond the name of "Simon Ackerman" on the coat collar.

The dead man was well dressed in a black suit, wearing tan shoes and a white straw hat. He was about 30 years old, five feet nine inches tall, and weighed about 175 pounds. In one of his pockets was 42 cents.

ESCAPED FROM GERMANY.

Winnipeg Soldier Reached Holland on the Second Attempt.

When Henry Saunderson, a private in the 8th Battalion of Winnipeg, got through a certain wood in Germany he didn't "hullo," because he was ignorant of the fact that he had crossed the invisible boundary line which set him in a neutral instead of an enemy country. Nor was it for him so neutral as it might have been. He fell into the hands of Dutchmen friendly to the English who took him to the British Consul, with the result that he landed in London a few days ago, says John Kidman in The Mail and Empire. His clothes were ragged (they were "borrowed"), but otherwise he was in fairly good condition, as fortunately, though taken a prisoner at Ypres on 25th April last year, he was not wounded. This was the second attempt Saunderson had made, his first try at escape some months ago being frustrated. Moreover, he smarted for it under the blows of a heavy iron cable, and also had branded upon his jacket the letter "E" (eweglaufen), proclaiming his attempt to escape.

The tale which Saunderson had to tell was not so horrible as some of the stories one has heard from returned prisoners, either military or civilian. At the outset he narrowly escaped being shot by German soldiers who were advancing in a threatening way to all their prisoners. The officers, however, restrained them, and were generous enough to admit that the Canadians had put up a good fight.

Munster camp was the destination of the captives, and their journey was delayed by the fact that one of our aeroplanes had dropped bombs on the station where they entrained. After some time the men were attached to working parties and sent to work in a mine. With no knowledge or experience in underground work the Canadians refused to go down the shaft, and persisting in their refusal were allowed to work on the surface. The hours were from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., and the food was sparse and poor in quality. Potatoes, bread and soup, with very weak coffee, were the staple articles of food, and these allowances were generally handed over to Russian prisoners as long as the Canadian Red Cross parcels were received. Saunderson asserted that his parcels reached him without fail, and that they were opened in his presence.

The first attempt at escape was made last September, when, after picking up some civilian clothes in the mines, Saunderson and two companions made a bolt. For three days they wandered about, living on fruit and nuts, and traveling only in the darkness. In their excitement on leaving they forgot the small parcel of food which they had put up for their needs. In the darkness they got separated, and Saunderson lost sight of his friends. Shortly before he reached the frontier he was spotted and taken back. Before leaving the camp he had bought a map and pair of compasses, which later stood him in good stead. On being taken back to the camp Saunderson was put into a basement cell and given a diet of bread and water, and the following day he saw his companions in distress brought back also. That night the guard, consisting of some sergeants and men, took the captives and scourged them with an iron cable, their mouths being gagged by a man's hand to suppress their cries. Later they were put on trial as fugitives and were given a fortnight in jail. Although they told about the irregular beating dealt out by the sergeant, no notice was taken of the complaint.

A change to farm work early this year offered the second and successful chance to get away. Armed with a map and pair of compasses, Saunderson started out with an Irish Fusilier in the direction of the frontier, and hugged hedges and walls. One night was passed in an empty house. This time the parcel of provisions had not been overlooked. It contained biscuits, bully beef, a tin of jam, chocolate, and malted milk, and never was the kind thought of the Canadian Red Cross more appreciated. Munster was 60 miles from the frontier, and after six days' marching by night and hiding by day, the two men found themselves in a rather thickly-wounded country. They came to a church and recognized that the notices were not in German. Saunderson's companion, who had picked up a little Flemish, enquired where they were and found that they were in Holland.

Few Diamond Finds.

Much prospecting work was carried out by the different diamond companies in South West Africa, prior to the outbreak of the war, but no important diamondiferous deposits were discovered. With regard to the main claim holdings, a recent report states that except in so far as the Pomona area is concerned the richest and most accessible areas of gravel have been worked out. The deposits at Pomona, while of phenomenal richness, are shallow and of limited extent, and they have already in great part been exhausted. Vast resources in the form of low-grade material still remain, and as improved methods for recovering the very small stones are introduced a considerable quantity of stones is expected from this field.

Impressions of Toronto

THE following estimate of Toronto is taken from the late Rupert Brooke's "Letters from America," which has just been published. Rupert Brooke, it will be remembered, was killed at the Dardanelles.

"Toronto (pronounce T'ranto, please) is difficult to describe. It has an individuality, but an elusive one; yet not through any queerness or difficult shade of eccentricity; a subtly normal, and indefinably obvious personality. It is a healthy, cheerful city (by modern standards); a clean-shaven, pink-faced, respectably dressed, fairly energetic, unintellectual, passably sociable, well-to-do, public-school-and-'varsity sort of city.

"One knows in one's own life certain bright and pleasant figures; people who occupy the nearer middle distance, unobtrusive, but not negligible wardens of the marches between acquaintanceship and friendship. It is always nice to meet them, and in parting one looks back at them once. They are, healthily and simply, the most fitting product of a not perfect environment; good-sorts, normal, but not too normal; distinctly themselves, but not distinguished. They support civilization. You can trust them in anything, if your demand be for nothing extremely intelligent or absurdly altruistic. One of these could be exhibited in any gallery in the universe, 'Perfect Specimen; Upper Middle Classes; Twentieth Century;' and we should not be ashamed. They are not vexed by impossible dreams, nor outrageously materialistic, nor perplexed by overmuch prosperity, nor spoilt by reverse. Souls for whom the wind is always nor'-nor'-west, and they sail nearer success than failure, and nearer wisdom than lunacy. Neither leaders nor slaves—but no Tomlinsons!—whomsoever of your friends you miss, them you will certainly meet again, not unduly pardoned, the fifty-first by the Throne.

Such is Toronto. A brisk city of getting on for half a million inhabitants, the largest British city in Canada (in spite of the cheery Italian faces that pop up at you out of excavations in the street), liberally endowed with millionaires, not lacking its due share of destitution, misery, and slums. It is no mushroom city of the west, it has its history; but at the same time it has grown immensely of recent years. It is situated on the shores of a lovely lake; but you never see that, because the railways have occupied the entire lake front. So if, at evening, you try to find your way to the edge of the water, you are checked by a region of smoke, sheds, trucks, wharves, storehouses, "depots," railway-lines, signals, and locomotives and trains that wander on the tracks up and down and across streets, rushing their way through the pedestrians, and tolling, as they go, in the American fashion, an immense melancholy bell, intent, apparently, on some private and incommunicable grief.

Higher up are the business quarters, a few sky-scrapers in the American style without the modern American beauty, but one of which advertises itself as the highest in the British Empire; streets that "seem less narrow than Montreal, but not unrespectably wide; "the buildings are generally substantial and often handsome" (the too kindly Herr Baedeker). Beyond that the residential part, with quiet streets, gardens open to the road, shady verandahs, and homes, generally of wood, that are a deal more pleasant to see than the houses in a modern English town.

Toronto is the centre and heart of the Province of Ontario; and Ontario, with a third of the whole population of Canada, directs the country for the present, conditioned by the French on one hand and the West on the other. And in this land, that is as yet hardly at all conscious of itself as a nation, Toronto and Ontario do their best in leading and realizing national sentiment. A Toronto man, like most Canadians, dislikes an Englishman; but, unlike some Canadians, he detests an American. And he has some inkling of the conditions and responsibilities of the British Empire. The tradition is in him. His fathers fought to keep Canada British.

Toronto, soul of Canada, is wealthy, busy, commercial, Scotch, absorbent of whisky; but she is duly aware of other things. She has a most modern and efficient interest in education; and here are gathered what faint, faint beginnings or premonitions of such things as Art Canada can boast (except the French-Canadians, who, it is complained, produce disproportionately much literature, and waste their time on their own unprofitable songs). Most of those few who have begun to paint the landscape of Canada centre here, and a handful of people who know about books. In these things, as in all, this city is properly and cheerfully to the front.

One must say something—what must one say about Toronto? What can one? What has anybody ever said? It is impossible to give it anything but commendation. It is not squalid like Birmingham, or cramped like Canton, or scattered like Edmonton, or sham like Berlin, or hellish like New York, or tiresome like Nice. It is all right. The only depressing thing is that it will always be what it is, only larger, and that no Canadian city can ever be anything better or different. If they are good they may become Toronto."

St. Catharines, Ont.—"Two years ago I was in a very nervous, generally run-down condition, so that I awoke in the morning more tired than when I retired. The doctors thought I had heart trouble and treated me for it but I got no benefit. I heard of Dr. Pierce's remedies through a friend who had been to your Invalids' Hotel for an operation (which proved entirely successful) and I at once got the 'Favorite Prescription.' I took three bottles altogether and at the end of three weeks I felt entirely cured and have been well and strong since, without a single bad spell. I stopped taking it about three months ago and am glad to tell any one how splendidly your medicine has healed me."—MRS. JOHN LEWIN, 53 Niagara St., St. Catharines, Ont.

The mighty restorative power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

FINEST IN THE EMPIRE

FIVE THOUSAND MEN ARE TRAINING AT PETEWAWA.

Canada's Artillery Camp Is Now in Active Operation and Is the Scene of the Most Thorough and Strenuous Training—Concentration of Batteries Is the New Method in Modern Warfare.

CANADA'S great artillery school this year is at Petawawa. Men and youths of all ranks, and of all stations of life who have elected to serve their country in the big ordnance departments of the Canadian Expeditionary Force have been sent from all artillery depots in the Dominion to this camp for complete training—a training that is something new in the development of an active service army. Heretofore it has been the practice to train individual batteries at depots for early transference overseas where the syllabus is complete and more effectual. As a result of lessons learned at the front of the complete dependence upon artillery preparations for offensive measures by the infantry, the artillery is trained en masse, because in Europe the artillery will have to work in greater bodies than even brigades, in order to make any pronounced impression upon the modern German ordnance. The idea of making the training as complete as possible in all the details of its work on Canadian soil before transference overseas also played a great part in the decision of the Minister of Militia to have all the artillery of the Dominion concentrated in one camp.

Amid the scenic wonders of the Laurentians and the isle-dotted Ottawa River, the camp is enchantingly situated. On high ground on the south shore of the river, and planted on the wooded hillocks of the plateau, the camp proper, with all the permanent and fully-equipped administration and supply offices, is ideally situated. No lengthy camp lines weary the eye, because they are hidden away among the trees, where the weary soldiery, after many a hard day's toil in a broiling sun, may repair for a night's restful repose instead of suffering in a sometimes super-heated bell tent exposed to all the vagaries of the elements.

Winding lanes, neatly fenced, laid out as though to please a landscape gardener rather than the precise military mind, add touches of beauty and picturesqueness to the camp. Unless the visitor is given a guide he will experience difficulty in reaching his destination. Camp engineers have labored in these wilds against ruthless nature. Modern macadamized roads that would put many provincial cities and towns to shame, spread like a spider's web across, through, and round about the camp. At the entrance, over the Petawawa River, a huge new concrete viaduct has been erected which enables the artillerymen to draw their heavy guns into the camp on a level road, rather than perform the hitherto almost impossible task of carrying them down and up the steep banks of this raging torrent. For this improvement the troopers offer up their sincere thanks.

During the past few weeks many wonders in camp development have been worked, and it is claimed that no camp, not even some of the British permanent camps excel it. During these days 5,000 men have moved in. The first brigade to arrive was the 13th, from Military District No. 3 (Ontario), with headquarters at Kingston. This brigade includes the 50th, 51th, 52nd, and 53rd Batteries. Then followed the other brigades; the 12th, from Military District No. 2 (Ontario), which includes the 47th Battery from Hamilton, the 48th from Toronto, the 49th from St. Catharines, and the 54th from Brantford. The 14th Brigade includes the 55th and 56th Batteries of Guelph, the 57th Battery of Quebec, and the 66th Depot Battery of Montreal. The 15th Brigade comes from extreme east and west. It includes the 58th Battery of Fredericton, N.B., the 59th Battery of Winnipeg, the 60th of Regina, Sask., the 61st of Lethbridge, Alberta, and the 62nd of Victoria, B.C. The 4th Divisional Ammunition Column includes units from Montreal, Halifax, and Kingston.

Every university in the Dominion is represented in these units, as are most of the trades and professions. Men that have held lectureships in the seats of learning, others who had embarked upon promising careers in the professions, many who had entered the large financial institutions, etc.—they have given up all to follow the fiery cross. Commissions they spurned, preferring the rough and ready life of the rank and file so long as they were doing their duty.

Dominated by the passion to get into the game and bring it to a proper issue with all possible speed, the men, under the capable guidance of their no less interested officers, have surprised older military men by their exceptional adaptability to the rigid requirements of the new business. After eighteen days together, these men, by their exploits on the parade ground, their work at the guns and at drill, have become the pride of the district commanders, and have earned merited applause from the Governor-General, H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, who has passed through the artillery school himself and knows what it means. Men who a few weeks ago knew practically nothing of soldiering and its requirements are to-day experts in military exercises, gun-laying, signalling, telegraphic work, and all the intricate requirements of a modern artillery battery. Their capabilities in this regard have been tested by experts, who declare the achievements of these embryo soldiers to be "excellent."

When Tolstoy Tried to Fly.

From earliest childhood Tolstoy was remarkably observant of the things that were going on in the world around him. Thus, while still in his teens, we find him taking an interest in the art of flying that was too practical to suit his devoted mother. With characteristic thoroughness he invented a design of his own and with equally characteristic courage proceeded to put it to an immediate test from a second story window. But the boy who was afterward to find food for thought for the whole civilized world was not destined to make his mark as an infant aeroplanist. He fell instantly to the ground, and, though by great good fortune no bones were actually broken, the concussion was so great that young Tolstoy afterward slept for sixteen hours on end.

A Curious Relic.

A curious relic of Louis XVII. is the "game of dominos" made of pieces of the Bastille which were given to the dauphin before he and his parents left Versailles forever. It is said that when the box containing it was brought in the queen exclaimed to her bedchamber woman, Mme. Campan, "What a sinister plaything to give a child!" The sinister plaything is, with other revolutionary objects, preserved in Paris.

Suits Some; Death to Others.

"Iron may be good for the blood of some," remarked the worm as the angler threaded the hook through him gently, "but I fear it will be the death of me."

And yet the fish that swallowed the iron a little later was quite carried away with it.

"You might say so, yes."

Made in Canada

Why Canada is a Dominion.

Even a child will talk correctly about the "Commonwealth" of Australia, or the Indian "Empire," and no one would apply either of those terms to Canada. Canadians are accustomed to take the expression of the "Dominion" of Canada for granted; but the origin of that somewhat unusual term is known to very few.

When the great scheme of Sir John Macdonald was finally realized, and the nine provinces grouped themselves together into one great confederation, a serious difficulty was presented by the choice of a suitable name. For a time almost a deadlock ensued.

At length one old member of Parliament rose from his seat and told his colleagues that he had read in his Bible that very morning the words: "His dominion shall be from the one sea to the other." Accordingly he suggested that Canada should be known as the Dominion, or God's Land. The suggestion seized upon the hearts and imaginations of those present, and it was promptly acted upon.

Canadian Wheat Sent to Italy.

The Trade and Commerce Department has completed the shipment of all the wheat commandered by the Government last Fall which is to be sent to Italy. The total is 11,416,000 bushels. In all 15,000,000 bushels were commandeered, but the balance has been returned to Canadian millers.

Free Serums.

The Provincial Board of Health has distributed serums free since February 1 to the value of about $16,000. It is calculated that by the end of October about $25,000 worth will have been provided.

Fifteen men of average weight are equal to one ton.

Workmen's Diamonds.

In a certain vault in a room in the Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa repose thousands of diamonds. They lie there without the protection of time locks and armed guards. No burglar alarms provide scientific precautions against their abstraction for the reason that no such attempt is feared.

The explanation of such immunity is to be found in the fact that the stones, though they are diamonds, are not of the precious variety. They are of the kind known as industrial diamonds, used by glaziers, steel manufacturers and for other such purposes. The British Government has ruled that they must not be exported, even to Canada, except through the Trade and Commerce Department, and accompanied by a sworn statement by the importer as to their destination. The reason is that the diamonds are of use in many branches of manufacture connected with the war, and it is desired to keep them out of the hands of the enemy. Their actual value, however, varies from a few cents to some forty dollars each, depending on their size.

Dental Corps' Work.

Interesting figures, showing the enormous work performed by the Canadian Army Dental Corps, are found in the recently-presented report from that corps for the period from July 15, 1915, to March 31, 1916.

Altogether 201,610 dental operations were performed upon officers; of this number 66,079 were extractions. The total number of fillings was 86,887; total treatments, 15,304; total dentures, 10,898; total prophylaxis treatments, 10,710; total devitalizations, 11,732, making altogether the above-mentioned number of operations.

Three hundred and ninety-two officers received dental attention during the nine months covered in the report.

Followed the Bathers.

Few eligibles can escape the ubiquitous recruiter in these days, and the young fellows who sought refuge in the swimming pool at High Park on Sunday received a watery shock. Two recruiting sergeants also dived in and came up like submarines alongside of the sportive and sent a torpedo question into him without the slightest warning.

STORY OF A LAWSUIT.

Queer Way in Which an Umbrella Case Was Decided in Poland.

The Central Law Journal says that the old fable of the lawyers and the oyster, in which, the ownership of an oyster being contested, the lawyers ate the oyster and gave a shell to each of the litigants, is matched by a story of a lawsuit which a Russian journal relates as entirely authentic.

In a city of Poland, it appears, two men came into court with a suit over the ownership of an umbrella which had been left in a restaurant. Each one introduced evidence to prove that the umbrella was his. Being unable to match the wisdom of Solomon by dividing the umbrella between them, the judge postponed the case. Pending its decision the umbrella was left in the judge's private room.

Later, as he left the court to go home, the judge found that the weather was rainy. He went back to his room, took the umbrella which was in litigation and spread it over his head in the street. On his way home he went into a restaurant and left the umbrella on the rack, and when he was ready to leave the place he found that it had been taken away by some unknown customer. Then he bought another umbrella and took it to his courtroom.

When the case came up the litigants were confronted with it, and neither was able to identify it as his own. The court thereupon fined them both for invoking the law on a frivolous pretext, and they departed empty handed and decidedly "nonsuited."

THE IDEAL CITY.

A Vision of What May Perhaps Come to Pass in the Future.

A city, sanitary, convenient, substantial; where the houses of the rich and the poor are alike comfortable and beautiful; where the streets are clean and the sky line is clear as country air; where the architectural excellence of its buildings adds beauty and dignity to its streets; where parks and playgrounds are within the reach of every child; where living is pleasant, toil honorable and recreation plentiful; where capital is respected, but not worshiped; where commerce in goods is great, but not greater than the interchange of ideas; where industry thrives and brings prosperity alike to employer and employed; where education and art have a place in every home; where worth and not wealth give standing to men; where the power of character lifts men to leadership; where interest in public affairs is a test of citizenship and devotion to the public weal is a badge of honor; where government is always honest and efficient and the principles of democracy find their fullest and truest expression; where the people of all the earth can come and be blended into one community life and where each generation will vie with the past to transmit to the next a city greater, better and more beautiful than the last.

An Ancient Idea of the North Pole.

The north pole is the place of greatest dignity in the world, and the people who dwell near it "have a wonderful excellency and an exceeding prerogative above all nations of the earth." How blessed we may think this nation to be, for they are in perpetual light and never know what darkness meaneth, by the benefit of twilight and full moons, as the learned in astronomy do very well know, which people, if they have the notice of their eternity by the comfortable light of the gospel, then are they blessed and of all nations most blessed. Why then do we neglect the search of this excellent discovery, against which there can be nothing said to hinder the same?—"Hakluyt's Voyage" (Sixteenth Century).

Got His Reply.

A funny man indulged in a practical joke recently. He put an advertisement in a paper for a wife and requested each candidate to inclose her carte de visite. It was a foolish thing to do, but one of the candidates served him out very well by sending the following letter: "Sir, I do not inclose my carte, for, though there is some authority for putting a cart before a horse, I know of none for putting one before an ass."

Fast Fliers.

The great German naturalist Gaetke relates that with the aid of a telescope in his observation of migrating birds he had seen the plover and curlew, not fast flying birds as we know them, travel four miles per minute, 240 miles per hour, in the attenuated air of high altitudes.

KEEPING WAR RECORDS.

Historical Material is Being Preserved at Ottawa.

Some interesting details are given in a report which has just reached the Government from Sir Max Aitken on the joint establishment of the Canadian representative at the front and the Canadian war records. Sir Max first entered on his duties as Canadian Eyewitness single-handed, but is now assisted by a considerable staff of wounded soldiers, who are engaged in the compilation of history which they had helped to make.

As regards the "Eyewitness'" reports, Sir Max states that the rigid censorship of the early days of the war, which made the sending of connected narratives impossible, has been relaxed, in many quarters this change for the better being attributed to the Canadians' determined initiative. Lieut.-Col. R. Manley Sims, D.S.O., a British army officer lately resident in Canada; Capt. T. G. Roberts, and Lieut. W. F. Bradley have been responsible for the preparation and compilation of the communique.

The Canadian War Records branch of Sir Max Aitken's activities is engaged in the task of putting in order all material which will ultimately be required for the Canadian archives and for the use of Canadian historians, including the diaries of various regiments, brigades, and other Canadian units' reports, photographs, maps, drawings, etc. The records so far completed have been brought only so far as the second battle of Ypres. Every effort is also being made to keep the British press informed as to the doings of the Canadian troops in the field, "publicity for Canada during this war being inseparably bound up with Canada's credit."

An official photographer, Capt. H. E. Knobel, has been appointed, and is now compiling full photographic records of all towns, positions, and trenches occupied by Canadian troops. Arrangements have also been completed for cinematagraph operators to take films of the Canadian troops in the trenches and in action. These will be exhibited, not only in Canada, but in neutral countries throughout the world.

The Canadian representative also undertakes the circulation among the troops at the front and in England of a daily news bulletin from Canada. The Canadians are the only soldiers to enjoy such a special news service.

Indians Make Own Dyes.

try are complaining of the shortage

Manufacturers all over the country are complaining of the shortage of dyes, but Chem, better known as "Steve," an Indian and a manufacturer of British Columbia, worries not. Chem goes calmly on, using the dyes that his tribesmen, Clayquots, have used for generations.

He makes his own dyes, and whether any more are ever imported from Germany, or whether American chemists solve the secrets, are alike matters of supreme indifference to him. So long as his klutchman and his tenas, or in English, his wife and daughter, retain their strength he will pose as a manufacturer and turn out the same mat and basket goods, having the same bright colors as the utensils his forefathers used as berry containers and cooking vessels when the foot of the white man was foreign to these shores.

All the specimens of the handiwork of the Indian women shine forth in gay colors, and all colors are obtained by the klutchmen, according to the simple process known for thousands of years. The black, and it is a black that will not fade, is obtained by covering the rushes, grasses, or bark with the black mud of the swamps, which gives a lasting jet equal to any imported dye; the red is obtained from the bark of the alder, pink from a weaker solution of the same bark, brown comes from the familiar tanbark of the hemlock, and yellow is boiled out of the root of the Oregon grape.

LET IN THE LIGHT.

Faded Carpets Are Not as Pitiful as Faded Cheeks.

Fresh air enthusiasts are familiar enough to most of us, but we hear less of enthusiasm for light. Darkened parlors, darkened bedrooms, darkened sickrooms are too common.

Sir B. W. Richardson, the eminent London scientist and physician, declared that when the professors of healing enter a sickroom their first words in most cases ought to be Goethe's dying exclamation, "More light, more light!"

The light of the sun is God's own microbe killer, germicide, disinfectant, prophylactic, sickness healer. There is no physician, no chemical antidote, no compounded prescription to be compared with sunlight. Without it nature could not perform her functions. Man, beast, bird, insect would fall victims to the deadly gases that would prevail. The horrid mists and deadly gases are dispersed and decomposed by the action of light.

Let it in, everywhere! Let the light in more and more abundantly. Faded carpets are not as pitiful as faded cheeks. Spoiled cushions are trivial compared with spoiled health. Darkened rooms are too suggestive of darkened lives.—Christian Herald.

AFTER-WAR PROBLEMS.

English Writer is Making a Study of Canadian Views.

To study the attitude of Canadians toward problems which will confront the British Empire after the war, and to do some literary work, Mr. R. F. Farley, of London, is making a tour of Canada, and is now spending a short time in Toronto. Mr. Farley is the writer who was selected to add to Green's "Short History of the English People" the history of the past century. He is a contributor to Hibbert's Quarterly and to other well-known English reviews and an extension lecturer at London and Oxford Universities. At the conclusion of his visit to Canada he will go to the United States to deliver a series of lectures on social conditions on the Continent of Europe.

Mr. Farley is one of those who believe that the overseas dominions will have to be consulted before any new plan of Imperial organization is adopted. Therefore, he was loath recently to express an opinion as to the lines upon which reorganization to bring about closer relations between the different sections of the Empire should take place. The vast majority of the people of the British Isles, he thought, felt that there should be closer union and more co-operation between the different parts of the Empire. As to the manner in which these ends were to be attained, however, most men were not yet prepared to speak. There was a feeling that the commercial bonds between Great Britain and the overseas dominions should be strengthened; and, in view of the necessity for meeting German competition in the world's markets after the war, a lot of people who were formerly free traders were ready for some measure of protection.

"My own personal view," said Mr. Farley, "is that under present circumstances this question of free trade and protection is not the most important one. My reason for thinking so is that from a study of Continental countries I have come to the conclusion that those countries which are prospering are doing so not because of their policies of free trade or protection, but because of their internal organization and their systems of education."

Germany, he said, was ready in 1870 to embark upon her career of industrial and commercial expansion, because even at that time she had a good system of commercial and technical education. The German people were trained, technically and industrially, as no other people were. In their country and in Switzerland young people were compelled to attend the technical schools, whereas in England and Scotland, where there were some splendid institutions of the kind, attendance was voluntary. The reason for the success of Holland and Denmark in agriculture was to be found in the high standards of general education among their people and in the facilities provided for training along special lines in agriculture. Furthermore, the Dutch and Danish people showed on the average more adaptability and a greater desire to meet the wishes of foreign customers than many producers in the British Isles. There were in England more believers in state experiments now than there were before the war, and it was possible that there would be a large increase in state activities for the benefit of the whole community. It would seem desirable that the British Government, having assumed control of the railways of the British Isles for the period of the war, should take them over as a national undertaking. The British people, too, should be more prompt to avail themselves of new inventions to increase their efficiency. They should apply science to agriculture, industry, and commerce.

"I feel," said Mr. Farley, "that it is desirable, with a view to recovery after the war, to devote very special attention to mitigating or curing the social evils which became so prominent before the war. A policy of this kind is essential because it will be necessary, if we are to meet the demand for increased productivity, to protect young life, and to keep our people healthy and to make them as efficient as possible. Most good people hope and believe that the breaking down of barriers between class and class and section and section of our population will be a lasting feature of our national life."

Not Forced to Go Back.

The question having been raised whether British subjects, ordinarily resident in Great Britain, but at present living abroad, should return to enlist, the Army Council will be glad, according to a cable which reached the Dominion Government recently from Right Hon. Bonar Law, Colonial Secretary, if it could be made known as widely as possible that they do not intend at present that provisions of the Military Service Acts, in respect of persons liable for service under these Acts, who are at present residing in His Majesty's overseas dominions, shall be enforced.

It is also stated that while every endeavor will be made to utilise the services of such persons should they return, they must do so at their own risk and expense.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM J. D. McKEOWN

Belgium, June 30, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Corby:—May I extend to you, on behalf of the officers of the battery, our sincerest sympathy in the loss of your son, Jack. There is little I can say to alleviate the pain caused by such a sad loss, but I hope it will help a little to know that he died without pain.

In a little military cemetery, a short distance behind the lines, and under the shadow of a shell torn church, we laid him, and a white cross bearing his name and battalion, now marks the spot where, together with many other gallant Canadians, he now lies. Highly esteemed by his officers and his comrades while he was with us, he has now gone to his rest, a hero.

Very sincerely yours,
James D. McKeown, Lt.,
23rd Bty., 5th Bde., C. F. A.

FROM R. S. ARMITAGE

France, June 28, 1916.

Mrs. J. Corby,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Madam:—I wish to express to you my regret at the death of your son. Since joining this battery in England, Driver Corby has been in my section, and has always shown himself to be a conscientious and faithful worker, as well as a brave soldier. As such, he died, doing his duty to his King and country. Please accept my deepest sympathy in your great bereavement.

Yours sincerely,
R. S. Armitage, Lieut.,
23rd Bty., 5th Bgde., C. F. A.

FROM PTE. A. BEATON

France, June 30th.

Dear Mother:—I am going to drop you a few lines to let you know that we arrived here safely, and am feeling fine so far. We had a nice trip coming here and there are about seven thousand troops here ready to go to the firing line, but we may be here for a week or so. I have seen quite a number of Belleville boys here, but I didn't know any of them well. We came through a city and all the small boys came running after us, and they were asking us for something, but we couldn't make out what they were saying. Well, I would sooner be here than in England, but Canada is the pick of the three. I will drop you a letter later on, so I will close for today.

Your loving son,
A. Beaton.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE FLASH OF AN EMERALD" AT GRIFFIN'S TO-NIGHT

The popular dramatic star, Robert Warwick, appears at Griffin's Opera House to-night and Thursday evening, in the World Film Corporation's 5-part production of "The Flash of an Emerald." The many admirers of this fine actor will have an opportunity of seeing him in a screen part that elicits another, and not often seen side of his undoubted genius. As Lucius Waldeck he is "A social vulture preying on hs friends and diverting suspicion by his gentlemanly graciousness." In other words, he is a polished and insinuating villian. He steals a valuable emerald from a woman in a religious procession, chloroforms her, her maid, and her sick child.

Later he passes himself off as a secret agent of the Russian revolutionists. He insinuates himself into the good graces of two ladies, to one of whom he presents the emerald. The lady is the daughter of the woman from whom he stole the jewel. Indirectly this leads to his undoing, and he commits suicide.

The part is a great one, and Mr. Warwick does it in the fullest justice. There is also a strong love interest in the photodrama which has the advantage of beautiful settings, careful direction and a strong supporting cast. Three other selected filmplays are also announced for exhibition.

"KNOCKS AND OPPORTUNITY" AT PALACE TO-NIGHT

"Queen of the Prophets," is the title of the latest 2-reel installment of the great serial series, "Graft," which is announced for presentation at the Palace Theatre, to-night and Thursday matinee and night. This episode which offers a series of dramatic situations—situations as intense an only humans can make them. As Richard Harding, the young fighting attorney has been elected Mayor of New York, his first act was an order to rid the city of the army of fortune tellers, seers, prophets, and the like. An expose is given on the screen of the methods employed by these fakirs, who prey on the ignorant and superstitious, many of these visitors being made the victims of blackmail. Besile the above offering, "Knocks and Opportunity," a highly amusing 2-part L Ko comedy, will be presented, along with a programme consisting of 4 new comedies and dramas.

Tired, Aching Feet and Limbs

are promptly relieved by applying Absorbine, Jr., the antiseptic liniment. It is soothing, healing, and invigorating—puts vim and energy into jaded muscles. One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr., all right and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk without limping, something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $1.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I am a living witness."

Absorbine, Jr., should always be kept at hand for emergencies.

At druggists, $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle or sent postpaid. Liberal trial bottle for 10c. in stamps.

The Late Bishop Cabrera

A few weeks ago there passed from the church militant to the church triumphant a man who may well be remembered as a great Christian. Juan Bantista Cabrera, first bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Spain, in a most striking manner, was identified with one of the remarkable periods of the religious history of that country.

He was born when men were sent to prison for reading the Bible. He lived and labored for evangelical truth where, until ten years ago, no evangelical church or school was allowed by any distinctive mark to proclaim what it was.

The brother of the Bishop in his young manhood entered the Civil Guards, and ultimately became the greatest authority of Cuban life and customs, while he himself was dedicated to the priesthood. Because of his desire to now the truth from the error the rector of the seminary he attended confined him to his cell, allowing him only a book on Mathematics, and Anat's famous translation of the Bible into Spanish.

The severity of the rector was overruled by God, and the young priest could no longer believe in sacerdotal dogmas. Having secured a holiday, he took refuge in Gibraltar, taught Spanish to an English officer, and a clergyman, and through the latter found his way to the unseen Cross of Jesus.

In 1868 Queen Isabel was driven from Spain, and Cabrera was told by those in authority that "he could go where he wished with his Bible." Knowing the power of music, he translated many of the Gospel hymns into Spanish. While working under the Presbyterians Cabrera became desirous to found, if possible, an exclusively native church in Madrid, governed by Spaniards, and rooted in the historic past. A body of Reformers who used the Book of Common Prayer attracted his attention and he saw in it the germs of a Reformed Episcopal Church in Spain.

These Reformers were already in touch with the Lambeth conference; they elected Cabrera Bishop of the Synod. He at once compiled a soundly evangelical Prayer Book. He established the Memorial Feast with a table, the minister at communion facing the people. Notwithstanding much persecution from church dignitaries, he continued his work, aided by the British and Foreign Bible Society. Lord Plunkett, who had now become Archbishop of Dublin, being profoundly impressed with the work of Senor Cabrera and his people determined to assist them in securing a fully organized church, and with two other Irish bishops, notwithstanding serious opposition at home and abroad, in 1891 consecrated Senor Cabrera the first Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Spain.

Since that time, Bishop Cabrera, by his life and his people, has been instant in season and out of season, doing much to bring about the change in the laws, whereby religious freedom has supplanted intolerance. How far his work is recognized may be seen in the fact that King Alfonso has conferred on the Bishop's youngest son the "Order of Knighthood of Alfonso XII." for original work in natural history, and when doing so said: "You are, I believe, the son of the Protestant Bishop. I am very glad to give you this order."

All the Bishop's sons and daughters have distinguished themselves at the universities of Spain, and in Christian work.

It is presumed that the mantle of the father will fall upon the Bishop's second son, who is rector of the beautiful church in Madrid.

We commend the Reformed Episcopalians of Spain to the guiding providence of the great Head of the Church.

Rules of Health For Dyspeptics

DIETING UNNECESSARY

There are two ways by which people who suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, flatulence, etc., can overcome the trouble. First, as practically all cases of the above are directly or indirectly traceable to acidity and fermentation, they can eliminate from their diet all foods which ferment and form acid, such as all starches and sugar and foods containing them, thus prohibiting bread, potatoes, fruits and most meats. About the only safe foods are gluten breads, spinach and small quantities of white meat of chicken or turkey. This diet is almost a starvation one, but it is sometimes quite effective. The second way, which appeals especially to those who like to eat hearty meals of good foods, is to eat whatever is reasonably digestable, neutralize the acid and stop fermentation by the use of a good ant-acid such as bisurated magnesia, a teaspoonful of which in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt, instantly neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work without pain or hinderance. Owing to its simplicity, convenience and effectiveness this latter plan is now being adopted, instead of the old fashioned, expensive, weakening starvation process. In this connection it is interesting to note that since the widespread use of bisurated magnesia was established, many druggists have arranged to supply it in 5 gr. tablets 2 or 3 of which are equivalent to a teaspoonful of the powder form and are much more convenient to carry.

THE CIRCUS

Coop & Lent's Show Proves a Revelation to Our Towns-People—Fine Parade

Yes, it came, with all its paraphernalia, proving an astonishment to the big crowd that gathered upon our streets because of its large proportions. Our people had never greeted this itenerant show before—it had never come this way. But now that it has shown itself worthy of patronage, the masses of Hastings County are pleased—more than pleased—and to prove their pleasure the big tent off Pine street is well filled this afternoon with a people who know how to extend appreciation.

Speaking of the parade—it was fine—extending about a mile, and as it passed down Victoria Avenue, Pinnacle and Bridge streets, and then up Front street, the reception was most generous. A feature of the parade was the handsome Shetland ponies—all colors, speckled and otherwise. the large wagons coming in for more or less favorable comment, while the magnificent horses were highly admired. Handsomely attired ladies mounted on chargers; the cowgirls and cowboys; the brass bands—there were several of these; the steam organ, and numerous other sights, including clowns passing funny remarks—all made up a splendid panoramic view, the elephants, the camels, etc., taking their characteristic strides as though in the jungles or crossing a desert.

In the tent, where the performance is going on as we write, three rings are in action, the air-artists turning their somersaults, while the legions of actors—both human and brute—are unstintingly dealing out the programme.

Do not forget that the performance is to be repeated this evening, when the menageries will be open, and—as of yore—the circus lover, with his wife or best girl, will not fail to be there.

NINE FRENCH TAKE 113 HUNS WITHOUT LOSS OF ONE MAN

AUSTRALIAN TROOPS PARTICIPATE IN IMPORTANT RAID

NINE FRENCH 113 GERMANS

Spectacular Episode of Somme Warfare—Splendid Tactics of French

PARIS, July 20.—(Special.) —One of the most striking episodes of the great Somme offensive was the taking of the field fort at Biaches and the garrison of 113 men by nine French soldiers. The fort had resisted throughout the artillery bombardment and the infantry attacks had been checked by murderous machine-gun fire.

By a lucky chance a French officer discovered the precious secret that the terrible bombardment had made the fort vulnerable at one point. Selecting a Second Lieutenant, two Sergeants, a Corporal and four men, he led them on hands and knees through the long grass to the spot where he knew there was a breach in the defences. They reached their objective point without the Germans learning of their approach.

Abruptly three of the French officers leaped into the work, shouting in stentorian tones. "Forward with the bayonet," and throwing bombs which exploded in the dugout. The other six daring Frenchmen remained behind ready to retreat if the attempt failed.

But the Germans, taken unawares, had no time to get their weapons, and surrendered almost without a show of fight. When one of their numbers fell, shot by a revolver fired at point-blank by the commanding French officer, the Germans, 113 in all, came out of their shelters and threw up their hands, the French assert.

The three French captors now began to feel nervous, as they saw no reason why the Germans should not fall upon and exterminate them. But at this moment the other six hurried in. Their resolute energy imposed upon the Germans, who believed that the new arrivals were followed by many others. The German officers in the fort then threw down their arms and the entire garrison was marched to the French rear, escorted by the nine captors, who had not lost a man.

CHARGED WITH SELLING DRUGS TO CONVICTS

Kingston Guard and Hotel Keeper Arrested—Were Caught With "Dope"

KINGSTON, July 19.—As the result of the work of the Dominion police, working in conjunction with the Thiel detective force, John Brown, a guard at the Portsmouth penitentiary, and Lewis Martin, proprietor of the Revere Hotel, are under arrest, charged with trafficking in "dope" for convicts at the penitentiary.

Guard Brown is also charged with having in his possession at the time of his arrest a package containing heroin and morphine. Brown got the parcel through registered mail and it is alleged that it was sent from Toronto to Martin for convicts. A needle for the using of the dope was in the box and also three dollars.

The two men were before Magistrate Farrell this morning and through their lawyer, T. J. Rigney, pleaded "not guilty" and were remanded for a day.

GERMAN SUBMARINE FREIGHTER HIDDEN IN BALTIMORE HARBOR

BALTIMORE, July 20.—Special — There is an old pile-driver on a wobbly float located not far from the spot where Germany's undersea merchantman, the Deutschland, is snuggled in among a lot of dirty, red freight barges. The barges were pulled in around the submarine to hide it. But the top of the old pile-driver commands an excellent view of the Kaiser's boat, and there is a ladder on the top.

By shinnying up to the top of this ladder the reporters managed to keep fairly close tab on the goings on about the Deutschland. The rungs of the ladder are so far apart that even a long-limbed man almost splits himself like a pair of scissors in making the climb, yet the most assiduous climber to-day was a fellow who is built as close to the ground as a Long Island duckling.

"You hold my hat and glasses," he would say, "and I'll go up and have another peek. Then he would swarm up the ladder with amazing agility and, arriving at the top, would pause for breath and finally bulletin downward, "She's still there." And she's still there to-night as this is written.

Long and flat and pot-bellied, and with a greenish tint along her back and sides—the greenishness of a water-snake—the boat sways stodgily in its nest of aged freighters and that's all that anyone in Baltimore with authority to speak really knows about the Deutschland. She's still there.

TRENCHES AND PRISONERS CAPTURED BY THE ALLIES

The Somme Scene of Lively Conflict—German Trenches Penetrated North of Auberive—Hand Grenade Battles Won by British and French—Enemy Aeroplanes Brought Down in Verdun Region

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, July 20.—Afternoon statement—On both sides of the Somme our infantry this morning attacked the German positions and gained a notable advance.

To the north of the river we captured enemy trenches from Mamelon Hardecourt as far as the river, and carried our line clear to the east of Hardecourt along the railroad to the narrow road which runs from Combles to Clery. In this part of the battlefield we have thus far made four hundred prisoners.

South of the Somme between Barleux and Soyecourt all first line enemy trenches fell into our hands.

In Champagne we penetrated into the German trenches to the north of Auberive and took a number of prisoners.

In Argonne the Germans attempted yesterday near the end of the day a coup de main upon our small posts in the Bolante salient. After a lively grenade battle the enemy was repulsed. On the left bank of the Meuse a bombardment continued in the regions of Avocourt and Chattancourt, together with hand grenade fighting on the slopes north-east of Hill 304.

On the right bank of the Meuse we made progress during the night west of Thiamont works. To the south of Fleury a powerfully fortified work held by the enemy was attacked and captured by our troops, who took prisoners several officers and 150 men.

One German aeroplane has been brought down in the Somme region, and three in the Verdun region.

MUNITIONS DELIVERIES BY CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS TOTAL A MILLION A DAY

By End of The Year Value of The Deliveries Will Amount to Thirty-five Millions a Month — Over 20,000 Completed Shells Per Day Being Produced—Labor Trouble Serious

OTTAWA, July 19.—British orders in Canada for shells and high explosives now total nearly half a billion dollars. So far, Canada has delivered over two hundred million dollars' worth, and at present the value of daily deliveries is nearly one million dollars. By the end of the year this will be increased to thirty-five million dollars worth per month. The new fuse plant in Montreal is now being operated with great success, and this country can now produce for Great Britain over 20,000 completed shells per day.

The chief difficulty now is the scarcity of skilled workmen. The employment of more female labor is being urged by the Imperial Munitions Board, which is distributing an illustrated booklet regarding the training and employment of women in munition production.

Narrow Escape From Death

Two-Year-Old Daughter of Mrs. W. G. Perk, Peterborough, Falls Fourteen Feet

PETERBOROUGH, July 19.—Dorothy Isabel Perks, the two year-old daughter of Mrs. W. G. Perks, 593 George street, had a most miraculous escape from death this morning, when she fell over the balcony of her mother's house, to the ground below, a distance of fourteen feet, breaking her leg and receiving a severe shaking up. The injured child was removed to Nicholls' Hospital, where she is resting well.

The little girl had been sitting upon the balcony with her mother and whilst the attention of the latter was diverted the child climbed up the railing of the balcony and, losing her balance, fell to the ground below. The child is fortunate to have escaped with injuries as slight as she did. To have struck a pavement below would likely have meant instant death.

The father of the child, W. G. Perks, is at present in France, having enlisted here with the Engineers eighteen months ago.

Body of Missing Clerk Found

Supposed to Have Slipped Into Water at Night — Grapplers Drew Body to Surface

KINGSTON, July 19.—That Allan Briceland, night clerk at Swift's wharf, of the Canada Steamship Lines, met death in the waters around the wharf, was brought to light last night, when his body was found by grapplers, shortly after seven o'clock, after a work of a couple of hours.

The young man was on duty yesterday morning as usual when the steamer Kingston arrived, and signed a couple of freight bills for the boat. When the day staff came down to relieve him he was missed, and, although a search was made for him, it was thought that he had either taken the trip to Prescott and return, or had gone to his home in Wolfe Island. His relatives at the island were communicated with, but they had not seen him, so nothing more was thought of the affair, the officials at the wharf expecting him back on the steamer Kingston yesterday afternoon. When the boat arrived, however, it was found that he had not been on the boat, and then it was feared that the young man must have been drowned.

Grapplers were at once put to work and the body was later recovered on the south side of the wharf.

CREW OF SUB. AWAIT DEPARTURE IN TERROR

Men of The Deutschland Dread Starting on Return Trip—Fear Allied Drag-Nets Will Entangle The Craft—Ready to Leave at Any Time, But Place Small Value on Their Lives

NORFOLK, Va., July 20.—Special—Foreign warships which have been waiting off the Virginia Capes for the Deutschland were obliged to go out far to sea, to-day when a northeast gale made it dangerous for them to lay too close to the shore. High seas and a sixty-mile gale at Cape Henry drove the foreign ships to seek safety in deep water, probably ten miles off shore.

BALTIMORE, Md., J[illegible] 20.—Terror-stricken and on the verge of a panic, the crew of the Deutschland dread the order that will start them on their return passage across the Atlantic. None believe they will escape the dragnet being thrown out by the allied cruisers now off the capes. They feel sure that they will fall victims to the enemy cruisers, not through shot from the yawning mouths of the cannons, nor ball from the British pa cannons, nor ball from the high-powered rifles in the little British patrol boats, but from disabled engines in a net that the enemy is spreading just off the three-mile limit.

The members of the crew, whose names will go down in history for the creation of a new commercial era, have openly expressed this feeling to friends on Locust Point. They have told these same friends that Captain Paul Koenig, the dapper and daring commander of the submersible, is doing everything in his power to keep up their spirits and make them look on the bright side of the affair, but the men cannot see this side of the venture.

"We are praying every night, and are getting our friends to pray for us," Second Engineer Karl Fruechte told a friend he has been spending his evenings with since the crew have been granted shore leave. This same friend to-day told the story of the teror-stricken crew to a press representative, not knowing at the time he was talking with a reporter.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY GREAT QUEBEC BRIDGE

QUEBEC, July 20.—A conspiracy to destroy the Quebec Bridge was discovered by one of the employees working there. It is stated that some of the cables which supported a certain part of the bridge had been cut. Two of them had, however, been left untouched, and they held the bridge in place.

An inquiry is being held to discover the authors of the attempt, which had it been successful, would have certainly caused one of the greatest disasters in Canadian history, as the bridge is now nearing completion, and many hundreds of men are working on it.

SAY BETHLEHEM WILL EARN SIXTY MILLIONS

Monthly Earnings of Corporation are Steadily Setting up New Records

NEW YORK, July 19.—The directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation met yesterday, and transacted routine business. It was stated following the meeting that the question of increasing the capital stock of Bethlehem is not a leading one at present. No change is being considered, nor is any change in the dividend rate on the common stock contemplated in the near future.

Based upon the showing of the corporation in the first half of the current year, the Wall Street Journal's estimate of earnings of $60,000,000 for the full year 1916 will no doubt be realized. While no official periodical statements of earnings are issued by Bethlehem, it is believed that they were around $30,000,000 in the first half year.

Bethlehem has sufficient war business on its books to keep its ordnance plants in operation to the end of the year, and as earnings in June are understood to have established a new high record, profits of $60,000,000 or over for 1916 seem to be assured. The corporation is now shipping 1,000,000 shells per month, or at the rate of more than 30,000 a day.

FORTUNE AWAITS WOMAN IN JAIL

TORONTO, July 20—Special—After she had passed eleven years of her life in the Orangeville Jail, to which institution she had been committed because she was altogether without any means of support, Mrs. Martha McKitrick was smiled upon by fortune which had so long spurned her; and to-day she is an inmate of the Aged Womens Home on Belmont Street, and is possessed of an annual income of about $500. Her sister, Miss Jane Coulter, of Orangeville, died a short time ago and left her the income from an estate of $10,000. On the death of Mrs. McKitrick the money is to go to certain charitable institutions.

CAPTURED DIARY OF HUN COMMANDING OFFICER

Which Showed Terrible Slaughter of The Enemy in First Six Days of July Fighting — Almost Entire Strength of Battalion Wiped Out—Delville Wood Largely Regained

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, July 20.—An official statement says: At 2:50 this afternoon in Deville wood and Longeval we regained a little more ground.

North of our Longeuval Bazentin position we pushed forward our line this morning, capturing some prisoners and a gun.

East of the Leipsic redoubt our bombing parties made substantial advance last night. Elsewhere in the main battle area there has been only artillery fire since the last report, and no alterations in positions as already reported. We captured a diary belonging to a German commander officer, which shows that in the fighting from July 1st to 6th, a Baravian reserve regiment which was opposed to us at Monauban, suffered three thousand casualties out of a total strength of thirty-five hundred redmen. Another document shows one battalion of 190 regiments lost 980 men out of 1,100, while two other battalions in that regiment each lost more than half their effective strength.

Yesterday evening south of Armentieres we carried out some important raids on a front of two miles, in which Australian troops took part. About 140 German prisoners were captured.

MILAN, July 20.—Special—According to news received here from Switzerland the German military authorities in towns bordering on the Rhine are having difficulty in subduing the fears of their population caused by the German defeats on the eastern and western fronts. Hardly any soldiers are left in the garrisons along the Rhine.

TO CONSERVE FOOD SUPPLY

Important Measures to be Adopted to Regulate Sale of Italian Products

ROME, July 20.—(Special.— It is expected that important measures will be adopted by the Government with a view to better regulate the sale of home products while the war lasts, chiefly wheat. Although the crop this year is good, and a surplus left from last year, the price of wheat is still high, owing to lack of transports and high sea rates. Some speculators having refused to sell the wheat, evidently hoping it will reach still higher prices, the Government has requisitioned the crop in the Apulia region, receiving general praise. Despite all the measures, Italy needs over a million tons of wheat from abroad, which in peace time is imported chiefly from Russia and Roumania, while now it must come from America and the Argentine.

IDEAL

PROVED HIMSELF A MODERN HERO

T. Sullivan, who is a member of the Garrison Military Police at the Barriefield Camp, and who is well known to many in Belleville, is at present a hero in the camp. On Friday last, by prompt action on his part, in all probability he saved the life of a little girl. The child, it appears, was knocked down by a car, and another car following closely. Officer Sullivan ran to the child's assistance, and picked her up in front of the second car wheels. Had he not done so, it is stated, that the second car would undoubtedly have run over the little girl.

FORMERLY OF FLINTON

The Death of a Lady Known by Many in East

Tweed, July 19.—On June 3rd there passed away at her home in Arborfield, Sask., Mrs. Annie Dafoe, who formerly resided in Flinton and was well known in this vicinity. She had been in poor health for some time, suffering with anaemia and stomach trouble.

Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Lansing and she was born near Flinton fifty-eight years ago. She was brought up in that village and was married to John Miller. After the death of her first husband she was married to John Dafoe in 1903. He was struck by lightning and killed about three years afterwards and in 1908 Mrs. Dafoe went out to Saskatchewan and there took up a homestead.

She was a faithful member of the Methodist church and was beloved by everybody, being a kind and helpful neighbor.

She leaves a family of six to mourn her loss, four daughters, Mrs. George Loyst, Mrs. Thomas Weese, Miss Gladys Miller, Arborfield and Mrs. F. Bradshaw, Roblin, Ont.; and two sons, William and John, Arborfield. She is also survived by five sisters, Mrs. W. D. Foster, Tisdale, Sask.; Mrs. N. Carnell, Haliburton, Ont.; Mrs. E. Harrison, Moira; Mrs. K. Meeks and Mrs. S. Roy, Cloyne, and brother, J. E. Lansing, Maynooth.

SECOND HAND DEALER BUYS DIAMOND PIN

TORONTO, July 20.—Special—Alleged to have stolen a pearl and diamond stick pin, valued at $325, and to have sold it to a second-hand dealer for $1.75, Samuel Brickman, of 27 Borden Street, was arrested yesterday by Detectives Taylor and Armstrong. According to the police Brickman was employed by a clothes cleaning establishment. T. H. Hamilton, of 24 King Street West, a customer, sent two suits of clothes to be pressed and in the pocket of one of the suits accidentally left the pin. When he discovered his loss he reported it to the pressing company, and Brickman, whose duty it was to search the clothes for any valuables and to give them to the manager, declared that he did not find the pin in the clothes. The police were notified and after a thorough investigation recovered the pin in a second-hand shop and placed Brickman under arrest.

Grand Master Luke Pays a Tribute to The Allies in The Great War Canada's Fine Part

LONDON, Ont., July 19.—The 61st annual meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada opened here at noon with over 500 delegates from all over Canada in attendance. Toronto was exceedingly well represented. It is generally expected that the next annual meeting will be held there.

The Masons were welcomed by Mayor Stevenson.

The address of Grand Master Luke covered a wide range of topics. He dealt especially with the war, lauding the prompt and certain answer that Canada gave the Motherland when the call for help came. The Canadian public has learned from the struggle the important lessons of preparedness and the undeniable effectiveness of a united Empire. Canadians have taken a more heroic part in the fight than any of the European nations. The Europeans have grown up trained for war, but we have no war past.

The grand master then praised the response made by every dependency of the British Crown. He declared that Germany, who began the war with the Allies, was finding out that truth will prevail and that no sacrifices are too great for the Allies to make to defend the principles of right and justice.

He extended sympathy to Past Grand Masters Malone and Gibson, whose sons have fallen for the Empire. He paid the highest tributes to Earl Kitchener, both as a soldier and as a District Grand Warden of the United Grand Lodge of England.

Touching upon financial matters, the Grand Master said that the Grand Lodge, while not equal to 1915, was in splendid shape. The revenue for the year was $16,550, and the expenditures for ordinary purposes totalled $19,107. The membership shows a net gain of 1,[illegible], standing now at 69,850. There are on the register 411 warranted Lodges. The various Masonic Lodges have contributed $16,717 to the Belgian Relief Fund and expended for benevolence during the year $36,070.

The reports of Grand Treasurer E. T. Malone of Toronto and Grand Secy. R. L. Gunn were presented, while the Board of General Purposes submitted its "annual review of what Masons think and say and hope and do."

The latter contained a wealth of suggestions as to how to advance the craft and recounted many matters of congratulation, including the prosperity and the abounding hospitality of Canada Lodge to overseas brethren. The report on the condition of Masonry, by Col. W. N. Ponton of Belleville contained numerous allusions to the war, and among the phases given special mention was the work of the Red Cross and the glorious part taken by Canadian womanhood.

Among the many passages of eloquence the following was typical of the review:

"Men are fighting for their children, that these children may not have to know what their fathers and mothers have known during this maelstrom of inhuman murder and lust—this epic of agony. Better even racial ruin than eternal infamy. Better to go out with honor than survive with shame. And this do all free men, free women, and especially Freemasons, proclaim with the sacred pledge of fidelity and truth—and we shall not fail."

The redistribution of the Provinces as to districts so as to relieve some districts where deputies found it difficult to visit so many lodges was adopted to-day, and to-night the district meetings were held, the following brethren being elected District Deputy Grand Masters:—

Erie, W. Douglas, Windsor; St. Clair, Wesley Carter, Sarnia; London, Dr C. H. Zeigler, London; South Huron, Dr P. T. Copland, St Mary's; North Huron, John Watson, Listowel; Wilson, Stoneman, Ingersoll; Wellington, Dr E. Flath, Drayton; Hamilton, G. H. Lanigan, Hamilton; Georgian, Dr W. J. Hill, Alliston; Niagara, C. J. Farrell, Grimsby; Toronto West, J. W. Lawrence, Toronto; Toronto East, H. C. Tugwell, Toronto; Toronto Centre, J. A. Rowland, Toronto; Ontario, G. M. Peebles, Colborne; Prince Edward, Henry Freeman, Ketcheson; Frontenac, John H. Birkett; St. Lawrence, Dr W. L. Tait, Smith's Falls; Ottawa, C. W. Jeffery, Ottawa; Algoma, Dr D. McBane, Rainy River; Nipissing, C. W. MacRae, Sault Ste. Marie; Muskoka, Joseph Hillier, Burk's Falls; Otonabee, Jas. B. Begg, Lindsay; Timiskaming, R. H. Janes, Cobalt; Brant, J. C. Canadas Way and United States Way

(From the Winnipeg Tribune)

Persons who feel inclined to criticize the way in which our Canadian soldiers are looked after—and such persons have not been entirely nonexistent during the past two years—should read what is happening these days to National guardsmen in the United States who have been summoned to patrol the southern border.

The men from Massachusetts, for instance, were hurried to the sweltering, cactus-strewn and almost waterless frontier in heavy woollen clothing, without tents and without nearly sufficient food. In one ambulance corps of seventy-three men, fifty fainted from heat and lack of food. On the train for four days the meals consisted of tomatoes, crackers, and coffee. The sick lay in bare cots on the train, with no protection from the flies.

Such hardships will probably not do young men any permanent harm, but it is a typical exhibition of the sort of slap-dash methods which Uncle Sam's governmental institutions are prone to develop when called upon for quick action. Nor is the situation much improved by the fact that ample funds had been appropriated by Congress to put things in proper shape, if only the money had not been wasted.

Contrast this with what happened at Valcartier, where Canada's first contingent was mustered and trained. The ground had to be prepared for an army of over 33,000 men and literally everything had to be found for them in the shortest possible period. But there was no confusion and little or no hardship. The work was well done despite the necessity for tremendous haste. And it was done at a cost which nobody has said was excessive, considering the circumstances.

There can be no questions whatever as to who is entitled to the chief credit for this notable feat. It is due to Sir Sam Hughes who furnished the driving power, though many assistants did excellent work as soon as they got their second wind and struck the pace he had set for them.

And the story of Canada's handling of her troops has everywhere been the same. They have been looked after from start to finish in a manner creditable to everyone concerned. The little hitches which have inevitably occurred have only served to emphasize the smoothness and efficiency with which the Department of Militia has discharged its duties.

The difference between Canada's efficiency and the general slackness shown in the Unitedl States is something upon which we may justly pride ourselves. What they need across the line is a central authority in military matters. If the enrolment, training and equipment of our troops had been left to the different provinces, it is quite probable we would not have made any better record than our neighbors.

Just Apply This Paste And the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.

Cavalry Action of the Old Style

Philip Gibbs, writing from the British press camp under date of July 15, for the London Daily Chronicle, thus describes the part played by British cavalry in the further advances of Friday last:

"Before dawn I passed a great column of horse gunners and horse transports and cavalry with their lances up, and Indian native cavalry still as statues. The men were drawn up alongside of the road. Except for one man, who was humming a tune, they were quite silent, and hardly stirred on the saddles. They seemed to be waiting with some grim expectation.

"The road, which was lined with trees, made a tunnel with its foliage and at the end of the tunnel, which showed a patch of sky, there were strange lights flashing like flaming swords, cutting through the darkness. We went up towards the lights and toward the monstrous tumult of noise, and walked straight across the country toward the centre of the circle of fire which was all around us.

"It was about six o'clock in the evening that some of the British cavalry came into action. They were men whom I had seen on my way up the battlefield, a small detachment of Dragoon Guards and also of Deccan Horse. They worked forward with our infantry on a stretch of country between the Bazentin Wood and the Delville Wood, rising up to a high wood and then rode out alone in reconnaissance, in true cavalry formation, with their commander in the rear.

"Not one in a thousand would have believed it possible to see this again. When they passed, the infantry went a little mad and cheered wildly and joyously as though the men were riding on the road of triumph. So they rode on into the open country skirting Delville Wood.

"Presently a machine gun opened fire on them. It was in a cornfield with German infantry, and the officer in command gave the order to his men to ride through the enemy. The dragoons put their lances down and rode back and charged again among the scattered groups of German infantry. Some of these prepared to withstand the charge with fixed bayonets; others were panic-stricken and ran forward crying "Pity, pity!" and clung to the saddles and stirrup leathers of the Dragoon Guards.

"Though on a small scale it was a cavalry action of the old style. With thirty-two prisoners the men rode on slowly, still reconnoitring the open country on the skirts of Delville road until they came again under machine gun fire and drew back. As they did so, an aeroplane came overhead, skimming very low at no more than three hundred feet above the ground.

"The cavalry turned in their saddles to stare at it for a moment or two, believing it a hostile machine, but no bullets came their way and in another moment it stopped over the German infantry, concealed in the wheat, and fired at them with a machine gun. Four times it circled and stopped and fired, creating another panic among the Germans, and then it flew off, leaving the cavalry full of admiration for this daring feat.

"They could ride no further owing to the nature of the ground, and that night they dug themselves in. The German guns searched in vain for them, and the cavalry is full of pride for the day may come again.'

When Reporter Got Under The Table

There is one place within the precincts of the British House of Commons where the ordinary person would never think of looking for 'strangers." Mr. Augustine Birrell recently spoke facetiously of the reporters under the table at a Cabinet meeting, but reporters might be literally "under the table" of the House of Commons without anyone knowing about it. For the House of Commons table is not "a solid piece of furniture,' though Mr. Disraeli once described it as such.

It is, in fact, not a table at all, but a slab of wood supported, not by "legs," but by lattice work. A well-known black-and-white artist, once illustrious on the staff of "Punch," has related how he sat out a debate within the "table," being directed thereto by the House of Commons engineer one evening when the Press Gallery was full.

Mr. Harry Furniss tells how he felt disposed to tickle the legs of legislators with his pencil, and how he heard, not merely the debate, but the asides and whispers of the occupants on the two front benches, which must have been much more interesting.

STUDEBAKER EXPERT GIVES VALUABLE HINTS TO OWNERS ON CARE OF THEIR CARS

"The car owner who takes pride in telling how he has covered 1,000, 1,500 or 2,000 miles on a gallon of motor oil, is practicing false economy," says J. E. Grady, Canadian sales manager of the Studebaker Corporation, Walkerville. "The great mileage record he boasts of per gallon of oil may sound impressive, but while such an owner is saving the price of several gallons of oil, he is setting up a wear in the working parts of the motor which will eventually cost more to replace than any amount of oil that would have been used.

"Motor oil, no matter how good, loses its lubricating qualities after being in the motor a certain length of times, especially in hot weather. It disintegrates, leaving only a remnant of what was once good motor oil, and it has no value as far as lubrication is concerned.

"The wise owner will drain all the oil from the crank case of his car every 1,000 miles of service, regardless of how much oil is still there at the time. He will then replace with good, fresh, clean oil. In doing this regularly, he will prolong the life of his car indefinitely.

"Another place where lack of lubrication can do damage is in the rear axle and transmission. For here the action of the gears has the same effect upon grease as the action of working parts of the motor has on oil. It robs the grease in time of the lubricating qualities by the process of disintegration.

"If the owner will take care in adding fresh grease every 1,500 miles—it is not necessary to replace the supply which is in the rear axle and transmission at the time—he will save many a dollar in the long run.

"It is well enough recognized that lubrication is the life of a motor car. It is a fact, too, that many owners keep enough oil and grease in their cars. But the freshness of the lubricant requires attention and is of greater importance than the quantity. We impress this point on Studebaker owners. Every dollar spent by the owner on proper lubrication saves ten dollars in other expenses, aside from the annoyances of poor operation and the delays due to trying to make a gallon of oil or a few pounds of grease perform their functions when they become 'pepless' from too long service."

The Duck.

A little schoolgirl in Michigan has written the following essay on the duck:

"The duck is a low heavy set bird. He is a mighty poor singer having a course voice caused by getting so many frogs in his neck and he likes the water and carries a toy balloon in his stomach to keep from sinking the Duck has only two legs and they are set so far back on his running gears by nature that they come pretty near missing his body some ducks when they get big curls on their tails are called drakes and don't have to set or hatch but just loaf and go swimming and eat everything in sight if I were to be a duck I would rather be a drake they have a wide bill like they use it for a spade they walk like a drunk man they bounce and bump about from side to side if you scare them they will flap their wings and try to make a pass at singing."—Detroit Journal.

Stumping to Music.

Never before was stumping done to the accompaniment of martial music. Four battalions were engaged a few days ago at Camp Borden in uprooting old pine stumps, while their brass bands played in the midst to lighten the labor, and to allay any pain old mother earth might feel in the process of extraction. About a million of these stumps have already been removed in the camp area. As the ground is sandy the roots are easily pulled up with a stumping machine. They are then gathered together in heaps and set on fire. The sight of these bonfires on the plain at night in the vicinity of the camp is reminiscent of Homer's Iliad.

THIS IS THE 639TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

HANDLING THE TRUTH LIGHTLY.

Mr E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto, was the principal speaker at a picnic recently given under the auspices of the East York Federal and Provincial Reform Association. This Mr Johnston is the same gentleman who was elected by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to act as chief counsel for the Opposition at the fuse investigation before the Meredith-Duff Commission. It will be recalled that the Government, in announcing the Commission, made provision for two counsel to be paid by the State, one to be selected by the Government and one by the Opposition. Sir Wilfrid Laurier chose Mr Johnston, and the Government gave him an absolutely free hand to dig as deep as he knew how. As a matter of fact he did very little digging at all. He left it to Carvell. Mr Johnston had very little to say before Sir William Meredith and Mr Justice Duff, and a great deal to say before the York County farmers at the Markham picnic. It is a matter of choosing the jury.

And this is the kernel of the speech which Mr Johnston gave to the East York Federal and Provincial Reform Association on that occasion:

> "I don't want to raise personal questions, but the Government, having found out that one of their members was guilty of such conduct, should have demanded his resignation. Instead of that they permitted an investigation that was so limited that you almost dare not ask a man his address. Why were the Government so anxious to conceal these things?"

The speaker had previously given an extremely liberal version of Sir Sam Hughes' relations with Col. Allison, and of the part played by Col. Allison in placing of the fuse contracts. This version followed closely the lines of the Kyte charges as made in Parliament, and which Mr Kyte refused to support by personal testimony before the Commission. Being on the lines of the Kyte speech, it was a very long way from the facts as proven before the Commission.

Whether or not it was strictly proper for one of the leading counsel at such an inquiry to go before a political association and deliver a speech of this sort in advance of the Commission's finding we don't know. It may possibly have been all right, or, possibly, Mr Johnston would not have done it.

However, without going further into the question as to whether, from a professional standpoint, it was good politics for him to have gone there at all, let us look at what he said: "Instead of that they permitted an investigation that was so limited that you almost dare not ask a man his address. Why were the Government so anxious to conceal these things?"

Mr Johnston is evidently suffering from his recent association with F. B. Carvell, M.P. There is no other explanation possible without the risk of doing Mr Johnston a grave injustice. It just shows how evil communications corrupt good manners and cause people to make statements that are in conflict with the truth.

Still, making these allowances for Mr Johnston, it is impossible to acquit him of an amazing error of judgment in seeking to mislead the members of the East York Federal and Provincial Reform Association. They are not lunatics. You can't investigate for a whole month, with a constant succession of witnesses, an army of stenographers strenuously taking evidences in "an investigation so limited that you almost dare not ask a man his address." Mr Johnston's achievements in the past do not warrant his attempt to "put that over" at Markham. It was an unjustifiable presumption of stupidity.

THE TRENT CANAL.

According to The Kingston Whig the Trent Canal is to be made serviceable for the purpose for which it was commenced many years ago, by the hanging of the lock gates near Campbellford, or between that town and Frankford. Whether the canal will ever amount to much—whether the water communication with the inland points will meet expectations—is a question which cannot be answered now. Many millions have been spent, some say squandered, on this waterway. The sum is so vast that one hesitates to ask the total sum or to look it up, and yet the time has come when the utility of the enterprise must be proven. A contemporary refers to it as a fine route for pleasure craft which ought to pass through it to the upper lakes and through them in 1917. It is to be hoped that the canal will be of more service than a mere passageway for small pleasure boats. Its commercial value is the consideration.

* * *

The Sentinel: We are not prepared to argue that General Sir Sam Hughes is perfect. If it is admitted that he has made some mistakes, we will not attempt to deny it. If his enemies expected that he, or any other man that has ever been born, could go through such a crisis as he has weathered so far without making a mistake, they show a singular lack of good sense and perspective. We venture to say that, whatever his faults may be, there is not a man in the Dominion of Canada that could have filled General Sam Hughes' position as well as he has. To get 35,000 men ready for service in six weeks is an achievement unparalleled, we believe, in the history of war, especially in a country like Canada, that has had no warlike experience. Taking the whole administration of the Militia Department by and large, there has been an amount of energy, in the main well directed and well thought out, that is to the infinite credit of the man who is held responsible for it. It was inevitable that a man charged with the responsibility that Sir Sam Hughes has been compelled to carry would make many enemies. He seems to have made some among the most implacable forces in the country, and yet it does not seem to bother him. He goes right on from day to day doing his work with a devotion that is as admirable as it is effective in producing results.

Hamilton Spectator: The Kaiser is said to have summoned General von Hindenburg to meet him at the Imperial headquarters on the west front, to consider the situation in the east, with a view, it is thought, to placing under Germany's military idol the whole front from Riga to Roumania. For the consultation we think we can divine a deeper motive than that. What the Kaiser wants to know is, whether Germany has now any chance whatever, east or west. He wants von Hindenburg to see the situation in Picardy, to estimate the force of the British drive, and to offer his best advice. What a descent for Wilhelm, who hitherto has regarded himself not only as Germany's ruler by divine right, but as her heaven-inspired military strategist! To this has he come at last? If he cannot win, he can at least divide the obloquy of failure.

It will be two years next month since Great Britain went to war. Only now, after two years of disadvantage, is the watershed crossed, is victory beginning to flow in her direction—because of the improvement in her equipment. In other words, Great Britain begins to win as soon as she is prepared. She has been at war for two years, trying all the time to prepare herself for war, and only now is the great task done. Will this impress the pacifist, who thinks, or rather says, that it is time enough to prepare when we are actually attacked? Not at all, for he is proof against much more convincing demonstrations. Any theory which is founded on the ignoring of facts, which begins with the ignoring of facts, is proof against any fact. But it may impress people who have listened to him and been swayed by his music.

A significant feature of recent war gosip is the storms of criticism in the Hungarian parliament over the loss of 600,000 Hungarian troops since April last and the alleged failure of the Austrian troops to bear their fair share of the dangers and hardships of the campaign. The Hungarians complain that the brunt of the fighting has been borne by their soldiers, and the discontent is so great that threats are beginning to be made that Hungary may break away from Austria and conclude a separate peace. It is significant that these stories should have been passed by the censor at Budapest. The explanation is, probably, that the Hungarians desire to notify Germany that it is imperatively necessary for her to render more aid to her ally.

You can hardly blame the milkmen for asserting that Montreal should have nothing to say about the quality of milk distributed to her citizens. It is said that Mrs Nellie McClung will run for the Alberta Legislature. Will she declare that public life must be cleansed, that the Government should be turned out to permit the high moral forces of the community to get busy? Will she? Not on your life. The Ross Rifle

"When the Ross rifle was adopted the demand was for an excellent target arm, and every requirement in that direction was fully satisfied. It deserves its excellent reputation. Experts were handling it and winning prizes against the world's best. It will be remembered that the British volunteers complained that it was unfair for the Canadians to be allowed to use the Ross rifle in contests confined to military service arms. In battalion contests the Canadians had an opportunity of winning by using a superior target rifle, instead of by superior marksmanship. This protest caused a violent outcry on behalf of the Ross rifle, and Canada, always treated indulgently, had her way. The Toronto Globe states that it was accused of disloyalty to the Dominion and Empire in suggesting the possibility of an element of unfairness in allowing Canadian marksmen to use a superior target rifle in service arm contests.

"When war suddenly demanded a service rifle instead of an arm designed more in accordance with target requirements, the evil of private manufacture and private interests became apparent. The change would entail heavy losses on men in close touch with the Administration."

We sincerely trust that every newspaper in Canada will reprint the Editorial in the Toronto Globe of the 18th inst. on "The Ross Rifle," from which the above extract is taken and call its readers' attention thereto.

While deeply impressed by this most graphic although unintentional scrap of autobiography, we cannot help feeling that it would have been more timely had it been published during the dark days when the Huns were butchering the Belgians and French and apparently between the looting of the chateaux and the destruction of the churches, marching triumphantly towards Paris and Calais on their predestined way to London. At such a time it might have been a consolation to some weak minds to reflect that even under a new Government with Hun or Turkish standards it would be impossible for their favorite organ to be more partizan, more pharisaical or less patriotic than it was on the 18th inst. The discarding of the Ross Rifle after two years of war is a fact of momentous significance and whatever responsible or irresponsible people may say our brave boys who return from the front and those whose dear ones can never return will demand to know and insist on knowing the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The whole truth can not be told until after the war when perhaps the Montreal Star and Daily Mail will join with us in telling it. The truth can be told even now, the Globe notwithstanding. When the Ross Rifle was adopted there was no demand for "an excellent target arm" and it was not adopted as such. We have before us a copy of the original contract dated 27th March, 1912, and executed by those gallant Knights, Sir Charles Ross and Sir Frederick W. Borden, and the recital gives the reason, or at all events the alleged reason for the contract; "Whereas it is considered in the general interests of Canada that the rifles required by the Government for the purposes of Militia and Defence should be manufactured in Canada," etc.

This phenomenal climax of inventive and political capacity was thus not intended for a target arm unless the Globe means as unfortunately the fact has proved that our boys at the front by being armed with it made the best targets in the world. If there is any lingering doubt in the Globe's mind of its excellency as a "target arm" we beg to refer it to the following reports made to the Militia Department.

Major Armstrong of St. John, Dec. 3rd, 1906.

Board of Officers Royal N. W. M. P. at McLeod, 31st July, 1906.

Report Lieut. Sutherland Brown, No. 9 Co., R. C. R., from Long Branch Rifle Camp, October 5th, 1906, 46 defective rifles out of 55.

Regimental Report of R.C.R., Quebec, July 1906.

Do. Boards Lethbridge, Toronto, Halifax, and a dozen other places if required.

Under the contract alone the Government paid $25 a rifle, advancing 75 per cent. gave the land for site, allowed free importation of machinery, tools, the finished parts to be used in rifles, and for component parts to be used for repairs, individually, allowed such prices that the total for component parts came to $31, the highest advances of course being allowed on the most used articles. Although one reason for the contract given therein was that the Ross rifles were to be delivered to the Government at a cost not exceeding that which it would have to pay for similar rifles purchased by or for the Government as heretofore in the English market we have also under our hand a statement from the War Office showing that those business Englishmen who were content with a Lee-Enfield got it at such a figure that they were able to sell them and had been selling them to Canada, for £2. 17. 3. each, while the Birmingham and London S. A. Companies had been selling rifles to Canada with cleaning rod, oil, bottle, etc., for £4. and the shrewd Americans as appears from a report from their War Department dated August, 1906, now before us, manufactured their own rifles at a cost to the U.S. of $14.90. Perhaps, however, the eyes of our esteemed contemporary have been closed through this long tragedy because dazed by the prophetic vision that so fully protected its beloved country by the 13th cause of the Sir Frederick Borden contract, which is as follows:—

"This contract is hereby pursuant to the provisions of the 16th Section of Chapter 11 of the Revised Statutes of Canada made subject to the express condition that no member of the House of Commons of Canada shall be admitted to any share or part of such contract or to any benefit to be derived therefrom." We have also under our hand the official statement that the total advances to the end of 1905 were $600,000. and the number of rifles received 136, with a Government pay roll for labor and superintendence of considerably over $100,000 a year. Probably the Globe knows all this and therefore thought we were getting a target rifle, but we were not. When subsequently the Ross Rifle Co. proceeded to turn out a target rifle it had a long barrel while the service rifle had a very short barrel, and sights different and incomparably better, and the whole rifle was different even to the price which was $42. This target rifle was certainly one of the best in the world as a target rifle, but the delicacy of its mechanism made it about as useful in the trenches as a plate glass window.

Apparently the Globe knows the story of Canadian success at Bisley, where the rules required every team to use the service rifle of its country, and it is to be hoped it will never mention that painful and disgraceful episode again. If it does not know the whole story there are two or three officers in Toronto who can enlighten it, and there are, or at all events before this sad war, were many officers in England who had been surprised and shocked by it. As for ourselves being Canadians it is hard to forgive those who laid that foul blot on Canada's fair fame.

We have described this Editorial as a perfect piece of unconscious autobiography. In view of the above facts and the additional one that the Globe has never yet assisted in turning one ray of light on this appallingly costly blunder, both in men and money, but now at last discredited service rifle, are we not justified?

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY

NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER VII.
Conflicting Currents

"Where is that young lady who fainted?" Nick inquired, addressing those in the corridor, then consisting chiefly of persons drawn from the adjoining rooms by the disturbance.

A response was quickly made by an elderly woman, who held a tumbler and a bottle of smelling salts in her hand.

"Oh, she's all right now, sir," was the reply. "The poor girl was overcome by the scene in there. No wonder, indeed! I brought water and salts from my room when I saw her lying here, and she has gone home."

"Are you acquainted with her?"

"No, sir."

"Did you learn her name?"

"I did not."

"Did she say anything in regard to what she saw in this room?'

"Only that she fainted when she looked in there, while on her way to the elevator. I invited her to come into my room and remain until she felt entirely recovered, but she said she wanted to depart at once."

"She did, eh? How long has she been gone?"

"Not more than two or three minutes. I assisted her to the stairs. She would not wait for the elevator. She appeared in great haste to go and was trembling violently."

Nick Carter had only one reason for making his inquiries—the fact that he had noticed the girl's agitation in the hotel office, and that she had appeared so quickly on the scene of the murder. That she had been overcome by it, was not strange, yet the combination of circumstances, together with her haste to depart, served to increase the detective's misgivings. Other inquiries elicited no further information, however, and he returned to the room and again closed the door.

Doctor Blaney was just rising from his examination of the corpse, but, before expressing any opinion, he stepped into the bathroom to cleanse his hands.

Fenno, Detective Holman, and Soley, with the two men who had detained the former, were the only other persons then in the room.

"Were you running the elevator, Mr. Soley, a short time before this crime was committed?" Nick at once asked.

"Yes, sir, I was."

"Did you bring up to this floor a young lady in a navy-blue dress, wearing a veil of the same color, about twenty minutes ago, or about ten minutes before the murder was committed?"

"You mean the one who fainted?"

"Yes."

"She didn't come up in the elevator," Soley replied. "I saw her come up the stairs, sir, and afterward saw her twice in this corridor. She seemed to be waiting for somebody, or trying to locate a certain room."

"When did you last see her? I mean, Soley, how long before the crime was committed?"

"Something like two minutes, I should say. I was then coming down the fifth floor, where I had taken a couple, and she was standing about ten feet from the elevator door. I stooped the car, thinking I might give her some information, but she walked quickly away and turned into the corridor nearest the front rooms, which connect with this one. I did not see her again, sir, until just before she fainted."

"From which direction was she approaching this room?"

"From the front corridor, sir, just as I left the elevator with Detective Holman."

"That's right, Mr. Mouser," nodded the detective. "She was nearly opposite this door, however. I saw her look into the room, then utter a cry, and fall backward. In another second, before I could reach her, she was down and out on the floor."

"I noticed when entering that her veil was still drawn over her face," said Nick. "Do you know whether it was so when she looked into the room, or whether it dropped over her face when she covered it with her hands, or while she was falling?"

"She was veiled when I first saw her."

"And every time I saw her," put in Soley. "I did not see her face at all."

Nick was making many a mental note while asking these questions, but he expressed no opinion. Moving slightly, to avail himself of the bureau mirror, now wishing to observe Fenno without looking directly at him, he next asked:

"Did you see another woman in the corridor, Soley, dressed in black lace?"

"Yes, sure," Soley exclaimed. "That was Mrs. Pat Selkirk: She has a suite of rooms right next to this one."

Viewing his reflection in the mirror, Nick saw Fenno's brows knit quickly, as he watched Soley while he was speaking. That no more was said about the woman, for Nick asked no further questions concerning her; seemed to afford him some relief, and the latter purposely deferred other inquiries.

"Did you see anybody else in this corridor, Soley, during the ten minutes before the crime was committed?"

"Not in this corridor," replied Soley, with a headshake. "But I saw an old gentleman with gray hair going down the stairs, sir, as I was coming up in the car to answer a call from the tenth floor. It was then I heard these gentlemen shout for help, and I stopped the car and hurried in here."

"Did you bring the gray-haired man up in the elevator? I saw him enter the hotel about half an hour ago."

"Yes, sir, I did, and I stopped on this floor. That's what I was coming to, sir."

"Did he have any luggage?"

"He had a black leather bag, sir, and carried a cane."

"That's the same one," nodded Nick. "He had the bag and cane when he departed, did he?"

"Yes, sir, and I know he must have come from this floor. I reckon that Jackson, one of the waiters, must also have come up here," Soley added, with a glance at the tray and bits of glass on the table. "I saw him bringing up a drink less than three minutes before the crime was discovered."

"Ah, is that so? Bring Jackson up here at once, Soley," Nick abruptly commanded. "Say nothing to him about the crime, however. I'll learn for myself what he can tell us. Now, Doctor Blaney, what do you say?"

As Soley hurriedly departed to comply with Nick's instructions, the physician came from the bathroom, drying his hands with a towel.

"There is very little I can say," he replied, again approaching the dead man. "I find three wounds on the body, any one of which would have caused death. They were inflicted with this knife on the floor, which I have carefully compared with the three wounds. Two of them penetrated the left lung——"

"Just one moment, doctor," Nick interposed, kneeling beside the body and taking up the knife.

It was an ordinary dirk knife, with a blade about five inches long, having a sharp point and an edge as keen as that of a razor. Nick examined it briefly, but could find no marks on the horn handle, and he then bowed lower to study the two gashes in the breast of the corpse.

"Notice these points, Doctor Blaney, in case you are subsequently required to testify," he presently said, glancing up at the physician. "This knife, when these two wounds were inflicted, was so held that the sharp edge of it was held toward the victim's face. In other words, if this man was standing when the two blows were dealt, his assailant must have held the knife with the edge upward."

"The wounds prove that very plainly," Blaney gravely assented.

"Yet it is precisely the opposite way from which such a knife ordinarily is held," said Nick, using the weapon to illustrate the point he was making. "It would be much less effective, if so held, than is apparent in both wounds. There is only one logical deduction—that these two wounds were inflicted last, after this man had fallen to the floor, and that his assailant must have been reaching over him from a crouching position near his head."

"I think that is right," Blaney nodded. "I thought of it while making my examination."

"It is obvious, then, that this wound in the neck was inflicted first," Nick continued. "It is not a stab, like the others, but a deep cut. The knife servered both the windpipe and the jugular vein and the blade was drawn from the front of the neck toward the back, cutting deep into the left side of it."

"Detective Mouser, of the Central Office," put in Holman, by way of an introduction.

"You are right, Mr. Mouser," the physican added. "The evidence is irrefutable."

"Plainly, then," said Nick, "the assassin was standing to the left and a little behind his victim when this wound was inflicted. This broken whisky glass indicates that Judge Packard was about taking a drink when the attack was made, and that he dropped the glass. It struck on the edge of this table. Here are some fragments of the tumbler on it, but no sign of any liquor. It is evident, then, that he was about draining the glass when he was struck, and his attitude, with his head thrown back to swallow the liquor would have been very favorable for a person bent upon cutting his throat?"

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Frozen Food in Siberia.

The markets of Irkutsk, in Siberia, are an interesting sight, for the products offered for sale are in most cases frozen solid. Fish are piled up in stacks like so much cordwood, and meat likewise. All kinds of fowl are similarly frozen and piled up. Some animals brought into the market whole are propped up on their legs and have the appearance of being actually alive, and as one goes through the markets one seems to be surrounded by living pigs, sheep, oxen and fowls standing up. But, stranger yet, even the liquids are frozen solid and sold in blocks. Milk is frozen into a block in this way and with a string or a stick frozen into and projecting from it. This, it is said, is for the convenience of the purchaser, who is thus enabled to carry his milk by the string or stick handle.

High Praise.

That was a fine commencement oration of yours," said the young graduate's father.

"I'm glad you like it, father," replied the youth proudly.

"I liked it so much that I'm going to cut off your allowance from this time on. Any man who can settle the fate of nations right off the reel like you did oughtn't to have any trouble in rustling a first class job and holding it."

First Life Insurance Policy.

The first life insurance policy of which the details are on record resulted in a lawsuit. William Gybbons insured himself on June 15, 1583, for £383 against dying in twelve months. He did die on May 18 of the next year, and the disgusted underwriters (the company of those days) contested payment on the plea that he had lived twelve months of twenty-eight days each.

What's In A Name?

Sometimes There Is a Lot of Trouble

By F. A. MITCHEL

Caspar Kneilblitz's great-great-grandfather was a German. He was not a Prussian nor a warrior, but a Hanoverian and a professor. Indeed, the old fellow was a bookworm, who, if a fly had attacked the tip of his nose, would have been too absorbed in his studies to have defended himself. And if the fly had succeeded in arresting his attention he would not have injured the intruder for the world. He would have opened a window and put it out.

His son, Caspar, was called to the chair of a university in France. Thenceforth the family became French. The men, of course, kept the German surname, but by the time the fourth Caspar Kneilblitz came this was all the German there was about them. Not one of them could speak a word of German, and the third Kneilblitz had given his life for France in the war of 1870.

When Germany advanced into Belgium to seize Paris, Caspar Kneilblitz of the fourth generation, the hero of this story—if the word hero is a proper appellation—was twenty-one years old. He was only deterred from joining the colors by being so desperately in love with Hortense le Verrier that he was unable to tear himself away from her, though it must be admitted that if he had been able to master his own feelings sufficiently to leave her she would not have let him go.

For a Frenchman to have a German name accrued to his disadvantage as soon as the war broke out. Caspar Kneilblitz was at last driven to part with his beloved Hortense on this account. When others had joined the colors and Caspar remained at home it was suspected that the reason he did not go to the war was because of German sympathies. When he came to know of this suspicion he was much pained. He told Hortense that he must not listen to the voice of love any longer and at once began to make preparations to go to the front.

Of course he met with great opposition. Hortense was sure that she would never see him again and that her life would be blighted. He tried to reassure her, but in vain. However, since the suspicions of his countrymen that he was loyal to a country he had never seen and of whose language he did not know a word had been aroused his resolution was taken.

In order to make the separation easier for his sweetheart he promised to write her a letter every day that it would be possible for him to write. Another thing she insisted on which would not likely be possible was that after every battle, if he came out alive, he telegraph her to that effect. Caspar fully realized the crowded conditions of the telegraph lines, especially immediately after a battle, and that they were under control of the government, but he had not the heart to make it known to the girl, thus denying her this crumb of comfort. However, not knowing what possibilities might arise, he drew up a cipher code by which he might add a few endearing words of information concerning himself.

It was decided by the lovers that they would be married before a separation that might last forever. The ceremony was performed privately with few persons present. Within a week after its conclusion Caspar departed for the front.

While Caspar's loyalty to France was not questioned by those who knew him personally, his name at once excited suspicion in strangers. He had scarcely broken away from the clinging Hortense and gained his regiment before he began to be looked upon as a possible German sympathizer, though why he should be in the French army if he was loyal to Germany was not explained. Truth is that many a man loyal to France or England who had German blood in his veins experienced a like suspicion.

Caspar joined the army as a private and would have been promoted had it not been for his German name. Several times he distinguished himself, and, officers immediately above him having been killed off, there were vacancies. But when it came to a question of filling them and Caspar was proposed his name caused his rejection.

"What! Lieutenant Caspar Kneilblitz to command Frenchmen? Impossible!"

Of course Caspar knew nothing of this; he only knew that when vacancies occurred he was not promoted. It did not trouble him, for his heart was with his dear Hortense, and all he desired was that the war should be ended and he might return to her.

As luck would have it, Caspar found a friend, an operator in the military telegraph department. One day when he was feeling very homesick Caspar went to the office and asked his friend to send a dispatch for him. No fighting was going on at the time, and the telegraph was not very busy, so the friend told the lover that if he would leave his message with him he would endeavor to smuggle it through between messages for the government. Caspar left his message, which the operator put on file without looking at it and when a convenient time for sending it arrived took it up for the purpose.

He was surprised to see that it was in cipher. Not feeling at liberty to send a cipher message, the operator laid it aside. When Caspar came again to inquired if it had been sent and was told that it was held because it was in cipher Caspar looked so disappointed and begged so hard that it be put over the wires that his friend promised to do so, though he feared trouble would result. Caspar assured him that there was nothing in the dispatch that would be of the slightest injury to France, and this turned the scale.

M. Larrabee, deputed to examine telegrams received in Paris, was sitting at his desk when an operator handed him Caspar's dispatch. The moment he read the name of the person to whom it was addressed and noticed that the message was in cipher his face assumed the expression of one who had unearthed an announcement to German sympathizers that Paris was about to be attacked by a hundred Zeppelins.

"Mille tonerres!" he exclaimed. "Has it come to this? Do the enemy send cipher messages to their [illegible] in Paris over our telegraph lines? To Mme. Kneilblitz, 21 Rue Pomponier. Could there be better evidence that this message is intended for one of the horde of German spies in our midst, who are watching our every act?'

Taking up a telephone receiver, he called up the officer in charge of the military telegraph and informed him of the message, stating that he did not doubt that it had been surreptitiously sent in the expectation that it would be delivered by some one in the telegraph department who was working secretly in the German interest. Colonel Bombardier, the officer telephoned, directed that the dispatch be sent to him and, after receiving and examining it, called a council of war to decide what to do in the premises.

When the council assembled experts in interpreting cipher telegrams were introduced and began the work of translating it. This was not easy to do, for it consisted in certain sentences which doubtless had a meaning for the receiver. However, the experts, not daring to acknowledge that they could make nothing of it, gave a possible translation, admitting that they could not vouch for its correctness. The meaning they placed upon it was that it announced a meeting of the German spies in Paris to receive one high in the German secret service.

Meanwhile Hortense was arrested and taken to Colonel Bombardier's office, where she was kept in an anteroom awaiting the result of the work of the experts. In time she was called in to face an array of men who looked ready to send her to the gallows.

"Frau Kneilblitz," said the colonel, "do you speak French?"

"I don't speak any other language," was the meek reply.

"Do not try to deceive me. You are German, as your name indicates. A dispatch in cipher addressed to you has been intercepted. It is an announcement that an officer of high rank in the German secret service is coming to Paris to meet the spy corps in Paris."

This was said because if it were the true interpretation of the dispatch the young woman would likely collapse. She did no such thing. She simply looked at her accusers wonderingly.

"Who is Caspar?" asked the colonel severely.

"Monsieur, he is my husband. Has anything happened to him?" she asked, paling.

"You play your part well, but it will not serve."

"Have you a dispatch from him to me? Oh, give it to me!"

After a conference it was decided to read the dispatch aloud to her. The colonel began with the first sentence, "The weather is very fine," and asked her what it meant. She did not need the key to tell him; she knew it by heart.

"I am well," she replied.

The second sentence read was, "Yesterday it was hot."

Hortense, somewhat abashed, replied, "Sweetheart, I love you."

The members of the council looked at one another incredulously.

Again, "We are expecting cooler weather tomorrow."

"That means a thousand kisses," replied the bride, dropping her eyes to the floor.

"This climate is trying."

"I shall never see you again till France is victorious."

"The mud is very deep."

"Goodby, sweetheart. I shall love you forever."

Several of the men who had been impressed with Hortense's gentleness, honesty and, above all, that she was essentially French smiled. Colonel Bombardier's countenance assumed a shamefaced expression. He stood with the dispatch in his hand wondering what next to do.

"Colonel," said one of the council, "you've struck what they call in America 'a mare's nest.'"

"The case," said the colonel, maintaining an official tone, "will be better examined into by a woman. I shall send Mme. Kneilblitz to Mme. Leblanc, head of our woman's detective bureau, and if she reports favorably the prisoner will be discharged."

Mme. Leblanc, instead of assuming the pomposity of the officers, began by soothing the poor little bride and soon discerned that she was wrapped up in her husband and had no other concern. Hortense produced the cipher code, and Mme. Leblanc saw that every sentence in it was nothing more than a love message. Then she reported to Colonel Bombardier, who pigeonholed the matter.

When Hortense wrote an account of the affair Caspar Kneilblitz applied to his superior to be entered on the army roster as Charles Nightingale.

LOBSTER OUTLOOK BAD.

Canadian Packers Seek to Have French Embargo Lifted.

The lobster packers of Eastern Canada are continuing their representation to the French Government to have the embargo against lobsters raised.

It is upon the success or failure of the present attempt to lift the embargo that the lobster season for next year also will likely be based. Should it fail, then the same reasons as justify it for France will probably influence Britain to follow the lead, and business will then be for all practical purposes confined to this continent.

France alone takes a pack valued at nearly $1,000,000, and Britain as much more. The packers have endeavored to show that lobsters are a necessity and not a luxury, and the cost in France is below the price for an equivalent weight of meat. They point out how the packing and soldering of the cans is according to the requirements in France, and that lobster is a product of the colonies of Great Britain and the Allies; that lobsters are not extras, but constitute a meal, and that if the public is debarred from eating them they would need to buy more meat, which would cause an advance in the price of the latter, and the intention of economy would be defeated.

The French embargo was an unexpected blow and came just when all preparations had been completed for a usual pack during 1916, when commitments had been made and a large pack already secured in some sections, prices being based upon a normal business being done with France as in preceding years.

Fruit Conditions.

Dominion Fruit Commissioner Johnson reports that little spraying was done in Georgian Bay district last spring. Trees there have, too, set such a large crop that the fruit will be small unless a very heavy drop occurs. Prospects are, therefore, for an inferior product in that district. Over western Ontario a good deal of scab is developing, owing to lack of spraying, and a lot of the fruit is dropping in unsprayed orchards.

Between Toronto and Hamilton there will not be more than a 50 per cent. crop. Baldwins give best promise; spies and greenings light. Scab is prevalent, but some well-drained orchards, however, promise a fair crop. In the McIntosh and Fameuse section of eastern Ontario scab is developing to a remarkable degree and has caused considerable dropping.

The best report is made of Prince Edward county. More spraying than usual has been done there, and fruit is, apparently, setting well in that county.

In Nova Scotia apples are setting well, and the promise is now for a larger crop than seemed possible a few weeks ago. Weather conditions are good and there is practically no fungus showing as yet. It is estimated that there will be 70 per cent. of a full crop or slightly more than one million barrels. Gravensteins and Nonpareils are heavy, Baldwins and Kings medium, Starks and Blenheims light.

Taking the situation as a whole, it may be said that owing to neglect of orchards the production of good fruit will not be excessive, and the prospects are for reasonably profitable returns for those who have the good stuff.

DELUDES ITS ENEMIES.

Cunning of the Castor Oil Plant In Protecting Its Seeds.

Dressing them up to look like foul tasting bugs, this plant protects her children from hungry birds. If it were not for their disguises the children might be eaten and never have a chance to grow and become big plants. The wise mother plant realizes this, hence the masquerade. It's the castor oil plant.

To the average person anything relating to castor oil is not regarded as much of a delicacy. Birds, however, think otherwise. The seeds of the plant are like candy to them.

So the mother plant schemes to protect them. When she sends them out into the world she clothes them in variegated and fantastic dress until the seeds resemble coccinella beetles.

Now, if there is anything birds dislike more than anything else it is a coccinella beetle. As a result they make a wry face when they see the castor oil beans and pass them by.

These seeds are oval and about a half inch long. They grow in spiny capsules, three seeds in each capsule. To show that the castor oil plant is no newcomer on the earth, archaeologists write of finding seeds in tombs of ancient Egyptians.—Philadelphia North American.

FIRE BAGS AT SEA.

The Kind They Used In the Day of the Old Tinder Box.

Every whaler and sealer that sailed the seas in the days of wooden ships carried a fire bag. This was a tarpaulin bag about a foot long and six inches wide lined with waterproof material, with interlinings of oilcloth and thick flannel. Into this was placed the flint and tinder box for kindling fire, and the bag was then securely fastened with double flaps and tied to keep its contents dry.

It was the special duty of the second mate to look after the fire bag and in case of shipwreck to attach it at once to his person by means of stout straps provided for the purpose. Thus if officers and crew were cast away on some deserted shore in the desolate arctic circle the means of obtaining a fire to warm themselves by and to heat food and drink would not be wanting as long as the precious fire bag was safe.

The steam whalers and sealers of the present day still carry a fire bag stowed in the lifeboat with the bread and water, but now it is of rubber and contains half a dozen tin boxes of matches.

Double Eyed Fish.

There is a fish equipped with bifocal eyes, one-half of the lens for seeing above the surface of the water and the other for submarine use. This characteristic also gives the fish its popular name—double eyes.

The fish inhabits the shores of South America. Sometimes they swim with the eyes half out of water. Examination shows that each lens is divided into two parts by a dark band. The half above the band is out of water and the other half below the surface.

Naturalists tell us that the fish's eyes became "double" from its practice in swimming with them half submerged. Nature made the part of the eye above water adapted for seeing in the air, while the other part remained adapted for vision under water.

The double eyes grow to about a foot in length and in Brazil are caught for food.

Military Salute's Origin.

The military salute had a curious origin, if tradition is to be believed. It is said that it originated in the days of the tournament, at which a queen of beauty was chosen to preside. The knights and their esquires and all who took part in the tourney on presenting themselves before the queen lifted each one a hand level with the brows as though dazzled by the light of her presence. A nicely thought out compliment this, and, though its significance is now forgotten, the natural dignity of the gesture has preserved it as an everyday mark of recognition of a superior rank.—London Chronicle.

Willing to Be the Goat.

"'Why should the spirit of mortal be proud?'" quoted the impassioned orator.

Then he paused a moment to let it take effect.

A Moorish Marriage

It Took Place In Constantinople

By F. A. MITCHEL

If Constantinople is not the most interesting city in the world its situation is certainly the most beautiful. The Roman emperor Constantine built it some fourteen centuries ago and made it the capital of what was called the Eastern Roman Empire. A thousand years later it was conquered by the Turks, who have remained in possession ever since. It remains to be seen whether during the next ten or twenty years the banner of the cross will not displace the crescent, floating again after five centuries on the cathedral of St. Sophia.

In woman's struggle for a proper place in the world there is a vast difference between what she has accomplished in the western and eastern nations. Turkish women, while they have gained much, are still far behind their western sisters. Among certain Mohammedan sects they are still loaded with the customs of antiquity. This is noticeable in the union of the sexes by marriage. The Turk is not supposed to see his bride's face till he lifts her veil immediately after the wedding ceremony. But the most curious bridal among any Mohammedan people is that of the Moors.

A marriage between a Moorish girl and man having been arranged by the parents the bride is carried to her husband at night. The street through which she will pass is lined with people waiting to see the wedding procession. The bride is at home with her parents and the nurse who has had the care of her from the time of her birth. She steps into a box and it is carried out of the house to a mule standing at the door. Then to the sounds of weird music the animal with its burden is led down the street by the nurse between the lines of those looking on. On arriving at her husband's home she leaves the box and enters the house. When in the room where her husband, alone, is waiting for her she throws herself at his feet. He raises her and lifts her veil. There is no formal ceremony, no mutual pledges. The fact of their being brought together and the door shut behind them constitutes a marriage.

In Constantinople there are Mohammedans from many quarters of the globe. There is a Moorish quarter where the denizens practice such ceremonies as are practiced on the northern coast of Africa.

There is a little stream flowing into the Bosporus called the sweet waters of Asia. Turkish ladies in summer time make excursions to its banks in rowboats. Leaving the boats, they scatter themselves on the land, and it is a pretty sight to see them, clad as they are in their brightly colored manties. They carry rugs and cushions with them, which they place on the ground, often at the base of trees, which furnish a convenient support. There they chatter and eat candy. Turkish men are near, but do not mingle with the women.

One afternoon a party of Moors were thus enjoying the cool breezes from the Bosporus. There were women and children, but no men. One of the children, a little boy of four years, took it into his head to toddle away. He was followed by a young girl and found being petted by a young man sitting on the ground against a tree with a book. The girl drew back, but the young man, seeing that she had come for the child, arose, doffed his fez and led the boy to her.

Why the souls of this man and this girl should have rushed together upon this meeting which lasted but a few minutes is one of the many mysteries that pertain to the universe. The young man read his book no more that day. He arose from his seat and went where he could peer upon the girl through an opening in the foliage. He was not noticeable, and any one told that he was near would have had difficulty in finding him. Not so the girl. His face was as plain to her as the sun in heaven. On first seeing him she dropped her eyes, but in a few minutes she raised them, dropped them again, raising and dropping them till at last a responsive look of love darted from them.

When the party to which the girl belonged returned to their home in the Moorish quarter the young man followed them to see where they lived.

It was not long after this that the mother of this girl—Ahesha was her name—received a proposition for her daughter's hand. The family to which the young man belonged was an excellent one, and he would have double the amount of property that would be settled upon the girl. A contract was signed, and the young persons were betrothed.

Had this betrothal taken place before the meeting by the sweet waters of Asia Ahesha would likely have received it with indifference. All Mohammedan maidens expect to be married, and they are aware of the fact that they have nothing to say in the choice of a husband. But the announcement made her by her mother, since love had stolen unbidden into her heart, had a crushing effect. She received it without comment, but its blighting effect showed itself in the pallor that overspread her countenance. Her mother saw it and wondered. She had no idea that her daughter had ever met any young man to whom she had given her heart and could only attribute her daughter's emotion to the fact of changing her state from maidenhood to wifehood.

But from the day of the announcement Ahesha grew thin and lost the lovely color in her cheeks for which she had been distinguished. In vain her mother tried to discover what was the matter with her. Doctors were called upon to diagnose her case, but could not find any organic disease. And still the girl pined, and as her wedding day approached there was a blighted look upon her that greatly troubled those who loved her.

Shortly before her wedding something happened which threw a gloom over the Moors of Constantinople. A young bride who had gone to her husband in the box used for the purpose was found on its being opened before the door of the groom's house dead with a dagger in her heart. She had committed suicide. The cause was unknown, but it was assumed that she had loved and preferred death to being married to one not the man who possessed her heart.

Ahesha's parents endeavored to keep this tragedy from her, but it was impossible. From the time she heard it she was changed. Her gloom settled into a look of resolve. Only her mother feared the cause. She dreaded lest her daughter had some intention by which to escape the marriage arranged for her. Indeed, so great was the woman's solicitude that she begged her daughter to tell her if there was any reason why marriage was repulsive to her and if so what it was. Then Ahesha confessed her love for the young man she had met by the sweet waters of Asia.

The mother at once went to her husband and told him the secret, proposing to abrogate the marriage contract for their daughter.

"What!" said the infuriated Moor. "Go back on the word of a follower of Mohammed! Allah forbid!"

The poor woman, realizing that it would be impossible to move her bigoted husband, gave up the struggle and prepared her daughter for her bridal.

At last the wedding day arrived. Ahesha stood like a statue while her mother and her nurse arrayed her for the bridal. The box stood ready, and she stepped into it. Her mother kissed her, then closed the door of her cramped conveyance. The nurse took up her load, carried it to the street and, placing it on the back of the mule, fastened it with thongs. Then the concealed bride, the beast bearing her led by her nurse, passed down the street between the lines of spectators convened to see a wedding procession. Those who had an acquaintance with the bride waved to her and shouted messages. Slowly the hidden burden moved from maidenhood to wifehood—or to death? The few who feared a repetition of the recent tragedy held their breaths till the box should be opened.

But there was one who knew. The nurse, who loved Ahesha as well as if she had been her own daughter, could have told them whether the box contained a living being or a corpse. But Asiatics have great self control. The features of the bronzed face were rigid and inexpressive. No one could read them.

Perhaps it was because this was the first wedding since the tragedy; perhaps a rumor had been circulated that the bride in the box had a lover other than her betrothed. Whatever the cause, as the little procession approached the groom's house a hush came over the spectators standing near. The waving ceased, the congratulatory shouts died down. The mule was led up before the house, the nurse opened the door. For a moment no descending bride was visible. A chill came over the onlookers.

Then the bride appeared, moving slowly as if scarcely able to drag herself from her hiding place. Her features were concealed by her veil. Supported by her nurse, she entered the house, the door was closed behind her and a sigh of relief came from the spectators.

Ahesha found a wedding party within. They rose as she entered, but spoke no word. Passing through the room she came to a door, which was opened, and in another moment she was alone with her husband. Advancing, he raised her veil, she looked into the face of the young man she had met on the bank of the sweet waters of Asia.

Abdul Aekbar, the groom, having learned the home of the girl he had met, and being his own master, made an application for her hand. He said nothing of having seen her, fearing that the custom of a man not being permitted to meet his bride before marriage might stand in his way of possessing her. He knew nothing of her pining at being intended for another. If he had been aware of her condition he might have surreptitiously conveyed to her a message revealing the fact that they were to be united.

One day Ahesha's nurse had seen her charge engaged upon her wedding costume. The woman watched her and saw that she was making a pocket in her vest. When it was finished she slipped a knife into it. The nurse said nothing, but when she arrayed the bride for her wedding she took out the knife without Ahesha's knowledge.

Great was the rejoicing among those nearest the bride when the great change in her on her reappearance was observed. Meanwhile the nurse had told the mother of the knife that she had removed. The mother told the father. When the old Moor heard it he was silent for a moment, then said:

"Allah be praised!"

That was his only comment.

"My wife and I are thinking of chartering a yacht for the summer."

"Won't that be pretty expensive?"

"Not as long as we confine ourselves to thinking about it."

Dainty Boudoir Cap.

A dainty boudoir cap can be fashioned out of a bit of shadow lace and a scrap of crepe de chine. Make a crown of the lace, and attach to it the silk, which is gathered a trifle. The joining place is concealed with twisted ribbon, which is studded here and there with a tiny rosebud. Gather the silk about an inch or so from the bottom, and see that it slips over the head easily. Finish with a ruffle of lace sewed inside the edge. Long loops of ribbon placed on the side will still further improve the appearance of this dainty bit of feminine wear.

"Breaking In" Miss Willy

Story of a Girl on a Ranch

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Wilhelmina Moore was tired out. She had been hard worked for many months and had made money. How she made it her friends in the quiet town where she lived did not know and she did not enlighten them. When she was at work she was absent from Mertonville and returned at long intervals, usually tired as she was at the present time.

Just why Miss Moore kept her profession or her business a secret was also a mystery. Some said that it was because she was ashamed of it; some that she did not care to tell others how she made so much money lest they all go into the same line and thus subject her to competition. Whatever was the cause, one thing was certain—her reticence excited the curiosity of every woman in Mertonville.

However these things were, Wilhelmina had come back home from one of her trips, longer than usual, looking as if she had been keelhauled. Her doctor gave her a tonic, but it did not seem to suffice. He recommended horseback riding, but she said she did not see how such exhausting exercise could rest her. Then he suggested going into the country, where she could live an out of door life and breathe the fresh air.

Wilhelmina's uncle owned a big ranch in the west, and the moment her doctor suggested an out of door life she thought that she would like to visit him, sit on the veranda and do nothing. So she wrote her uncle asking if he would permit her to go to him and received a reply extending an invitation, but at the same time warning her that she would find few associates such as she had been accustomed to, most of them being cowboys, who were a very rough lot. She might come any time she liked and remain till she had got well rested. As soon as she received this letter she packed such articles as would be appropriate for ranch life and in due time arrived at her destination.

The moment Miss Wilhelmina Moore appeared in Scraggy Creek every man on the Big Y outfit declared that of all the tenderfoot maidens out of the east none had ever been so green, so timid, so exasperatingly afraid of a horse as the girl they dubbed Miss Willy.

"I'm plumb disappointed," muttered Dade Holcomb after dinner the next day. "I thought maybe she'd be the kind of girl a feller could enjoy teaching a few lessons in broncho bustin' or something of that sort."

Bob Linton grinned.

"You might suggest it to Miss Willy," he said. "Perhaps she really would enjoy broncho busting."

"Oh, shut up!" snapped Dade. "I'm not taking any chances with those slim, pale, scary eyed females who shudder at sight of a gun and faint dead away if one goes off promiscuous like."

"You might feel the same sensation if you were introduced to a crowded subway station at the rush hour in New York," retorted Bob. "I understood from Mrs. Besse that her niece had been ill and was here for a rest."

"Too much society!" sniffed Dade. "Miss Willy can't throw a rope around me now. I'm not in the market when these society fluffs are around."

"Sour grapes," laughed Bob as they parted company, he to ride on to Scraggy Creek postoffice for the mail and the newspapers and Dade to go over to the south range to relieve one of the line riders.

"This here Miss Willy girl ought to be broken in to western ways," remarked Hannibal at supper that night. "I was cleaning my gun this afternoon, and she come upon me sudden around the corner of the barn. When she saw the gun she jumped like a rabbit and beat it for the house. Scared to death she was."

"I suppose if we shot up the ranch she might get used to it," remarked Dade thoughtfully. "No use talking, boys; Miss Willy's got to be broken in or there won't be no loving on the Big Y."

"Bob here was holding her knitting wool this afternoon while she was winding it on a ball. Our little Bobby will soon be house broke," sneered Fenton.

Bob flushed hotly and lighted his pipe in grim silence. All through the meal he had been thinking of Willy Moore's tired smile, her wonderful black lashed gray eyes, the soft contour of her colorless cheek. She was a slim, graceful girl, with quantities of fair hair, which she wore in a thick braid down her back.

"She dresses like a cowboy and acts like a timid New England schoolmarm," went on Dade. "I've a good mind to lend her Black Satan and tell Miss Willy that he's the gentlest pony west of New Hampshire."

"Don't," warned Bob Linton as he went out into the night.

The men around the table stared after him.

Suddenly Dade laughed.

"Plumb locoed," he declared.

But his remark was followed by an uncomfortable silence.

The next day Dade did offer Black Satan to Willy Moore.

"Sure he won't harm you," protested Dade as Willy laid a slim white hand on Black Satan's velvet muzzle. "He'll carry you over the ground like a bird. You'll think you've been flying."

"Perhaps I will try him some time," said Willy dreamily as she wandered toward the house.

"She's wise to your homicidal schemes, Dade," chaffed his companions.

If Miss Willy was suspicious she gave no further sign, and one morning when Dade Holcomb especially needed his black horse it was discovered that Miss Willy had dashed away on Satan's back to the evident consternation of the Besse family.

"I hope Willy knows what she's about," murmured Mrs. Besse doubtfully.

"Trust her, Anne," reassured the boss good naturedly.

Bob Linton, overhearing the conversation, wondered at Boss Besse's calm attitude, and, it being his own afternoon off, he rode off down the trail in the wake of Black Satan.

Dade Holcomb was limping along the trail in his high heeled boots confident every moment that he would overtake horse and rider or else—here he felt wretchedly guilty—find Black Satan riderless and a limp heap of girlhood, for Black Satan did not belie his name.

As he passed Dade, Bob cast a look of loathing at the practical joker.

"I'm going to look for Miss Willy, Dade," he remarked drily. "If you have really broken her in—I'll kill you!"

"I hope you will!" muttered Dade miserably. "I sure deserve it, Bob."

And just then Miss Willy flashed into view with the plunging Satan at mercy of her quirt and spurs.

She glanced mischievously down at the astounded Dade.

"Rather a riotous little lamb, this Satan of yours, Mr. Holcomb," she threw over her shoulder.

"Great cats!" yelled Dade, as they vanished around the trail toward home.

Bob Linton was staring after them with a queer look in his eyes. "I wondered—I wondered," he muttered over and over.

That night, as they sat around the supper table in the mess house, the boss came down to them.

"Boys," he said, "I've twenty tickets here for a moving picture show over at the creek. Just say who wants to go and I'll pass 'em out. After the show we'll have supper at the Palace hotel—my treat."

Fifteen hands reached out for the tickets, for they were mere boys in their love of amusement, and the motion picture theater at Scraggy Creek was closed half the time, being subject to alternate periods of affluence and bankruptcy and constantly changing ownership.

At 6:30 they set out from the Big Y in the boss' big red automobile, escorted by all the cowpunchers on horseback.

In the motorcar was Mr. Besse and his wife and Miss Willy.

Bob Linton rode beside Miss Willy.

Dade Holcomb and Hannibal dragged along in the rear, as became culprits. They were still gasping over Miss Willy's miraculous escape from death. Inwardly they were thankful.

Inside the Family theater the boss guided them to a block of reserved seats, while he and his wife and Willy were escorted to a lower box.

When the theater was filled the lights were lowered, and on the magic white screen appeared the scenes of a rollicking comedy.

When that was over the manager appeared to announce the special picture of the evening, the favorite film actress, Miss Billie Moore, in "A Lover of the Plains." And he further announced that at the end of the picture Miss Moore would appear in person and greet her audience.

Wide eyed, staring silently, as the love story of the west was unfolded before their eyes, sat the fifteen cowboys from the Big Y ranch.

There was an indrawn breath of surprise when the charmingly familiar face of their Miss Wilhelmina Moore flashed forth as the heroine of the play. Dumbly they watched her perform such deeds of daring on horse and afoot as they never dreamed a mortal girl could survive.

She could break a bucking broncho, she could throw a lariat and bring a "critter" to its knees; she could ride like mad on an unsaddled horse; she hung over a precipice and dragged her imperiled lover from certain death, and in the end she was restored to his arms.

Not a man in the Big Y outfit but was furiously jealous of that screen lover!

And when the lights flashed up there was such a thunder of applause that the flimsy building threatened to collapse under the strain.

Then the manager was introducing the heroine, a slender, pale girl with smiling lips and friendly gray eyes, who, he explained, was "resting after a long illness and spending the time with our well known citizen, Benjamin Besse of the Big Y."

The Big Y outfit arose to a man and yelled themselves hoarse, and Miss Willy stood there dimpling and smiling and full of mischief at having turned the tables on the cowboys. Boss Besse and his wife finally carried her off to the Palace hotel, followed by the cowboys, who were to be Miss Willy's guests that night.

"You've broken them all in, honey," grinned the boss, as he lifted Miss Willy out of the car when they reached home. "There's one of 'em"— but his niece's hand gently closed his lips, and her face went red.

"There's one whose name you mustn't mention just yet," she whispered.

And they were both thinking of Bob Linton—and Bob, he was thinking only of Miss Willy and how soon he might ask her to marry him.

Folks who have been wondering where the old-fashioned summer had gone now have it located.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Low Crowns and Broad Brims Are Spring's Features.

There is a rather pronounced tendency toward moderately low crowns and broader, flattish brims in soft felt hats for the coming summer season. It is the opinion of some prominent hat men that in the more popular proportions, because of the fashion among young men of wearing their hats well down on the back of their heads, very few hats with crowns lower than five and one-quarter inches will be sold. Women are following the masculine lead in hats now.

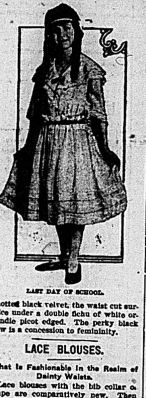
Outside of a very slight inclination in certain parts of the west toward greens and a little disposition in the east to favor browns, no "leading color" has developed in the advance summer business. A few manufacturers are forecasting light colors, but such forecasts at the present time probably are born of hopes rather than facts, for, as one manufacturer expressed it, "light colors can be stained into hats, but dark colors have to be dyed in," and never before have dyes cost so much as they do now.

Also in straw hats will these moderately low crown, broad brim styles be most popular. While the regular sailor shapes will be, of course, most generally worn, there will be some very smart shapes made of leghorn and panama straws, and in the soft straw hat we shall see the panama with large or wide brims and slightly conical crowns. The leghorns in these same shapes may be in black or dark brown. The former is a very smart hat with dinner clothes. Then there will be the soft straw with a creased top, as in the Homburg shape, and perhaps many others. Some of the boat shapes will be made of panama or leghorn straw, but, as heretofore, the most popular straw hats of the season will be the boat shapes and split braid straws.

THE FLAPPER'S FROCK.

Hoydens Sometimes Like This Kind of a Gown.

Dimity set off with a figured stripe is the material used here. The full skirt is finished with a valance heading and knotted black velvet, the waist cut surplice under a double fichu of white organdie picot edged. The perky black bow is a concession to femininity.



LAST DAY OF SCHOOL.

LACE BLOUSES.

What Is Fashionable In the Realm of Dainty Waists.

Lace blouses with the bib collar or crape are comparatively new. Then there are the cape blouses which give a pretty finish across the shoulders, but are so contrived that they do not add any suggestion of breadth across the chest. Some of these capes are bound with satin or moire ribbon while others have a quilling of net or chiffon.

Striped messaline has been chosen for the development of a semi-tailored blouse, which later may be worn with the outing skirt. In fact, the outing season has been very well considered in the planning of the blouse models. This is evidenced in the smock blouses, which are really a sort of coat and which are either quiet or very gay.

In some instances the smock blouses are trimmed with the stenciled designs in high colors; other ideas are expressed in applique motifs of cretonne. It is not uncommon to have the smock trimming to match that of the sport hat.

Pongee has come into its own once more. One of the most recent models is a coat blouse of pongee made in Norfolk style with large pockets and big collar. Some of the models are laced in color on the hips and part way down the front.

Almond Rusks.

A cupful melted butter, a cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls sugar, three eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, a teaspoonful almond extract. Cream butter, add sugar, eggs well beaten, baking powder with flour and milk alternately. Roll like loaves of bread in shape and bake in hot oven. When done and cool cut up in slices and halves (about one and one-half inch slices) and put back in moderate oven until golden brown; then keep in oven with door open about one hour.

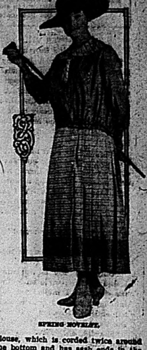
* * *

The happiest man in the world is the man who is happy with what he has, not with what he may some day possess.

HERE'S A SPORT FROCK.

For Hot Weather We Now Have Striped Pongee.

Striped pongee is all the vogue. The frock pictured is put up in the natural color contrasted with a green that harmonizes with the plain green pongee blouse, which is corded twice around the bottom and has sash ends in the back. Collar and tie repeat the skirt material.



SPRING NOVELTY.

BEAUTY IN THE BOUDOIR.

How Smart Rest Gowns Flame In Oriental Colors.

In the direction of the boudoir gown the feeling for rainbow radiancy is specially marked, and, as there are no hard and fast rules as to styles to be observed, it follows that no limit is placed on the creative genius of the clever costumiere, whose fancy in the matter of cut and color is given free rein. The little shoulder capes, the wide turnover collars, the short, straight coats now in vogue and the varied forms of stole and pelerine provided for wear over the transparent corsage, which is the corsage of the moment, are excellently adapted for diversity in the matter of color treatment.

Gossamer chiffon and stiff brocade of an oriental gorgeousness of hue are alike employed. Taffeta, faille, satin, lace—none of these materials comes amiss to the dressmaker with ideas. The gorgeous costumes of the princes of India have inspired some of the boudoir coats, which are not only eastern in the splendor of their coloring, but in actual shape resemble more than a little the long coat which so often forms part of an oriental's dress. Large paste or enamel buttons, such as the native loves, lend an added touch of realism, and the slightly decollete neck is often bordered by a band of fur. La Mode never does things by halves, and when it comes to the point of paying compliments she can hold her own with the most accomplished flatterer. In the winter it was the bersaglieri hat; just now it is the Queen of the Adriatic to whom grateful homage is paid.

HUGE FLOWERS BLOOM.

On the New Hats Blossoms Not Yet Classified In Botanies.

After several seasons of small flowers fashion has suddenly swerved to the other extreme and is now advocating the use of immense flowers for both hat and dress decoration.

An instance of this is found in a Paris hat of red straw, whose high crown and very broad brim are connected by a narrow ribbon of the same hue tied in a bit of a bow at the back. Posed directly in front is an immense rose of silk and velvet, also of the red color.

Poppies of tremendous size are being employed for dress hats. They are reproduced in natural colors, with emphasis on the red and pink nuances. Frequently the poppies are pulled apart and the petals in some fantastic and overlapping manner are arranged about the base of the crown. The effect is very striking when the hat is of azure blue crin straw and the poppies in flame color.

Another novel bloom is found in flowers of mica—translucent and having the appearance of a grayish alabaster. Such blossoms are sometimes placed on the top of the crown of a hat of black milan straw, the additional altitude serving to balance the extreme width of the brim. Besides the flowers, sometimes a glazed band of ivory ribbon is employed.

A Useful Bag of Strings.

A bag of pretty, sturdy cretonne divided inside into four generous sized pockets. Four balls of different kinds of string, commencing with the thin but strong and growing heavier and stronger ball by ball until the fourth is a near cable. Four eyelets in the bottom of the bag—one from each pocket and each eyelet duly buttonholed—to let the strings pull through more easily. And a blunt pair of strong scissors fastened on "for keeps" to the side of the bag.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM VERNON DOOLITTLE

Whitley Camp, June 29th.

Dear Parents and to all:—

No doubt you will be wondering why I haven't written for so long a time, but we have been told repeatedly that we were apt to get our leave within a moment's notice, so I have been putting it off so that I could tell you about our trip. I wrote you after coming back from Salisbury Plains about our trip all the way through, but that mail was sent to Australia and the Australian mail to Canada. We got word from the colonel of our division, so perhaps it will be some time before you get it. I am sending some post-cards I got while there, we were all pretty tired by the time we got back but nevertheless we had a good time firing the guns. We received word that we were the best Battery of the two bridages (8th and 9th) we certainly did good firing. Percy was up as were nearly all the Belleville boys. I received your letter dated June 4th in which you hoped I had received the money sent me. I have both what you have sent, and what I cabled for, and as I want to go to Scotland, will try while there to get something to send home: Half of the Battery has already gone on leave, and we go Sunday night. I received two letters to-day, one from Harry Bryant and one from Helen Blair. Our mail has been held up for over two weeks now, but at last it is coming all right. We have been here now nearly five months and a lot of our fellows have been transferred to the D.A.C. Scud and Harry Elliott are a couple of them, although they are in the same camp and as Lieut McGillivray has been transferred to headquarters, Percy has gone also, although we see him every day. Peny Mills, Les Yerex and myself, have passed the test as qualified gunlayers, which entitles us to wear a layer's badge on our arm. I daresay pa would be pleased to see us when we turn out some morning all the horses groomed up to the mark and the harness with all its steel glistening. We have been inspected three or four times since coming back from the Plains, and on Saturday we are to be inspected at Aldershot by the King, of course all before have been preliminary.

So Basil had an accident on the motorcycle did he. He will be joining the despatch corps yet. I have not received those snaps yet, but will soon likely. As a lot of our drivers have been on pass, and short-handed, I have been driving a team lately, I am getting so I can ride pretty good now. You speak of our beds, well, we still have our straw-ticks, and I have seven blankets—we are supposed to only have four, but as they were hanging around and not in use, I pinched them. We get eggs and bacon every other morning for breakfast, and oat-meal porridge and milk every morning. We are all contented, and will have to close for now, hoping you are all well as this leaves me at present.

VERNON.

Whitley Camp, July 3, 1916.

Dear Parents and to all:—

Well, we were inspected Saturday at 12 o'clock, the whole 3rd division were there, I would say there were 25 or 30,000 in the field. Of course, that included infantry, artillery, ammunition columns and A.S.C. We, the Artillery, marched past first. King George was on our right mounted on a swell black horse; on his right sat Lord French, and on his left were two other high ranked men. The place was called Headly Common, a sort of valley and very large. I was driving, and just as we got in front of the King, the off horse on the team ahead of me started acting up, just our luck you know. They say he said, I bet there's a Belleville man on that gun team. He looks just like he does in his picture. Queen Mary was there too, she was seated in a swell big car. You should just see some of the beautiful cars her; some are a light grey, and some almost white. I received the parcel of underwear and pants, believe me, they never could of come in better as the ones I was wearing were pretty well worn, they were fine as well as the other parcel. I was not here to receive it when the other one came, so they put it on my bed, and the first thing to do next morning was to open it. We have decided to have the strawberries to night for supper. The fellows went crazy over those cookies and little cherry pies, as well as the chocolate fudge.

We are all well, and enjoying ourselves. I forgot to mention that Percy and I got two horses and rode over to Bramshott. We saw Duncan Montgomery, Arthur Ferguson, Jack Phelan and Eddie Elliott, as well as other fellows. We mentioned at the time there were four of us standing together were in Tallasse, Phelan, Ferguson, Duncan and myself, some record eh,—seven in all four in England, two in France and one in Belleville, and he is a married man of course. Well I am on fatigue to day and just stole into write this, so I will close again for now.

With love to all,

VERNON.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE FLASH OF AN EMERALD," HIGHLY PLEASING

Despite the heat and the circus Griffin's Opera House had a large attendance last evening, drawn thither by "The Flash of an Emerald," an exceptionally interesting 5-part photodrama, featuring the famous Robert Warwick as "Lucius Waldeck," a social leach, who was ever on the alert for unmerited gain. He first stole a sporting prize cup, and set the whole race court in commotion. Then he scaled the roof of several buildings and got possession of a priceless diamond set-ornament, chloroforming everything in sight. His antics, polished though they were by the suavity of a handsome expert, were deep laid and thoroughly carried out. How he brought into confederate relations two handsome young ladies, who aided in his crimes because of their love for him, could only be accomplished by an adept at the game. However, he ran the gauntlet of a couple of young Misses, who were on the alert, which resulted in his undoing. The play is admirably set up, and the characters, including the wealthy widow from whom he stole the gem, were of the best. The scenes were laid in a Quebec hostelry, amid luxurious surroundings. "The Flash of an Emerald" held the closest attetion throughout. With a number of other catchy plays, it will be repeated this evening.

HOLBROOK BLINN IN "THE FAMILY CUPBOARD" AT GRIFFIN'S TO-MORROW

Hilbrook Blinn and Frances Nelson in a heartrending domestic drama. "Same old story; same old moral." That's true—but there's a difference; not much, but just sufficient to give this particular story an aspect of originality and probability. World Film Corporation endeavors to specialize in strong and pungent stories, and in this picture you certainly get a good sample of the fare that seems best suited to the tastes of motion picture patrons. And the lesson seems to be this: Be careful even in your armours, otherwise you will make a mess of it.

Recently a New York Aspasia inveigled an acquaintance of the writer's into her net and made him pay smartly for her favors. This man was a prominent insurance official. Contemporaneously the lady exerted her wiles as a confrere of the officials. Both men, racing hard to the devil, got careless of their work (they were very high salaried employees). The directors of the company commissioned detectives to find out the causes of the men's neglect of duty. The confidential report disclosed the fact that the culprits were paying tribute to the same Delilah. Two cupboards emptied their contents, of course.

That's what happens in this photoplay, "The Family Cupboard," only the culprits are father and son. That fine artist, Holbrook Blinn, plays the part of the erring father; the vaudeville girl is impersonated by Frances Nelson.

The peccadilloes of father and son are not the whole things in "The Family Cupboard," there are many sidelights on social and Bohemian life which diversify the play.

"The Family Cupboard" will be shown at Griffin's Opera House to-morrow and Saturday, matinee and night.

WAR WEAPONS OF THE PAST.

Crude Originals of the Modern Long Range Death Dealers.

The commonest injuries produced in war are gunshot wounds. Until fifty years ago a soldier's musket carried only about 835 feet, and this degree of efficiency had not been exceeded for more than 200 years—namely, from 1640 to 1850. In other words, the wars of Louis XIV., the struggles of the French revolution, the Napoleonic wars, the Crimean war and our war of 1812 were all fought with firearms which had no effect at a distance greater than 835 feet. In 1857, however, the smoothbore gun barrel was replaced by the rifled barrel, and this change caused an immediate increase in the carrying distance to 2,000 feet. At the time this result seemed to the whole world nothing short of a miracle, but as early as 1866 a French officer, Chassepot by name, invented a rifle having a caliber of 15 millimeters, which carried 4,000 feet. Ten years before this accomplishment would have seemed quite impossible. On Nov. 4, 1867, the new Chassepot rifle was submitted to a practical test. The French sent a detachment of men to occupy Rome and to hold it against the advancement of Garibaldi. The effect of the new rifle in the engagements was so remarkable that the entire French army was immediately equipped with Chassepots.

The Chassepot rifle weighed nine pounds, and the Gras rifle, which was introduced in 1874, weighed nearly as much, but it had a carrying distance of 6,000 feet. After remaining the same for 217 years, the carrying distance of firearms was thus increased in fifteen years by 5,165 feet. At the same time the firearms of the Austrians, Prussians and Italians were also greatly improved, and a repeating rifle firing sixteen shots a minute and having a carrying distance of 9,000 feet came into practical use.

The rifles in use today are much lighter, are more easily handled and carry a distance of more than 12,000 feet at the rate of 2,700 feet per second. The revolver was first introduced in 1850; since then it has also undergone great improvement. Its carrying distance, which at first was only about 100 feet, was increased to 330 feet, then 680, and finally 4,000 feet.

In comparison with such means of defense and offense it is interesting to call to mind the weapons of the ancients. A javelin could be thrown about eighty-four feet; the sling ordinarily hurled its missile 266 feet, the Balearic slingmen being famous, however, because they could hurl a stone 333 feet. The wooden bow was in use until the middle of the fifteenth century; by means of it an arrow could be propelled a distance of [illegible]-330 feet, while the steel crossbow, which came into use later, carried from 330 to 340 feet. The old blunderbuss of the pilgrims, which was supported on a fork, was effective for about 500 feet. The early musket carried about 600 feet. This firearm was much improved, so that it could shoot a distance of 835 feet, and this was the best the world knew until 1857.

Forecasts In the Almanac.

While in modern times almanacs commonly concern themselves only with the known facts of the year with which they deal, for many years after they came into general use, about the middle of the sixteenth century, predictions not only with regard to the weather, but also concerning the supposed planetary influences, were a vital part of their contents. The "prognostication" generally dealt with "the varieties of the ayre and also of the windes throughout the whole yere, with infortunate times to bie and sell, take medicine, sowe, plant and journey, etc." In France a decree of 1579 forbade all makers of almanacs to prophesy concerning affairs either of state or of individuals.—London Chronicle.

Appendicularly Speaking.

Royal Party Pass Through Wertern Tunnel

Make Trip Under Selkirk Mountain Over C. P. R. Tracks — Duke Christens It

CAMBIE, B.C., July 19.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the Duchess and Princess Patricia, were yesterday taken through the tunnel under the Selkirk Mountains, the completion of which gives the C.P.R. a low grade from coast to coast. This double-track tunnel, which is five miles long, pierces Mount MacDonald and is on a grade of less than one per cent. It was bored in record time, and no other tunnel has ever been pierced so fast. In addition to this, it heads the American and European record for low cost of boring. The peak this tunnel pierces is over one mile above the track level.

The Royal party arrived at the eastern portal of the tunnel about seven o'clock, leaving their train there. They were taken trough Roger's Pass by special train, and then whisked back to their starting point through the tunnel.

The trip through the tunnel was made in an open flat car, equipped with seats and benches, which was pulled by a compressed air engine. The trip through the tunnel was made in 25 minutes. Arrived at the western portal there was a brief ceremony by which the Duke formally christened the tunnel "The Selkirk." His Royal Highness in a brief speech highly complimented the C.P.R. on their successful completion of their great enterprise, making personal reference to Mr. Grant Hall, Mr. John Sullivan and Mr. Dennis. The Duke's remarks were responded to on behalf of the C.P.R. by Grant Hall, general manager of the western lines.

The Royal party then re-entered their train and proceeded on their way to the Coast Among those present at the opening were Grant Hall, John Sullivan, chief engineer, and Engineer Dennis, representing the contractors, Foley, Welch and Stewart. The tunnel will be opened for general railway traffic in about four months.

NUDE DOUKHOBORS HALTED

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., July 19.—Ten Doukhobor women who sallied forth unclothed on a pilgrimage in the Kamsack district were sentenced to the Provincial jail for six months. Thirty-one men who participated in the parade also were given six months.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

SOME HOT WEATHER.

The heat during the week has had its effect upon the ambition of the camp in general, the thermometer running up very close to 90 in the shade. At this point, with much humidity in the atmosphere, everybody felt the heat, and had to admit that it was warm enough for men who were not in training for the tropics or that place mentioned in the chaplains' sermon last Sunday. The men were all dressed—or rather undressed—for conditions. Conventionalities do not count in Barriefield Camp. Comfort is the first consideration, and when it comes to comfort on a hot day, it is astonishing how much a soldier can take off, and yet leave sufficient on to be regimental and to keep from the interference of the society for the prevention of immodest appearances.

NOTES.

The Salvation Army Ladies' Band gave a concert in the big tent of the 155th Belleville Battalion on Wednesday evening for the boys of that unit.

It is said that of the sixty men that Picton sent away in the first contingent there is only one left at the front now. The 155th Battalion is commanded by a Picton man, and many others in that unit are from the same town.

Lieut.-Col. Adams, officer commanding the 155th Battalion, returned to camp yesterday after a visit to his home in Picton.

The band of the 155th Battalion will play at a Garden Party in aid of the Belgian Relief at the Y.W.C.A. on Tuesday, July 25th.

Rev. Dr Charles Geo. Smith, pastor of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church of Belleville, will commence a week's work at the military Y.M.C.A. tomorrow evening. Dr Smith comes with a good reputation for work among young men, and no doubt his services at Barriefield camp will be helpful and profitable.

Miss Constance Van Quentin, having adjusted her skirt to just the right brevity and transparency, gasped aloud as she looked in the mirror and found that she was about to go out on the street with her hair fixed so that one of her ears was exposed.

"Basket Upset."

A very interesting game is called "basket upset." The game is played this way:

All the players sit around the room, with one player in the center. The one in the center gives every player the name of a fruit, and then the one in the center gives a sentence, using the names of some fruit. If the player calls the name of the fruit you have you must jump up, turn around and sit down before the player in the center can get your seat. If the one in the center says "Basket upset" every one must change seats.

Quiltmaking For Girls.

Little girls will be glad to know that patchwork quilts are again the fashion and that they can make them very easily. Just cut nine perfectly square patches and sew them together so that the colors in the center make a kind of cross. Then mother will put them all together when you have squares enough made. Any little girl ought to be able to make a patchwork quilt.

Has to Eat Dog.

Lieut. Glen Gordon, a prisoner in Germany for more than a year, used a clever ruse in writing his father, ex-Mayor William Gordon of Stratford to convey the news that he is now forced to eat dog meat. Referring in a letter to Gypsy, Tag, and Jerry, names of three dogs the young officer owned, Lieut. Gordon says: "We had their cousin for dinner today." The German censor failed to observe the significance of this remark.

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire.

As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country or been wounded in action are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

THE JEWELRY CRAZE.

Dirty Ornaments Not Attractive, So Polish Up Your Treasures.

All jewelry that is constantly worn should be washed every month or six weeks. It is not a difficult matter either. All you have to do is to make a soapy lather and add a few drops of ammonia. Take an old toothbrush and brush all the dirt out of the crevices. When quite clean take the jewelry out of the water and rub perfectly dry with a chamois leather or ordinary tissue paper.

When cleaning an article that is set with stones, such as a ring, be more gentle with the toothbrush, for if you brush too vigorously you may easily loosen a stone. A pendant set with emeralds, rubies or diamonds is better immersed in a little eau de cologne than water.

If you happen to be the lucky possessor of any pearls remember they must never be put in soapy water, though sea water is good for them. Pearls that are shut away and seldom worn lose their beautiful sheen, so if you have such a necklace wear it regularly, even if under your waist. The contact with the skin will keep pearls a good color.

Turquoise are best washed with warm water and a little ammonia, but no soap. Soap is apt to turn their pretty blue into a green. When you are cleaning opals be careful not to drop them, for they are brittle and chip with alarming ease. In fact, they have earned a name for being unlucky simply because they are so fragile.

When you are not wearing jewelry do not leave it lying about or in a drawer knocking against other ornaments. Keep it either in a piece of leather or in cotton wool. Steel ornaments should always be wrapped up carefully in tissue paper, for the air will quickly spoil their beauty..

Tea Chewers of Siam.

"Chewing tea comes from Siam," said a traveler. "They call it mieng. It is in a plug, like chewing tobacco, and it has a villainous smell. This smell is due to the fermentation it has undergone. The tea that the Siamese employ for chewing purposes is a very coarse, rank plant. It is gathered like ordinary tea, but the leaves after being compressed into plugs are buried for fifteen days. They ferment during burial. On their resurrection they are very, very fragrant indeed. The Siamese boatmen chew tea. The rickshaw men chew it. The litterateurs chew it. They say it makes them work better. This is probably the truth, for I chewed a plug myself in Anam, and it exhilarated me strangely. But the aftermath was bad—a headache, smarting eyes and nervous depression."

English and French.

It is truly a graceful speech, the French tongue. Plain, homely things of life, so bald and bare and disheartening in the Anglo-Saxon, are less unlovely in the French. Indeed, the French word for "rags" is so pretty that we have conferred chiffon on one of our daintiest fabrics. But in the grace of the language lies also its weakness. It does not rise to the supreme utterances. I have been reading the Bible texts on the tombstones in the little cemetery of Chardonne. "L'Eternal est mon berger" can never rank in loftiness with "The Lord is my shepherd," nor "Que votre coeur ne se trouble point" with "Let not your heart be troubled."

A GERMAN ARMY CORPS.

What It Means to Move and Feed and Form In Fighting Line.

In the nonmilitary mind there is only a vague idea as to the space required for an army corps.

According to a German writer, a German army corps consists of 41,000 men, 14,000 horses and 2,400 vehicles, including the cannon. Such a body of men and their belongings on a single road make a procession about thirty miles long.

Even when in fairly close touch with the enemy the length of a corps is about fifteen miles, and when the front detachments become engaged in a battle it is five or six hours before the men in the rear get into action to assist them.

An army of ten corps would fight on a front about thirty-seven miles long, and a man who undertook to walk from one wing to the other would require twelve or fourteen hours to do it.

An army corps consumes nearly 300,000 pounds of food a day, about 100,000 pounds for the men and 200,000 pounds for the horses. Even under the most favorable conditions it requires a train of 150 wagons to bring up a day's food.

FIFTY SQUARE MILES CAPTURED BY FRENCH IN FORTNIGHT

CRUISER CHAPERONES DEUTSCHLAND TO 3 MILE LIMIT

MINISTER OF MILITIA FULLY VINDICATED

The Meredith-Duff Royal Commission, While Deciding That a Mistake Had Been Made in Overburdening Carnegie with Work, and Questioning Col. Allison's Attitude in Accepting Commissions on Contracts, Says, According to the Evidence, Sir Sam Hughes "Had Nothing to do With the Making of Contracts, and Knew Nothing About the Transaction Being Entered Into."

Canadian Press Special

OTTAWA, July 21.—Judgment of the Meredith-Duff Royal commission which investigated allegations made by G. W. Kyte in the House of Commons with reference to fuse contracts let by the shell committee to the American Ammunition Company and International Arms and Fuse Company was presented to the Government this morning.

It finds "A mistake was made in placing upon the already overburdened shoulders of Col. Carnegie, ordnance expert to the shell committee, the work of conducting the business, or commercial part of transactions, for which work he possessed no special qualifications."

No doubt is suggested or implied on the integrity of Col. Carnegie.

Judgment further announces the opinion of the commissioners that Colonel Allison, while professing to be acting as a friend of General Hughes, and to be doing what he did in regard to fuse contracts solely out of friendship for him, and without any expectation or intention of receiving any renumeration for his services, was instrumental in bringing about a contract in which he was peculiarly interested. If we had accepted Allison's statement we would have been bound to say that his conduct in taking the benefit of the agreement as to a commission without informing General Hughes and the committee, could not either be justified or excused.

Dealing with General Hughe's judgment it states that he had nothing to do with the making of a contract, and as far as evidence appears, knew nothing about the transaction being entered into.

Stole Flowers Despite Wealth

Dropped Bag Containing Booty, Which Gave Clue

TORONTO, July 20.—William B. Dyson, who admitted having an annual income of $11,000 was convicted in the Police Court yesterday of stealing flowers and flower pots from the garden in front of the home of Mary Ann Miller, of Tecumseh street. The complainant alleged that theft was perpetrated out of spite. Two witnesses testified to having seen Dyson carrying off considerable material in a bag which was slung over his shoulder. He fell and the crash of breaking earthenware convinced them that the bag contained flowerpots among other things. Dyson denied his guilt, but Colonel Denison refused to credit his story. Sentence will be passed on Tuesday next.

MORE FREAKS OF ELECTRIC STORM

DOURO, Ont., July 20.—An electric storm which swept over this district carried considerable destruction and loss of valuable herds and damage to buildings in its path.

A pair of young draft horses belonging to William Diamond were killed.

A bolt of lightning struck the home of Mr. E. E. McMullen, Smith township, and exploded in the dining room where five people were sitting. All miraculously escaped. Although the dining room was filled with smoke, bricks torn from the chimney, a window in the house broken and some plaster knocked off, the house did not take fire.

JOCKEYS GOING TO WAR

English Riders Have to Exchange Silks For Khaki

LONDON, July 20.—The Call to the colors of all able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 41 under the new Conscription Act, threatens seriously to interfere with horse racing, the majority of the present day jockeys being liable for service. Frank and Stanley Wooton have been on active service for some months, but the compulsory service calls out such famous jockeys as Frank Rickaby, J. Childs, C. Childs, H. Jellis and Lancaster.

Many jockeys have suffered from broken bones in carrying out their profession in the past, and only such deformities will enable them to keep in the saddle during the continuation of the war. The well known Anglo-French jockey, George Stern, offered himself for service, but has been rejected as being too short.

BRIGHTON MAN ENLISTS

Dr. Wade Joins Western Unit as Medical Officer

BRIGHTON, July 20.—Dr. G. H. Wade, son of John Wade, Brighton Township, has left Hanna, Alberta, to join the 175th Battalion at Calgary as medical officer. Lieut.-Col. Spencer is O. C. of this battalion. Dr. Wade resided in Alberta for some time.

TO PROBE DEATH OF IRISH EDITOR

LONDON, July 20.—In the House of Commons to-day, Premier Asquith promised that as soon as arrangements could be made, a public inquiry would be held into the death of F. Sheehy, Skeffington, of Dublin, editor of the Irish Citizen, who at the time of the Irish rebellion was put to death by a British officer without the knowledge of the military authorities.

KRUPP GUNS ARE OUTDONE ON THE SOMME FRONT

PARIS, July 21.—Special—The following despatch was received yesterday morning from Georges Le Hir on the British front, dated July 18:

"During the last few days I have traversed the whole ant heap, visited burrow after burrow, and everywhere have been amazed at the British troops. They are light-hearted, careless and full of jokes. While waiting for the assault the Poilus are serious or mad with enthusiasm or serenely calm, never careless and laughing. It is their wonderful calm, their total freedom from nervousness or anxiety that strikes one most, and the secret of this calm is confidence, confidence absolute, complete, spontaneous confidence begotten and fostered by our artillery. For by nothing so much as the thunder of our own cannonade is the infantrymans heart gladdened, his certainty of victory assured. In the tumult of French artillery the German response goes unnoticed. It is "artillery preparatioin for the attack" that is now in progress, and what it means our soldiers can see around them in ruined trenches and torn up shelters that recently were strong fortifications, constructed according to the most efficient principles of modern war. The best possible evidence of our bombardments' success is given by a German who experienced it.

WON AND LOST POSITIONS

British Push Germans From Woods, But Subsequently Gave up a Portion

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 21.—The British line north of Bazentin and Longueval has been pushed forward to Foureaux wood, the War Office announced today. The British drove the Germans from the Wood, but lost part of the position subsequently.

DOG MAD BY HEAT BITES TWO CHILDREN

Animal Destroyed by Police and Sent to The University

TORONTO, July 21.—Going suddenly mad, probably from the extreme heat, a black and white collie dog yesterday bit two children, M. Finklestein, four years old, 5 Huron street, and James Howland, ten years old, 21 Phoebe street, and a horse. The police were notified immediately, but the dog was not caught until it had been chased for an hour and a half by Inspector Burge of the Toronto Humane Society and two officers from Agnes street police station. The canine was destroyed and the head forwarded to the University of Toronto.

Shot as He Sat in Canoe

PETERBOROUGH, July 20.—Chas. McMichael, a pupil at the Grove School, Lakefield, is in the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from the effects of a serious accident which befell him on Friday last when he was accidently shot in the body just above the right hip. His condition is satisfactory, Accompanied by Hugh Mackenzie, son of Rev. A. W. Mackenzie he had gone out in a canoe for a sail on the lake. They took with them a .22 calibre rifle. Young Mackenzie was seated in the stern of the boat and in picking up the rifle the hammer caught on something, causing the cartridge to explode, the bullet entering McMichael's body just above the right hip.

GERMANY TO LET LOOSE AIRSHIPS AND SUBMARINES

LONDON, July 21.—(Special.)—A despatch from Berne, Switzerland, to The Daily News says that Count Zeppelin, in a speech to the workmen at Friederichshafen, said:

"I have good news for you. The Kaiser has given his advisers a free hand regarding the use of airships and submarines.

"Be patient. Vital blows will soon be struck."

SARNIA, July 21.—(Special.) —The Grand Trunk tunnel under the St. Clair River was put out of business by a heavy rain storm to-night. Hundreds of thousands of gallons of water poured in at both ends, until a depth of four feet was attained. This caused a complete cessation of traffic. Westbound trains are being sent on their way via Windsor.

SIX MILE GAP CUT IN HUN LINE BY BRITISH TAKE 300 PRISONERS

Haig's Troops Advancing Through Enemy's Lines For More Than Half a Mile—Germans Defending Peronne Have Been Raked by French Fire

British Headquarters in France, July 21.—Special—Troops on the left of the recent great British advance attacked the German line which ran in front of Bezantin-le-Petit Wood, and was protected by double lines of wire. British guns, however, had accounted for the wire, and before the Germans realized it the British fire was lifting from their front line and British troops were pouring over the remnants of the battered parapet on top of them.

Two waves went ahead, and as soon as they had swept the front line clear two others followed.

The right of the attacking force got through this part of the programme with comparatively few losses. But the troops on the left suffered more severely, having been raked by machine-gun fire.

Behind the German front line ran a great wood, itself spanned by three successive lines of trenches, each with wire protection. These were taken one after another in a series of rushes, the men going as fast as they could in the dim light of early morning through a wood dense and choked with fallen timber, and so full of huge shell-holes that it was all climbing, jumping, scrambling and crawling.

Whatever their method of going, they got there. They waited in one trench while the guns from behind pounded the next. Then they rushed or staggered forward as soon as the guns had lifted and while the artillery went to the next. Then the process was repeated.

With alternate waits and rushes it took three hours to get through the wood.

It was full of German dead and living, and at the upper end machine guns were posted which searched the open spaces between the wrecks of trees as the British troops come on. But nothing stopped them. By soon after 7 o'clock they had cleared the top of the wood and taken 300 prisoners.

LIQUOR SHOPS APPLY FOR TIME TO SELL OUT

TORONTO, July 21.—Special—On the plea that owing to the cheap sale of liquor by wholesealers in the city they are in danger of having substantial stocks of liquor left on their hands, a deputation of shopkeepers desired an extension from September 16, the date when prohibition takes effect. The Ontario License Board could not entertain the request, as, anyway, it has not the power to extend the date on which shops and hotels must close.

BRITISH NAVY CAPTURES ENEMY SUBMARINE MINE LAYER

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 21.—A German submarine mine layer, one of the latest prizes of the British navy was visited by a press representative to-day. Flying the German naval ensign, surmounted by the British ensign she is in the naval dock yard on the east coast.

The entire forward parts are composed of wells, six in number, each containing two powerful mines which can be released by levers. She has no torpedo tubes or other armament except small arms, and is only one hundred feet in length.

According to one of the seamen she made, prior to the capture, nineteen trips from her Base in Germany to the British coast and laid over two hundred mines in routes frequented by merchant vessels. She was on her twentieth trip when she was captured by British patrol boats. All the crew and officers were taken prisoners. The hull is in a good condition, but shows a number of dents where it struck obstacles in its under-water voyages. Her aft shows signs of rapidity in construction. The British naval officers pointed out the mines carried no apparatus for rendering them harmless if they broke loose from their moorings, as required by Hague Convention.

SPASMODIC ENEMY ATTACKS

Drives by German Forces Over Verdun Front Has Small Effect Enemy Aeroplanes Drop Bombs on Defenseless Towns Last Night Experienced Normal Activity

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, July 21.—Afternoon statement. South of the Somme the enemy yesterday delivered a counter attack on our new positions to the south of Soyecourt. The battalion which led the assault was caught by our curtain of fire and machine guns, and thrown back in disorder with great loss. The night was calm north of the Somme.

In the region of Chaulnes a strong detachment of the enemy, which attempted to approach our lines south of Maucourt, was repulsed with bayonets.

Between Soissons and Rheims to the northeast of Vendresse, a French reconnoitering detachment, assisted by the explosion of a mine, penetrated a trench of the enemy, which was cleared out with grenades.

On the Verdun front there was great artillery activity in Chattancourt and Fleury sectors. An enemy attack north of Wissembach in the Vosges failed.

Our aeroplanes have bombarded important points behind the enemy's lines.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the enemy dropped bombs on Luneville and Zaccarat, undefended villages.

FIRST FIFTEEN DAYS OF FRENCH OFFENSIVE SHOW GRAND RESULTS

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 21.—A French official observer, summing up results of the first fifteen days of the offensive on the Somme says: "The French troops were able to advance on a front of ten miles and half to a maximum depth of 6 miles, taking from the Germans eighty square kilometres highly organized and fortified field works, resembling a fortress. We have already gathered from the field eighty-five guns, many of large calibre, one hundred machine guns and quantities of ammunition not yet estimated. We have taken 235 officers and twelve thousand men, and this is only the start of the battle.

Birtish and Germans are Contending For Possession of Foureux Wood

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, July 21.—A British official statement in full says the battle continues without intermission between Leipsic redoubt on the west and Delville wood on the east. North of Bezentine Longueval line the British advance has been pushed to Foureux wood, from which we drove the enemy. During the night the enemy counterattacked, after an intense bombardment with gas shells, and succeeded in effecting an entry into the northern part of the wood, but failed to dislodge us from the southern half. Elsewhere there is no change.

ANOTHER RACE TRACK

R. R. Hepburn and Others to Erect One at Windsor

That the Province of Ontario will have another new race track, which will be raced over this season, was assured when Tom Duggan, secretary of the Back River Jockey Club, announced that he and Bernard R. Hepburn, member of Parliament for Prince Edward County, had secured a charter and that there was every assurance of a license being granted in Ontario for them to operate the charter. The location selected for the track is at Windsor, Ontario, and is close to the new Kenilworth track now being erected there. This will make the third track in the town of Windsor.

Government Is Satisfied

That The German Submarine Deutschland Will Not Carry Canadian Nickel

OTTAWA, July 20.—Although a further official statement on the question of the export of Canadian nickel to the United States for refining will be issued in a few days, attention was drawn today to some facts which added light on the situation. It was stated authoritatively that the nickel, which is to form part of the cargo of the German submarine Deutchland, is part of a supply of the metal produced by smelting companies in the United States as a by-product, and which has been regularly purchased by representatives of German interests, and stored against the time when it might be shipped to Germany. The British Government has been aware of the existence of this supply, but was unable to prevent its accumulation. Hitherto, of course, the navy has prevented this metal from being transported, and may still do so.

The International Nickel Corporation, to which Canadian nickel is now shipped under an agreement which prevents its falling into enemy hands, is under contract to supply the British Government for over a year and will carry it out. The British Government is quite satisfied with the arrangement in force regarding the export of nickel from Canada to the International Corporation, and does not propose to cancel its contract.

It is further pointed out that to prohibit the export of nickel to the United States would be considered an unfriendly act, and that the export of rubber, another article much desired by Germany, is allowed to United States by Great Britain similarly as in the case of nickel.

BODY OF WOMAN FOUND IN THREE FEET OF WATER

SMITH'S FALLS, July 20.—Mrs. Edward Merrow, twenty-nine years of age, was drowned in the Rideau river last night almost opposite and a few hundred yards away from her home. Her body was found by her husband after two hours of searching in three feet of water. Her coat, a pail, and a bottle were lying on the river bank, but whether she fainted and fell, or committed suicide is not known, as an inquest has not been held.

The woman had been out of the hospital, where she gave birth to a daughter, only a short time, and was suffering from nervous prostration. Her eldest daughter came home from Brockville in the evening, and, after affectionately greeting her, the mother left the house, and when she did not return Mr. Merrow and the neighbors started a search for her.

Not finding her in the neighborhood, the husband went out in his boat along the river bank on which the house faced, and found the body in shallow water. It is thought that the unfortunate woman may have gone down to the river for a pail of water, fainted and fallen in, but there is suspicion of suicide. A family of eight children survive.

Rumania May Enter The War

Big Men In The Little Kingdom are in Favor—Wild Applause From [illegible] Populace

LONDON, July 20.—The Daily Telegraph prints the following despatch from Bucharest under Monday's date: "This morning there was a great public gathering under the auspices of Unionist Federation. Filipesco and Take Jonescu both spoke. The former declared the victory of the allies was sure, and that Rumania would enter into the war. He went on to accuse Premier Bratiano of having faced both ways, and said he had deceived even Germany in believing that Rumania would march with the Central Powers. In the presence of him (Filipesco) and Jonescu, Bratiano had promised to enter the war with Italy. He had made the situation difficult even with the King by the promises he gave to the Central Powers.

"Jonescu declared every soldier given to the allies would be as a stone built up of a greater Rumania—the tree of the royal dynasty could not flourish in a little Rumania; it must strike its roots deep and wide if the future occupants of the throne were to be safeguarded. Let the King take the lead in a sacred national union and by his valor finally unite the throne and the country. In a little Rumania there was room neither for the King nor for the people.

The speeches were wildly applauded, and in the afternoon there was an enthusiastic demonstration in the streets, the people crying 'we want war. Several posters calling for mobilization were fixed on the walls of the Royal palace. The deminstrators dispersed on the arrival of the police and military."

CHANCELLOR TELLS WHY WAR COSTS THIRTY MILLIONS A DAY

LONDON, July 20.—Explaining the increase in government rates of expenditure to £6,000,000 ($30,000,000) daily, Reginald McKenna, chancellor of the Exchequer said in the House of Commons to-day that the figure related to the total out goings and not only to war expenditure.

The unforeseen and unforeseeable causes which had raised the rate of expenditure, added the chancellor, were mainly the rate at which American securities had been sold to government for the purpose of regulating American exchange and the rate at which advances made to allies and dominions of Great Britain were drawn upon. The concurrence of these two causes had led to the exhaustion of his borrowing powers earlier than was anticipated.

Asked whether the purchase of American securities and loans to allies could rightly be called expenditures, Mr. McKenna answered that he was explaining why his borrowing powers had been exhausted earlier than he anticipated. He had exercised those powers to meet the issues. As to whether that could be considered expenditure he was not immediately concerned. He had to meet the issues and accordingly had to borrow the means. He sincerely hoped that the expenditure would revert to what he preferred to regard as the normal.

Below Decks on a Warship

A singularly vivid description of description of conditions that prevail below decks in action was penned by Mr. Chas. De Grave Sells, the well-known authority on engineering, in his book "Fighting Ships." He begins by emphasizing the different circumstances which surround the officers on deck and those down below.

"All who have had anything to do with fighting, real or mimic, know how one's blood gets up, one's courage is increased, one's spirit is inspired, one is ready for anything, and wishes for nothing better than to get at close quarters with the enemy.

"With what zest does one sight that gun, or prepare to ram; with what energy does one inspire one's subordinates! with what intense interest does one follow the progress of the battle! and if, alas, the enemy is too much for us, or the fortune of war against us, so that our home on the sea, our fighting fortress, sinks beneath the waves, we have a chance of life. We choose a spar or get hold of a lifebuoy, one may be picked up by one's friends, or even by the enemy, and one can look forward to having the opportunity of fighting another day.

"But with the engineer it is vastly different. He goes into action confined down below with the watertight doors shut, the shell gratings closed down, all exit from the boiler rooms absolutely sealed, the only possible exit from the engine-room up a narrow ladder permitting but one to pass at a time, and this being in a heavy armored door which, however well-balanced, would take such time to get through that there would be but the smallest possibility of even one escaping in time of need, and especially as one would have to creep through the opening without the assistance of a handrail.

"There is not the remotest chance of escape should anything go wrong with the ship or her machinery. No rat in a trap was ever caged more securely than he is. And imagine the state of affairs down below.

"The machinery compartments lit by artificial light, with here and there an oil lamp to prevent one being left in complete darkness should the dynamos or their connections be damaged; the thunder of the guns above; an occisional shudder of the hull as a heavier blow than usual is received—nothing, absolutely nothing, to tell how the battle is going.

"Under such circumstances there is no fighting courage to keep one's spirit up, and nothing but stern duty to help one in such a time of need. It is bad enough to consider the horrors of shells charged with modern high explosives bursting among the upper works, but if they burst in one of those confined places or in the funnel openings, the results will be many times worse, with the added horror of being boiled alive by the escaping steam. A man has to have real courage in his blood to consent to serve his country under such circumstances."

NOT SATISFIED

A merchant prince of a great Canadian city engaged a rising young painter for the purpose of having his portrait in oils conveyed to posterity. The terms were arranged.

"How long do you think it will take?" asked the model.

"Perhaps fifteen days," was the reply.

Sittings began, and the artist entered so heartily into his work that in eleven days the portrait was done.

"Why," asked this Croesus, when the fact was announced to him, "do you intend suppressing four days' work?"

"It does not matter at all; the portrait is finished," answered the painter.

"Well, sir, this is not business. We said $500 and fifteen days' work. I am quite ready to stand the price, but you ought not to spend an hour less upon the work than we agreed for."

There was no use arguing with such a man. The painter took his brush again and spent four sittings more in lengthening, little by little in the portrait, the ears of his patron.

NICKEL TRUST

The situation becomes the more sinister when we are told that the Nickel Trust is but a ramification of a vaster metal trust which has its headquarters in Frankfort, Germany. It is a fact that Canadian soldiers have been killed with arms manufactured in part from Canadian nickel. But for the British blockade our own metal would to-day be entering Germany to provide weapons wherewith to slay the flower of the British race. This is an intolerable situation which must be ended, or it will be the duty of the people to end the careers of the politicians who refuse to act.—Saturday Night.

Cocaine Venders Sent to Prison

Were Entrapped and Prosecuted in England by Canadian Military Police

LONDON, July 20.—Arising from the prosecution in the London police court of a gang of cocaine vendors who have been supplying the drug to soldiers a fresh demand has been made for immediate legislation to cope with the latest form of plague. Owing to the fact that the development of this vice has only lately come to the public notice in England there is no legislation directly bearing on the evil except a provision in the Defence of the Realm Act, under which vendors of drugs to soldiers can be punished.

So unaccustomed are the metropolitan police to dealing with these drug cases that they called on the Canadian military police to track down the defenders. And it was due to the efforts of Major Clifford, Regimental Sergeant-Major Dee, and Sergeant Smith that the gang of vendors just prosecuted were entrapped. The London city police think that the prosecution will at least put a temporary check on the system of vending, which was spreading to large proportions. The selling has been chiefly by small foreign shopkeepers who secured their supplies through one or two druggists who have also been trapped.

The drug habit has been finding its victims among soldiers on leave after suffering from nerve strain, at the front, and soldier convalescents who are troubled from old wounds, and the police authorities are urging that immediate action should be taken to allow more severe penalties than three months' hard labor, such as given to the seven men who have just been prosecuted in the London police court.

Writing in The Daily Chronicle, Dr. C. W. Saleeby the sociologist, advises that legislation be enacted against all wine lozenge-sweets. He cites what North America has done to check the drug habit, and points out that even the Sultan of Turkey has even banned cocaine.

Ontario Hydro To Obtain Extra Power

Pressure Brought by Dominion Gov't on Canadian Niagara Power Company

TORONTO, July 20.—Sudden pressure applied to the Canadian Niagara Power Company by the Dominion Government has succeeded where weeks of reasoning and friendly negotiation failed and the Ontario Hydro Power system is to get additional power which it so badly needs. Frightened by the Federal authorities threat to turn the big guns on them and prohibit the export of power, the Canadian Niagara Power Company has receded from its stand and an agreement is being drafted between the provincial government and the company which gives the Ontario Hydro Commission 50,000 horse power at $12 per horse power.

The whole 50,000 is not to be supplied at once, but about 10,000 horse power is needed immediately and the rest will be forthcoming by December when fifteen municipalities are coupled on to the Niagara link of the hydro system.

Action by the Dominion Government followed recent great activity on the part of the Premier of Ontario. The Ottawa authorities take the view that if the Niagara Power Company's export license were to be cancelled—as has been advised in some quarters, the export licenses of the other companies must also be cancelled. That would mean that the companies would have a great deal of power on hand that the hydro was not ready to take and which they could not sell. Further than that, cutting off the customers in the United States would result in a big measure of hardship through no fault of theirs. It was urged that if the Canadian Niagara Power Company could be brought to time by giving them the alternative of supplying hydro with the power it required or else losing their export license, present requirements would be satisfied and the company could gradually drop the customers in the United States.

KITCHENER FORESAW DEATH

One of the Toulon papers tells the following anecdote concerning the late Lord Kitchener. When the War Minister went some three months ago to the British front he met at Dunkirk Commandant de Balancourt, to whom he mentioned that a "Jack" Johnson" had dropped not far from him. "That did not alarm me," said Lord Kitchener, "because I know that I shall die at sea."

A "FISH" SURVEY

With the object of taking stock of the fish in the Province, to learn which waters are most in need of being restocked, the Fish and Game Department of the Ontario Government is undertaking a "fish survey." A detailed map of this district will be furnished each overseer in the Province, to be filled in with the necessary details and returned to the Department.

A Wonderful Food---

Not only delicious—but there's "life" in

Grape=Nuts

Try this experiment yourself. Take some Grape-Nuts direct from the package. Hold the granules in the palm of your hand under sunlight or an electric bulb. You will notice tiny shining particles of light on the granules—the starch of the grains transformed.

Then do the same with some other prepared food—any other prepared food. You don't see these glistening particles.

"There's a Reason"

The wonderful taste—the wonderful nourishment in this great food is due to the fact that in addition to the sweetness of the whole wheat is combined the delicate flavor and food value of malted barley.

This gives Grape-Nuts two great factors that no mere wheat food can possess. The delicious zest of malted barley imparts a savor that is universally liked; and beyond that, the barley contains a digestive (not in wheat) which, with long baking, transforms the starch of these full grains into a form of sugar which shows on the golden-brown granules.

If you haven't tried Grape-Nuts food you have a treat in store. It not only appeals to the appetite, but is a powerful rebuilder for body and brain.

THIS IS THE 640TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE NICKEL QUESTION.

Much agitation has been indulged in, and innumerable unfavorable comments expressed by Opposition papers regarding the Government's attitude on the Canadian nickel question. From what we have read in leading Liberal organs, one would be led to believe that Germany has, to a more or less extent, and will continue to largely profit by the output of our nickel industries.

The recent statement from Ottawa relative to the possibility of this product reaching Germany removes any uncertainty that may have existed. The Borden Government, months ago, made such arrangements in regard to the export of nickel refined from Canadian ore, that Germany has not been able to secure one pound of the metal. This is the situation that the Canadian people desired. They have it.

The arrangement permits the unrestricted development of Canadian nickel resources by preserving a foreign market capable of taking and using the maximum output of the mines. It closes the door against the export to enemy destinations of nickel refined from Canadian ore.

The arrival of the German commercial submarine "Deutschland" at Baltimore revived the fears of those who find enjoyment in thinking that things are going wrong. The "Deutschland" wanted nickel for Germany, nickel to be used against the Allied armies. These people, aided by ignorance of the facts, promptly assumed that any nickel going aboard the "Deutschland" must be Canadian nickel.

There are two reasons which emphasize the absurdity of such an assumption. One is that the "Deutschland" agents could not get Canadian nickel at any price. The other is that they didn't have to.

If there wasn't a pound of Canadian nickel going into the United States there would still be nickel there. Hundreds of tons of nickel are produced in the United States annually from ore secured in American copper mines or imported from New Caledonia. This is subject to no restrictions except, of course, the British blockade of Germany—which is a consideration of some weight.

Germany can buy this nickel at any time in the United States if the United States is willing to sell. But Germany cannot buy in the United States nickel from Canadian ore.

Canadian nickel ore does not go to a hundred different parts of the United States to be refined. It goes to one plant. Not an ounce of nickel of Canadian origin goes out of that plant without an officer of the Canadian Government knowing its destination.

None of it goes or has gone to Germany.

The measures taken by the Canadian Government for controlling the destination of Canadian nickel refined in the United States were entered into with the full approval of the Imperial Government, and they are regarded by the Imperial Government as adequate. Theses measures provide that an ample supply of Canadian nickel shall be available for the Allied Powers, but that none of it shall find its way into enemy hands. In the destruction of German military power this is a potent factor, nickel steel being vitally essential to the production of modern armament. Thus, through the Borden Government's handling of the nickel situation a tremendously effective blow has been dealt at the Empire's enemies and an important factor brought to bear in ensuring victory to the Allies.

HANDLING THE MILITARY MAIL.

One has but slight conception of the thousands of packages of mail that passes between the soldiers at the front and friends from all parts of the Empire—a task which it is no light matter for the authorities to look after. The extent of this work, says the Montreal Gazette, was shown in the British House of Commons on July 3, when the Postmaster-General, Mr Pease, gave an account of the war activities of the Post Office. The British troops, he declared, receive weekly the great number of 7,500,000 letters and 700,000 parcels, weighing 1,500 tons. In return they send home 5,000,000 letters a week. In the latter connection it is to be noted that there is free postage from the field. The Minister pointed out that there has been a steady increase in this mail business, as may be seen from the fact that during Christmas week of 1914 two million letters changed hands, while in Christmas week of last year the amount had increased to nine millions. In parcels the increase had been from half-a-million to three millions. The Post Office also has to handle the correspondence of 40,821 military and naval men and civilians to whom the Germans send letters, the number being about 55,000 a week. On the other hand, the British in Germany number 25,621 military prisoners, 1,089 naval prisoners, and 4,000 civilians, who receive 58,000 letters weekly. Since the beginning of the war, Mr Pease further stated, the men in khaki in the various fields had sent to them 6,500,000 books and magazines. He commended his staff for their energy, paying special tributes to the women who went to their posts in telephone exchanges while Zeppelin bombs were dropping, and to the telephone operators who remained at their duties in Dublin during the riots, while bullets were flying about and fires raging. It is a big work this of taking care of an army's correspondence, and, according to the British Postmaster-General's statement, it is being faithfully performed.

* * *

If the report is true that Count Karolyi has actually formed a peace party, with comparatively strong support, the new movement in the direction of peace is one to be viewed with due seriousness. A statement made in the Hungarian Parliament the other day that Hungarian losses had been six hundred thousand men since April last resulted in a turbulent expression of dissatisfaction with actual conditions. The revolt of Karoyli and his followers would cause no great surprise. Obviously, the withdrawal of Hungary from hostilities, with or without the consent of Austria or Germany, would result in the speedy if not the immediate collapse of the Central Powers. If Count Karolyi and his party should beat only the air and not convince the country's leaders, nevertheless their action adds another link to the already strong chain of proof that Austria and Hungary have both pretty well used up the whole of their reserves. Germany cannot bolster up and again stiffen the forces of her allies. Hungary is beginning to see the truth. If she acts vigorously upon it the time will have arrived when real hopes of peace may be entertained.

Advices which have reached Sydney, Australia, from the Solomon Islands, state that the European war has had the effect of reviving head-hunting in that interesting quarter of the world. Conditions are said to be worse than ever, even in the days before the cannibalistic islanders came in contact with traders and missionaries from civilized lands. Europe having set the evil example, it now seems incumbent on that continent to send out good men to teach the Solomon Islanders that it is a very wicked thing for black men to plan killing expeditions against each other.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uremic poisoning occurs and the person dies, and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion without charge—absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Doctor Pierce's is found to be 37 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for blood and stomach.

WORRY, DESPONDENCY.

Kidney Disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination, disturbed, too frequent, scanty or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, dizzy spells, irritability, despondency, weakness and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

The Poets' Corner

THE SEA IS HIS

The sea is His; He made it,
Black gulf and sunlit shoal,
From barriered bight to where the long
Leagues of Atlantic roll;
Small strait and ceaseless ocean
He bade each one to be.
The sea is His; He made it—
And Britain keeps it free.

By pain and stress and striving
Beyond the nations' keen.
By vigils stern when others slept,
By lives of many men;
Through nights of storm, through dawnings
Blacker than midnights be—
This sea that God created,
Britain has kept it free.

Count me the splendid captains
Who sailed with courage high
To chart the perilous ways unknown—
Tell me where these men lie!
To light a path for ships to come
They moored at Dead Man's Quay,
The sea is God's; He made it—
And these men kept it free.

O little land of England,
Oh, mother of hearts too brave,
Oh, mother of hearts too brave,
Men say this trust shall pass from thee
Who guardest Nelson's grave!
Aye, but these braggarts yet shall learn
Who'd hold the world in fee,
The sea is God's—and Britain,
Britain shall keep it free.

Current Comment

Switzerland's call to her citizens of military age who are residing in foreign countries to return home immediately looks like an indication that trouble is looked for on the northern frontier of the little republic.

The United States, with $3,000,000,000 in war orders from various belligerent lands, should not be worrying much about any little inconveniences her traders may suffer through blockades and such necessary measures. The American people are of a truth profiting by the hostilities.

Homesteads to the number of 6,895 were recruited in Western Canada during the first half of the present year. While the record shows a falling off of 1,228 as compared with 1915, the total is considerable. Every homestead means a family on the land, where families are most needed.—Montreal Gazette.

One phrase in Sir Douglas Haig's message to the British munition workers is rather obscure. He says that if they forego holidays "until our goal is reached, a speedy and decisive victory will be ours." What is the "goal" we wonder? —Montreal Herald. Perhaps Berlin, where the combined allied armies will eat their Christmas dinner.

Captured German documents refer to the Austrians as a "slack, degenerate crowd." One German newspaper insists that Austria "must bleed" because of her inefficiency, and another argues that it will never be worth the Fatherland's time to develop Turkey. Germany and her allies are going to make up a nice happy family when the war is over.—Montreal Star.

In the United States the same large percentage of rejections to enlisted men is being encountered, only 700 out of 4,000 applying there last week being accepted. It must be remembered, however, that in no previous war have the exactions been so arduous, necessitating conditions that call for almost perfect physical vigor—Hamilton Spectator.

Indications are clear that this long delayed advance of the allied forces from Salonika has begun. Canonading is growing in intensity, and airmen are busy. By this time the Greek army must have been demobilized, so that when the British and the French sally forth from Salonika, they will be safeguarded from a treacherous attack in the rear.

DELICATE MONSTERS.

How Warships Are Lined to Protect Them From Fire and Water.

Although it may look very strong, a battleship is really a very delicate monster. Its vital parts have to be protected by several coverings of a material chiefly obtained from coconauts. This is to prevent certain portions becoming either too cold or too hot. For instance, it will be seen that the results would be exciting if the powder magazines became overheated.

A dreadnaught is entirely clothed in a suit of underwear to protect it from fire and water. The actual construction of the material is a secret, but it is known to be for the most part cellulose, which is obtained from the fibrous rind of the coconaut.

Cellulose swells when it touches salt water. Therefore if a hole should be made in the ship's side, say, by a shot this cellulose expands and covers the opening, so preventing an inrush of water. The cellulose is also treated to make it fireproof.

Mineral wool is a material used upon the latest type of battleship. It looks like wool, but is really composed of snowy threads of a sort of glass. The men who pack mineral wool have to wear masks to prevent the needlelike particles from being inhaled. It is a remarkable nonconductor of heat and is used to cover the refrigerators and cold storage chambers and also the explosive stores.

The boilers and steam pipes of a dreadnaught have "jackets" in order to prevent waste of fuel. Sometimes these jackets are of mineral wool, sometimes wool and sometimes ordinary blanketing.—Pearson's.

VALE OF KASHMIR.

A Beautiful Spot With a Record of Natural Calamities.

Beautiful and unfortunate is the wonderful vale of Kashmir, lying high among the Himalayas, ringed with gigantic peaks, "clothed in evergreen fir and deodar, the light green bed of Jehlam strung across its dun breast like a jade necklace, blushing with the ghostly pink of peach and plum blossoms."

Kashmir has a persistent record of natural calamity. Jehlam overflows its banks at intervals and sends destroying floods that wipe out whole districts. The giant peaks around the valley stir now and again in their sleep of ages and shake the flats with mighty earthquakes. Famine and cholera kill more than the river and the trembling mountains.

Fire frequently sweeps the fields and cities. As one looks up at the hills on either side from the bed of Jehlam it is seen that one slope is covered with cool, dark forest, while the other grows nothing but long grass. A spark in this grass starts the blaze. Among the Himalayas the air is biting cold and the Kashmiri carries a little charcoal brazier under his robe to warm his body. These peripatetic furnaces start many a flame.

With a history dotted with such calamitous landmarks the people of Kashmir have acquired a pessimistic expression and disposition. They are superstitious, too, ascribing all manner of miraculous attributes and fairy inhabitants to the mountain springs.—Argonaut.

Naming the Aegean Sea.

The Aegean sea is remarkable among the seas of the world for the obscurity in which the origin of its name is involved. Even the ancients could not give a certain answer on the point. A popular view was that it was named after Aegeus, the father of Theseus, who threw himself into it when his son forgot to hoist the white sail upon his return from Crete as a signal that he had slain the Minotaur. But others derived the name from Aegea, a queen of the Amazons, who also perished in this sea; others from the town of Aegae, in Euboea (Negropont), and a fourth theory traced it to the word "aiges," goats, which the islands of the archipelago were fancifully thought [illegible]

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"Surely, surely," cried Doctor Blaney. "Your argument is very convincing, Detective Mouser. I haven't the slightest doubt that you are right."

Fenno's pale face had lighted a little. He began to feel that Detective Mouser was a far more capable man than he had thought. He followed the instructions given him, however, and made no comments.

Holman, too, began to regard this stranger with more appreciation and respect.

"The first wound having been inflicted," Nick went on, "and Packard having fallen to the floor, his assailant evidently reached over his head and face and drove the knife twice into his breast, bent upon making sure of his death. This wound in the throat severing the windpipe, would have prevented any outcry, doctor?"

"Yes, undoubtedly."

"Yet audible groans might have followed?"

"Yes."

"For how long, think you, before further sounds would have been impossible?"

"Not longer than three minutes."

"That is about what I should say," replied Nick, rising from beside the body. "Now, here is another point: Solely has testified that a waiter, named Jackson, brought a drink up here only two or three minutes before the crime was committed. Evidently only one drink was ordered, for there is no sign of a second glass. This would seem to indicate, then, that the Judge was alone here when he ordered the drink. If not, Jackson may be able to tell us who was with him, providing he entered the room. There is a reasonable probability that he did not, however, for here is a service try on the table, and a waiter does not usually leave his tray. Judge Packard may have taken both tray and glass at the door without admitting him. At all events, he can tell how——"

"He's coming now," Holman interrupted, as hurried steps sounded in the hall and a hand grasped the knob of the door.

Instead, however, it was quickly opened by Mr. Andrew Todd, who, closely followed by McNulty, the contractor, and two men whom Nick had seen with them in the hotel office, unceremoniously entered the room. All appeared quite excited, and Todd, when he beheld the corpse of the man who that day had done him so great a service threw up both hands and uttered a cry of dismay.

"My God, its true, then!" he exclaimed, in great agitation. "I couldn't believe it—couldn't believe it! Judge Packard murdered in cold blood, and——"

"Easy, easy, Andrew!" cried McNulty, grasping his arm. "Calm yourself, old man. Don't give way to your feelings. It's dreadful, I'll admit, but——"

"But who could have done such a deed?" Todd asked, with a groan. "Who could have—not you! Heaven above, is it possible?"

Gazing around, wide-eyed and aghast, Todd had caught sight of Percival Fenno, still seated in manacles in a chair in one corner. He appeared staggered for a moment, as if he could hardly believe his own eyes; and then he cried, with a sudden terrible display of bitterness and hatred:

"So it was you, then, and this is the end of your infernal career! Couldn't you take your medicine like a man? Would only murder satisfy you when you lost? God hearing me, you knave, if vengeance would restore life, I would slay you here and now, as you've slain——"

"Stop right there! Cut it out, I say!"

The interruption came from Nick Carter, not from Fenno, though the latter had leaped to his feet, as deathly white as the lifeless figure on the floor.

Nick had come between the two men with a single stride, however, and with a sweep of his arm while he spoke, he forced Todd backward against the wall, nearly throwing him to the floor.

With men of wealth and power, accustomed to rule and quick to resent opposition, even the shadow of death is disregarded. Instantly resenting Nick's forcible interference, and with an ugly boorishness plainly predominating in his nature, McNulty sprang to Todd's aid and seized the detective by the throat.

Nick turned on him like a flash.

"Remove your hand, McNulty," he cried, with eyes blazing. "Quick—or you'll be in irons!"

CHAPTER VIII.
A Tangled Skein

There was a look on Nick Carter's face, a ring in his threatening voice, which Martin McNulty, despite his bulldog disposition, did not dare to ignore. He growled savagely, however, while he dropped his hand from the detective's throat:

"Don't you lift your hand against a friend of mine, then. Who the devil are you, anyway, that you butt in so quickly?"

"Yes," supplemented Todd, pulling himself together and glaring angrily at Nick. "By what authority do you interfere? I guess you don't know me."

"Oh, yes, I do," Nick said sharply, with a quick nod at both. "You are Mr. Andrew Todd, promoter of the United Transit merger, a stock jobber and Wall Street gambler; and you are Martin McNulty, contractor, one of his followers, and a man with more body than brains. Now, that there may be no advantage, I'm Artemus Mouser, of the Central Office. I am here to investigate this crime, and, incidentally, to serve this gentleman."

Nick pointed straight at Fenno with the last remark, but his fiery gaze did not leave the two men he was addressing.

"I have commanded him to say nothing," he went on, before either could speak. "And when I tie a man's tongue in that way, I'm always prepared to defend him with my own, or anything else required. You fellows need to remember that all men have a right to be thought innocent until proven guilty. Now, who invited you into this room? What do you want here?"

There was no stopping Nick Carter, nor evading him, when he cut loose in this fashion. Though Todd was white with suppressed rage, and McNulty lobster red from his beetling brow to his bull-like neck, two more nonplused men are seldom seen. Neither ventured to give reins to his feelings, but Todd at once began to stammer assuasively:

"Really, Mr. Mouser, if that's your name——"

"You heard it correctly," Nick sharply interrupted. "Now, answer my question—what do you want here?"

"Why, sir, Judge Packard was a personal friend, and——"

"Can you do him any service?" Nick sternly demanded, pointing to the lifeless form on the floor.

"Alas, no!" Yet——"

"Or do you know anything about this crime? Either you, or McNulty, or these two men?"

"No, certainly not, Todd frothed resentfully. "We know nothing about it, of course——"

"Then you have no business here," cried Nick, quickly pointing to the door. "Get out, all of you!"

"But, Mr. Mouser——"

"There aren't any buts, Mr. Todd."

"You are insolent."

"And you have ten seconds in which to leave this room. If you're not out in that time, one and all of you, I'll put out."

"This, you arrogant hound," Todd muttered viciously, as he stepped over the threshold, "shall cost you your commission."

"All right," Nick curtly answered.

Then, as the last of the four men passed out, he glanced at the murdered man—and closed the door gently.

"Mouser, eh?" snarled McNulty, when he found himself among the throng in the corridor. "He's the freshest guy, for a plain-clothesie, that I ever ran against. Mouser, eh? Well, I'll come pretty near finding out who he is to-morrow—and that's not all I'll do! Detective Mouser—rats!"

The face of Nick Carter when he turned back into the room was as unruffled as if no such episode had occurred.

Holman, however, had the look of a man dumfounded. He had been treated to an exhibition of authority the like of which he had never witnessed, and his misgivings concerning Detective Mouser were dispelled forever.

Fenno had resumed his seat and his dignified composure. He had no word of appreciation to offer in the presence of others. In his eyes, however, when Nick glanced furtively at him, there was a look the detective never forgot.

While waiting for Soley to return with Jackson, the waiter, Nick did not resume his talk with the physician. With no apparent interest in his observers, by whom his movements were curiously watched, he proceeded with a few investigations he wanted to make before leaving, yet about which he made no remark.

He first searched the bathroom, then a wardrobe closet in one corner for evidence indicating that some person had been concealed in the room before Judge Packard entered. In neither, however, could he discover anything that warranted suspicion.

An examination of the dead mans pockets also proved insignificant. A small sum of money, a single unimportant letter, a ring of keys, together with such minor articles as men ordinarily carry—only these were found.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story That Will Interest Boys and Girls.

A TINY WOODS CREATURE.

Wise Ways of a Little Animal—How a Shrewd, Small Beast Maneuvers to Preserve Its Life—Walking In the Forest—Sport For Young Folks.

"Now, children," said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and Little Ned, "I am going to tell you about

THE LITTLE "'FRAID ONE."

The Indians call the wood mouse Little Tookhees, and because of his timid, modest ways he is also called the 'Fraid One.

Tookhees builds the doorway of his home beneath a mossy stone in order to be well protected from his enemies, for bird and beast and fish are ever on the outlook for little 'Fraid One. To his timid glance every tree limb holds at least one Hookooskoos, or horned owl. Every bush or clump of trees could shelter Mooween, the bear, or Kagax, the bloodthirsty weasel, and below every friendly eddy Skooktum, the fat, fat trout, lies in wait should Tookhees swim too close to where he lives.

So in order to be very, very certain that the coast is clear the 'Fraid One makes a false start from his doorway, looks quickly around, gives a squeak that can be plainly heard most anywhere and scoots back into his house. So very sure are his enemies that the little mouse has seen them and will never dare to come out again that they go away to some other hunting ground. But if they had waited a moment they would have seen Tookhees poke his tiny nose out of his front door, look very carefully about and then go on his way to attend to whatever errands he may have to do.

By little jumps and leaps he dodges in and out among the leaves and grasses, never for any length of time showing himself in the open.

These little creatures travel mostly at dusk, when they are not easily seen, and in order to protect their nest they tunnel to it from quite some distance, so that one watching will not suspect where it is hidden. The wood mice are neighborly, sociable little folks, visiting the different colonies. The children of the wood are usually tame little creatures if one has patience to win their confidence, but it is not always a kindness to them, as in becoming tame they lose much of their protective instinct and soon become easy prey to their enemies.

Wonderful!

"Just think of it! A whole splendid dinner—soup, fish, entree, joint with two vegetables, dessert and cheese—for a dime!"

"Wonderful! Where can you get such a dinner at such a price?"

"Nowhere; but just think of it!"—Exchange.

No Help.

"Few actors are satisfied with their newspaper notices."

"Nor can they ever be. Of necessity the name of the actor must be printed in smaller type than the name of the newspaper."

Barbarous Tattooing.

Formerly the Marquesans had such a barbarous manner of doing their tattoo work that it often took nearly six months to heal that which had been done in a single day. They covered the whole body of the males with crudely imitated rough designs, circles, curves and many designs of small work, including round and angular spots, even to the finger nails and the top of the head. Thus, beginning at virility, some were upward of thirty years old before their tattooing was completed. Marquesan tattooing was perhaps more remarkable in appearance than that of any other primitive race.

For Convalescents.

Orange Omelet.—One yolk of egg, a teaspoonful powdered sugar, a tablespoonful orange juice, the white of an egg. Beat the yolk and add the sugar and the orange juice, fold in the stiffly beaten white and cook as directed for omeletes, fold, turn on a warm dish and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve immediately.

French Chops.—Trim off the fat and skin from a rib chop and scrape the bone clean, leaving only the lean meat at one end. Prepare and broil over a medium flame.

Chicken Custard.—Half cup of chicken broth, one-half cup cream, an egg yolk, salt to taste. Heat the broth to boiling point, add the cream to beaten yolk, add the broth and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Strain and serve cold.

Edging on Handkerchiefs.

To crochet a narrow edging on a handkerchief or small doily the work will be made easier if the article is stitched on the machine without having any thread in the needle. Small holes are thus made close to the edge into which the crochet hook can be put, and the holes will serve as a guide to keep the stitches an even distance apart.

Orange Fruit Cup.

Three large navel oranges, two bananas (not too ripe), one-half can pineapple or whole of a ten cent can, cup of the juice, juice of a lemon, three-quarters cupful of sugar. Cut oranges in small bits, cut pineapple about the same, put juice of lemon over it. Add sugar. Just before serving slice in the banana. This is a "feast for the gods."

Luck.

Luck is that which has made your successful neighbor what he is and has conspired to prevent you from becoming what you would like to be. Luck is good or bad, according to whether you are contemplating your neighbor's success or accounting on your own failures.

Luck is a handy little thing to have around, for if it does not benefit you it at least affords you an objective kicking point. Also, the mere mention of its name relieves you of the necessity of making many embarrassing excuses. Luck is a barb which may prevent disaster from poaching on your domains, but if it does not do this you at least have the satisfaction of impaling upon it all reasons for your defeat.

Luck is perhaps more unlucky than you are.

Overlooked.

Wife—Mabel has just informed me that she is going to be married.

Husband—Have you seen the young man?

"Not yet."

Poetry.

"Write poetry by all means," a professor in the University of Minnesota has encouraged his class boldly. "But don't show it to any one," he adds, establishing his right to be called not only diplomatic, but a sincere worker for the general welfare.

Easy For Him.

"How do you make the distinction between popular and classical music?" asked the very young man.

"Oh, that's easy!" answered the dispenser of home grown philosophy. "It's popular if I enjoy it, and it is classic if I don't."

DANCES AND DIES.

The May Fly Lives Only a Day, but Has a Gay Time While He Lasts.

Foolish insect! He lives only one day and spends the greater part of it dancing. You've doubtless been a guest at one of their dances, held over a stream on a warm summer's evening. You've seen the insects in swarms, leaping up and down in fancy steps and intricate figures. You've attended the dance of the May flies.

There is a general supposition that all May flies live only for a day. As a matter of fact, they will live several days if the atmosphere isn't too dry. Then again they may survive only through a single night. Even this impending fate cannot stop them from dancing.

This brief lived characteristic, however, applies only to the winged existence of the insect. Before they grow wings they pass through several stages, from the larvae, which live in water, through several molts and transformations. So while it is a May fly only for a short time it exists for a longer time, and perhaps we can pardon it if it dances during the brief period it lives in the air.

The fly has two pairs of wings, one pair much larger than the other, and two or three long, bristle-like tails. Its mouth is small and soft and not made for eating. The May fly has no time to eat. He's too busy dancing.

THE MODERN TORPEDO.

How It Travels and Its Effect Upon Striking a Vessel.

The present day torpedo is a very different sort of weapon from that used half a century ago. It is shaped something like a cigar and is about twenty-three feet long and twenty-one inches in diameter. It weighs considerably more than a ton, and its construction costs from $5,000 to double that sum.

It is made to travel in a certain direction in a fixed time and to explode when it strikes some solid object, such as a ship's bottom. A torpedo of the largest and most modern type will tear a gaping hole in the stanchest ship ever built. The nose or "explosive head" of a torpedo contains the deadly charge of high explosives, nitroglycerin and guncotton being oftenest used.

When the torpedo strikes its target a tremendous detonation follows instantly, driving in both the outer and inner "skins" of a vessel. The hole it makes in a ship's bottom varies in size, but is seldom less than ten by thirty feet. The torpedo travels toward its victim at the rate, roughly, of about a thousand yards a minute. The distance and rate of speed have to be calculated to a nicety before the torpedo is discharged. It is kept to its destined course by perpendicular rudders in its tail.

The modern "dirigible" torpedo was first used in a naval war during the Chilean revolution of a quarter of a century ago.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

TRAINING OF THE SOLDIERS

The decision of the Militia Council to train two divisions for the front in Canada so that the units of every branch of the service will be able to go directly into the firing line is but the statement of what all efforts of training troops in Canada has finally been brought to

As soon as the first contingent was sent overseas from Canada's shores, the General Staff Officers were given instructions to confine their efforts principally to that of making soldiers physically fit, the remainder of the training to be done in England. Then it would be impossible for the troops to receive instruction in Battalion, brigade and even divisional movements after they were fully trained in the elementary work.

Gradually the most complicated details of training reached Canada. With a staff of officers in charge of the work every advancement was used and the instruction proved to be just as good as that was received in England.

At last the wonderful announcement that Canada had succeeded in doing equally what the English army officers took a peculiar pride in being alone able to do, was accomplished in Canada.

The training camps like Barriefield have become fitted to instruct soldiers in everything from recruit drill to expert work in trench warfare. They will be able after only an examination in England, to go on the firing line and take places along side of men who received only a preliminary amount of the syllabus in Canada and had to be instructed in the remainder after crossing the ocean.

The credit to the officers in Canada is certainly great when one considers what has been done and what is being done through the Dominion in camps like Barriefield.

At Barriefield the training is in charge of Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, and Lieut.-Col. S. A. Thompson, both of whom are highly efficient officers and competent instructors. They have accomplished for Barriefield all that the Imperial officers have been able to do for the Canadians and others who received their final work in England.

At the camp the instruction now being given trains a recruit, if the battalion remains there a sufficient length of time, in every branch needed for soldiers suitable for the firing line work. There is the Bombing School, under officers who have been at the front and know the conditions, the Signalling branch is efficiently managed by Major D. E. Mundell and the men being turned out are experts. The School of Cookery is even more advanced than anything of a similar nature in Canada and has received such an excellent reputation that Camp Borden officers are being sent here. The Bayonet Fighting and Physical training given is of the regulation kind and as advanced as that given in England.

The drill on the field that makes the squads part of a company or battalion is of a high enough standard to justify the men being taken without further instruction directly to France.

Some citizens who know nothing about the work have the erroneous opinion that the work at Barriefield consists mainly in teaching recruits to carry themselves straight and that the real work commences after the units reach England. This is more and more becoming entirely wrong. The boys on the Heights are actually in training for what they meet when in France and Flanders. The short time in England will be taken up with practically the inspecting of the units and possibly redistribution of some of the officers and N.C.O.'s.

It is a big compliment to Canada that this has been accomplished and reflects credit on the headquarters staffs who are responsible.

FAREWELL CONCERT

Wednesday night the big tent of the 109th Battalion was crowded to capacity with men and officers of the 109th Battalion. Some of the best talent obtainable in the city was present to entertain the boys, and they certainly enjoyed every number on the programme. The programme was as follows: Song, Miss Katherine Hart, with encore; song, Miss Katherine Ryan, accompanied by Mr. H. Ryan on the violin, with encore; song, Miss Anita D. Sutherland, with encore; song, Miss Garrett with encore; song, Miss Phyllis Devlin, with two encores; song, Mrs. Dodd, with encore; song and encore, Mr. Reginald Hudson of the "Y" staff; recitation, Major King, headquarters staff, Ottawa; 109th topical song, "Jack" Kellatt with chorus; violin accompanist, Mr. Simpson of the "Y" staff; piano accompanist, Mrs. Smith.

Every piece on the program was well received by the soldiers, and every singer had to sing again, and in the case of Miss Devlin, who has developed into a great favorite in Barriefield camp, the boys insisted on two encores, which were cheerfully and delightfully given. The band of the 109th opened with The King, and during the program gave several fine selections, and played whilst the men sang popular choruses.

Major R. D. Ponton and Capt. S. S. Lumb have returned from Halifax after accompanying the 93rd Battalion to that city.

The band of the 155th Battalion have kindly consented to play at the evening garden party to be held on the Y.W.C.A. grounds, on Tuesday evening next, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society, of Queen Street Methodist Church. This is one of the best musical organizations in the district, and it has a reputation that will go far towards drawing a large crowd in aid of this party. The kindness of the officer commanding the 155th and of the band is much appreciated by the lady workers in particular and by Kingstonians in general.

C. S. M. Dodds of the Bayonet Fighting School, has been transferred to Camp Borden as an instructor.

Major Magwoods' family are comfortably established in a camp on the St. Lawrence River. The Major of the 154th is delighted with the scenery in the vicinity of the camp.

Captain Robinson, adjutant of the 154th Battalion, has brought his family from Grenville, Quebec, to Barriefield, where they will remain until the 154th leaves for overseas.

No grenade company has yet been organized in camp in connection with the overseas units. At the front every battalion has a grenade company, consisting of one officer, one sergeant and 56 men.

TRAMPLED TO DEATH BY A VICIOUS BULL

Mr. Duncan C. Clouston, a well known and highly respected resident of Haldimand Township, Northumberland County, died on Tuesday from injuries received by being trampled by a bull. While attempting to drive the animal, a three-year-old Holstein, into the stable at Mr. John McCarl's, it turned on him, knocking him down and trampling him. Mrs. McCarl heard his screams and called the hired man, who was working in a field some distance away, to his assistance. Dr. Brown was called and found that Mr. Clouston was terribly bruised about the chest and shoulders and several ribs broken and one penetrating his lung. He made him as comfortable as possible and took him to his home, where he died in the evening.

Mr. Clouston, who was in his 74th year, was a life-long resident of this vicinity. He was a member of the Church of England.

REBUKED AT THE DOOR

In a certain provincial town there lives an old maid who has the reputation of being about the fastest talker on record, added to which her tongue has more than the average amount of venom. One day recently, however, she met her match. A peddler called on the lady and had the impudence to ring the front door bell. A moment later the door was opened and when the lady saw who it was she at once gave him a piece of her mind, finally concluding with:

"And now, then, you can be off. There's nothing you can sell me that will be of any use to me."

The peddler, who was evidently no novice as getting his own back, turned on his heel, sweetly saying as he did so:

"No, mum; seein' 'ow I'm only sellin' mousetraps an' not muzzles, I don't see 'ow there is.'

GOOD PRICE FOR CATTLE

A live stock deal of unusual interest was completed a few days ago, when Andrew McKean, a prosperous farmer of North Elmsley sold his herd of 12 choice beef cattle to R. B. Goodfellow for the handsome price of $96.00 per head. These cattle were purchased early in December, 1915, for $46.00 per head and were wintered loose in a warm open shed and fed on hay and unthreshed grain and were finished this summer on pasture. Mr. McKean has proven to the farmers that it pays well to keep the right kind of stock. His skill and enterprise have been rewarded and should be an example for other stockdealers to follow.

GREAT POTENTIAL WEALTH OF CANADA

TIMBER, COAL, OIL, NATURAL GAS AND MINERALS BEYOND CALCULATION, HERITAGE OF CANADIANS

PROSPECTS of new wealth in boundless quantities, through the application of science to industry, were unfolded the other day by Arthur D. Little, of Boston, in an address at the Royal Alexandra, at Winnipeg, after a luncheon given in his honor by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Little represents the firm of Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Boston, an organization of chemists and engineers, whose specialty is industrial research.

At the invitation of Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific, the firm established a branch in Montreal, and Mr. Little has undertaken to survey the resources of Canada. His address yesterday was partly the result of a tour through Canada, which he had made in company with George Bury, Vice-President of the C. P. R.

W. M. Ingram, president of the Manufacturers' Association, introduced the speaker.

Mr. Little explained that he was born in Boston, and therefore belonged to those who do not have to be born again. He was therefore surprised to find himself, after a brief acquaintance with Canada, undergoing an unexpected process of rebirth. He had found himself in a new and ampler world, in which one breathed a more stimulating atmosphere and learned to think in continental terms. It was a world in which present achievement, wonderful though it was, derived its chief significance from its promise of the future. He had seen the black soil of the prairies turning green with the young wheat, great stretches of forest, lakes like inland seas, mountains rich in minerals and of commanding beauty, noble rivers and cities so clean, orderly and metropolitan that the traveller's admiration was blended with envy. It had been his good fortune to come to Western Canada with George Bury, Vice-President and General Manager of the C. P. R. Mr. Bury's knowledge of conditions and potentialities throughout the country was so full that to travel with him was to receive a liberal education.

Natural resources, proceeded Mr. Little, did not of themselves create great industries. Such industries resulted from personal initiative. Opportunity implied responsibility, and it was upon the heirs of this rich inheritance that the responsibility for a wise initiative was placed. The first requisite for a wise initiative was a compelling desire to do something with the opportunities at hand, and the second was knowledge. Science was only knowledge at its best; it was not something occult, to be followed for its own sake, but was intensely practical. The war had taught English-speaking people that science was the basis of prosperity and power, and that without science there could be no liberty and no national existence.

Mr. Little defined industrial research as research having for its immediate and avowed purpose some practical end. No greater service could be performed than that of inculcating into the public mind a proper appreciation of what research could do. For forty years the spirit of research had pervaded the entire social structure of Germany, with the result that Germany although not possessed of great natural resources, had before the war been rapidly making a peaceful conquest of the world. In the United States the handwriting on the wall was being read, and already several large corporations found it profitable to maintain great research laboratories. At least a dozen corporations spent $100,000 or more on such laboratories, and one company employed 650 chemists.

There was also, declared Mr. Little, an insistent demand throughout the British Empire for the mobilization, co-ordination and extension of research facilities. Lord Shaughnessy had acted by calling the organization represented by the speaker, Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Boston, to Canada, for the survey of the natural resources of the Dominion and the promotion of industrial research. He and his associates felt that, in so doing, Lord Shaughnessy had honored them so signally that they would be dishonored if they failed to make the most of the opportunity placed in their hands. They were not in Canada in the exclusive interest of any corporation, but to serve all clients whose interests were in line with those of the Dominion. Their work had scarcely begun. Ultimately they hoped to have the known resources of the Dominion indexed, so that the main facts about them would be instantly available. They expected to assist in securing new facts, and were assured of the cordial co-operation of the Federal Government and the universities. They would strive to introduce industries along new and non-competitive lines and, if permitted to, improve the practice of many existing industries. Some progress could be reported already, although they had only been in Canada a few weeks.

Mr. Little then mentioned a few of the lines in which applied science could help in the production of Canadian wealth. Sometimes as much as 20,000,000 acres were sown to flax in Canada for the grain only. It was not practicable, in view of the labor situation, to grow flax for the fibre in order to make linen. But mountains of flax straw resulted from the growing of flax for the seed, because when grown for that purpose it was sown much more sparsely than when grown for fibre, and its habit of growth was changed. Hundreds of thousands of tons of the best paper stock in the world could be obtained from this straw. And in the United States the Government was circularizing housewives not to destroy old paper and rags, from which new paper could be made. It had not been an easy matter to separate the fibre required for paper from the broken straw. A great many people had tried it without success. His own company had carried out some experiments in its experimental paper mill at Boston, and had succeeded so well that the United States Government was taking the paper they produced. Samples of it were shown by the speaker. Such paper was worth 6 cents in any market, he said, and probably 8 cents. A mill established to manufacture it could afford to pay the farmers $3 a ton for flax straw delivered.

Another question they were investigating was the possibility of providing gasoline from natural gas. A new process for effecting this end had been developed in Oklahoma. It was of peculiar promise, and his company had taken out a license to use it in Canada. If some of the gasoline thus obtained contained too much sulphur, probably it could eventually be eliminated by an adaptation of the French process, which had proved so successful in taking sulphur out of oil. By this method, copper was put into the oil, and the sulphur attacked the copper, leaving the oil pure. There was much lignite in Canada. This was a good gas producer, and a new type of machine, a rotary, which worked well with lignite, had recently been made available.

Another possibility for Canada, said the speaker, was the production of dry milk. Several processes for doing this had been invented. Sterilised it kept good for a long time, and for certain purposes, including those of bakers and confectioners, was better than ordinary milk. It could be restored to the condition of ordinary milk by the addition of water. He was convinced that it would become a staple article on the kitchen shelf. Its great merit was that, in shipping, seven-eighths of the freight on ordinary milk was saved and dairies could profitably be established at points remote from markets. About $15,000 worth of dried milk entered London daily from Scandinavia, and quantities were going into New York. Properly handled, the dried milk industry could become in Canada more important than the cheese industry.

Another thing about milk, said Mr. Little, was the fact that thousands of gallons of skim milk were daily fed to hogs. Casein, worth 30 cents a pound, could be easily extracted from skim milk.

One of the most promising fields for industrial research was that afforded by the enormous quantity of straw, for which Canadians had no present use. Some things could be done with straw already; straw boards and corrugated board could be made. A straw lumber, suitable for cheap outhouses and partitions, could be made at a cost of not more than $5 or $6 a ton. He believed something might be done with it in the rotary gas producer. The distillation products of straw were worth looking into, also the possibility of converting it into fuel for use on the farm. Grain alcohol had been made from straw, although the commercial value of this process was not yet assured.

Few nations were so bounteously endowed with potential wealth as Canada. There was merchantable timber in such profusion that a single island on the Pacific coast boasted the greatest amount of such timber in proportion to its acreage in the world. There was coal in all varieties, from lignite to anthracite; oil and natural gas; the finest fisheries known; minerals beyond present calculation; vast areas of fertile soil. What could not be done with them, with the aid of industrial research?

Speaking of the lumber industry, Mr. Little said, the Canadian lumbering practice was not better than the best in the United States. In the States, two-thirds of a tree felled in the yellow pine belt was wasted as litter in the field or burned as mill waste. Three dollars a thousand was a good profit on lumber. For 15,000,000,000 feet board measure which found its way to market, 30 billion feet were wasted. This was not industry; it was crime.

A few months ago there had been 2,600,000 automobiles in the United States, and they were increasing at the rate of 4,000 a day. These machines represented 60,000,000 horse-power in gasoline engines. That was more than the potential horse-power of the United States water power. Auto manufacturers were bringing in an additional 100,000 horse-power a day. The unprecedented increase in the demand for gasoline thus caused was responsible for the high price of that commodity, and soon there would not be enough gasoline to go round. Alcohol was the only feasible substitute, and grain alcohol—not wood alcohol—could be produced from wood waste. A plant for doing this had been started in Louisiana.

The speaker concluded by indicating the industrial possibilities of electro-chemical and electra-metallurgical processes. As showing what they had already succeeded in doing, he said that ten years ago 22 per cent. of steel rails manufactured were rejected for faults. Whereas out of ten thousand tons of rails made in the electric furnace in three years there were no failures. Exceedingly interesting experiments were also being made in producing synthetic materials by the use of the ultra-violet rays. Great results were likely to come from this line of research.

Industrial research was applied to idealism. It expected rebuffs. It learned from every stumble, and turned a stumbling-block into a stepping-stone. It trusted the scientific imagination, knowing it to be simply logic in flight.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

HOLBROOK BLINN AT GRIFFIN'S TO-NIGHT

"The Family Cupboard", an absorbing 5 part photoplay, based on the well known Brady stage success of the same name, is announced for exhibition at Griffin's Opera House, to-night, and Saturday matinee and night. That very fine artist, Mr. Holbrook Blinn, plays the leading character in the story, a man who leads a double life, simply because his home life in uncongenial.

He keeps a smart little vaudeville girl "uptown" and is found out by his son, who is captured by the scheming little stage person. When father and son discover that they are wasting their lives on a worthless object, they reform. Then the business man's wife resolves to abjure her society ways and make her home more attractive to her husband. So all ends happily, the family cupboard being finally cleared of its "skeletons."

Mr. Blinn's part is a strong one, and he does it the amplest justice. The part of the girl is played by that charming young artist, Frances Nelson, who has already successfully appeared in feature photoplay offerings here. Dare Devil Helen Holmes appears on the same programme, in a thrilling railroad story entitled "The Dynamite Train.". Officers Elected By The Masonic Grand Lodge

Grand Master Luke Re-elected by Acclamation—Belleville Next Meeting-place

LONDON, Ont., July 21.—Special—Election of officers for the coming year featured yesterday's session of the Masonic Grand Lodge in its annual convention here. Grand Master Right Worshipful Bro. Sydney A. Luke of Ottawa, and Deputy Grand Right Worshipful Bro. Wardrobe were re-elected for another term.

William H. Line of London defeated Hugh McPherson of this city for the office of Grand Warden, and James G. Cane of Toronto was elected Junior Warden. The Grand Chaplain, Rev. W. H. Snellgrove; Grand Treasurer, E. T. Malone of Toronto, and Grand Secretary, R. L. Gunn of Hamilton, were re-elected without opposition. Joseph Hickson of Toronto was chosen as Grand Registrar. The five members elected for general purposes were R. W.B. Thomas Rowe, of London; R.W. B F. W. Harcourt of Toronto; R.W.B. J. F. Reid, Windsor; R.W.B. Wm. Logan, Hamilton, and R.W.B. A. J. Young of North Bay.

It was decided to hold the next conference at Belleville, in preference to Toronto, from which city an invitation was received. Following the balloting the incoming officers were installed by the meeting. It was decided to increase the per capita tax per member from fifty cents a year, as at present, to one dollar. The meeting was brought to a close last night and many delegates deported for their homes to-day. There were over 1,000 registrations of delegates from this city and outside points during the convention.

Several changes of particularly local interest in the districts were arranged at the afternoon session. London district, which formerly had twenty-seven lodges, has now only twenty, comprising eight in the city and the remainder in the surrounding country.

The city of S. Thomas and the county of Elgin have been made into a district known as the Thames District.

CRUISING ON GREAT LAKES & AMONG 30.000 ISLANDS of GEORGIAN BAY

FORT WILLIAM

NORTH CHANNEL
LAKE HURON
PARRY SOUND
GEORGIAN BAY

PENETANG

THE "Great Lakes"—about these potential words is a halo of mysterious charm—they bring to those who travel on them memories of beautiful sights. They conjure up thoughts of their far-reaching economic value—of their bustling, ever-growing cities—their industry—their endless delights.

You love the lakes when you get to know them. You will learn that they are the cheapest travel routes in the world—that they have the greatest fleet of freighters on the seas, that they boast the two greatest metal industries on earth. In fact—now that ocean travel is curtailed and European trips are foreborn—the "Lakes" are coming into their own—they are getting the attention that they merit. The six-day cruises of the "Noronic," "Harmonic," and Huronic, the palatial steamers of the Northern Navigation Company, which leave Sarnia, Ont., weekly on the northern trips, afford the passengers opportunities to see the finest bits of scenery in the Great Lakes region, the largest elevators in the world and the great canal locks on the American and Canadian sides of the Soo, as well as the beautiful Kakabeka Falls and the delightful scenes about Port Arthur, Fort William and Duluth.

Travelling westward you leave Sarnia in the sunset glow of a summer evening, one of the great liners of the Lake Superior fleet bearing you around Point Edward and out upon Lake Huron. You awaken in the morning to find that the liner has made its way to the upper end of Lake Huron and is skirting Detour Light. The lake narrows down rapidly and the steamer enters the St. Mary's River. Sugar Island and Hay Lake are reached and passed and, as the ship's bells sound the hour of noon, you pull up at the New Ontario dock at Saute Ste. Marie or the Soo, as it is known by Northerners. Here are the great locks, the wonderful engineering feats that have established Canadian and American engineers the world over as men who stop at nothing. There is a "water bridge" 900 feet in length and the longest on fresh water anywhere. You catch a glimpse of the rapids and then take a peek at the twin cities nestling there on either side of the gateway.

On the steamer goes, westward now through Upper St. Mary's River and then gliding out upon the waters of Whitefish Bay. Off to the left, Whitefish Point gradually rises out of the blue distance and, in the late afternoon, the liner swings its way out into Lake Superior—the greatest of them all. It makes your heart beat fast, this wide expanse of undulating green, and though you have taken the trip a hundred times you, too, gaze in awe at this seemingly illimitable stretch of tumbling water.

Far off to the west, the fire of the sun is quenched in the sea and you go in to dinner as darkness throws its mantle about the ship. And how good everything tastes! A promenade around the upper deck in the whipping breeze, for there on the big Superior the wind can get a sweep, then to the ball room for an hour's gaiety and off to bed.

All through the night the great ship has been breasting its way and morning enables you, if you happen to be an early riser, to shout "Land, land!" for off there to the westward it is plainly visible. Thunder cape lifts its head high above and gives you an impressive and rocky welcome. And all along the shore is rough and boulder-strewn, for here the elements have held their sway for centuries. The liner slips into the quiet waters of Thunder Bay and, there before you, rises the smoke of Port Arthur and Fort William. You are at the Canadian gateways of the Great Northwest. Duluth is reached the following noon, a city of 90,000 perched upon a hill.

CAMERA HUNTING

The wild life roaming unmolested in Algonquin Park, Ontario, have now become so numerous and tame that splendid photographs are taken of them by the camera enthusiasts. The prohibition of hunting in this Park greatly adds to the opportunities of the picture hunter since the wild creatures are much more approachable than in localities where they are persistently hunted. The Park is a paradise for the canoeist, there being over 1,000 lakes, varying in size and connected by deep still-water channels or racing streams of strong water, making it possible for the canoeist to paddle fifty miles without having any long portages. If the visitor prefers more comfort to that provided by camp life, good hotels and log cabin camps are available. Write for handsome illustrated descriptive literature to any Grand Trunk Agent, or to Miss Jean Lindsay, Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Station, Ont.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

Canadian Nickel For Briton Only

Hon. Mr. Meighen Reads Statement From London at Hamilton Banquet

HAMILTON, July 21.—(Special.) — That the British and Canadian Governments have been in close touch with one another on the nickel question was the contention of Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor-General for Canada, at a banquet tendered the Life Underwriters of Canada at the Royal Connaught Hotel to-night.

During his speech he read the following cablegram from the Secretary for the Colonies in the Imperial Cabinet: "His Majesty's Government are fully aware of the arrangements made for assuring the destiny of the nickel refined from Canadian ore in the United States, and are satisfied with the precautions that have been taken to prevent such nickel getting to the enemy."

Mr. Meighen also dwelt upon the attitude of the Canadian Government towards the question, and defended Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues. He affirmed that "had the export of ore been tampered with, international complications with the United States would have resulted, and many Canadians would have been thrown out of employment. Also, had the Canadian Government undertaken the refining of the ore, a dangerous delay would have resulted, and the allies deprived of a rush delivery of munitions."

"The Government I represent," he said in conclusion, "are therefore seized of every detail in connection with the whole matter." He further assured his audience that "not one pound of Canadian nickel has reached Germany since the outbreak of war."

PROHIBITION DATE IS DEFINITELY FIXED

TORONTO, July 20.—Prohibition must go into effect in Ontario on September 16, no matter how much stock remains on the shelves and in the cellars of hotels and liquor shops of the province on that date.

United States Cruiser to Act as Chaperone to the Deutschland

WASHINGTON, July 21—Special—When the German submarine liner Deutschland starts its dash across the three-mile limit outside the Virginia Capes it probably will be under the protection of the armored cruiser North Carolina, one of the vessels of the navy equipped with aeroplanes.

The North Carolina is especially fitted for long range arrangement for launching aeroplanes from her deck.

The Navy Department has no intention of publicly announcing that the North Carolina is to see that the allied warships do not chaperone the Deutschland to the three-mile limit, but it is well understood at the Navy Department that the cruiser will find it convenient to leave Hampton Roads on her way to Newport at the time Deutschland begins her journey.

Battle Reported In Baltic Sea

Many German Submarines, Torpedo Boats and Zeppelins are Seen off Jutland

LONDON, July 21.—Special—Heavy cannonading off the west coast of Jutland and in the Baltic Sea between Landsort and the Gottska sands is reported by vessel-men arriving in Danish ports, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen.

"Those from the North Sea," says the correspondent, "saw a large number of German submarines, torpedo boats and Zeppelins sailing northwesterly from the Jutland coast, and then heard firing. The cannonading in the Baltic continued throughout Wednesday night. They added that they saw a small German warship sailing southward, and expressed the belief that the Germans had an engagement with the Russians."

A Norwegian Vessel Passes Down Canal

One of the 57 Being Built in Cleveland for Freight Service—On Way to Norway

CORNWALL, Ont., July 21.—A boat attracting a good deal of attention and an unusual sight to Cornwall was the vessel that passed down the canal yesterday bearing the flag of Norway, and in large conspicuous lettering amidships the names of the owner, Johan Myelde Norge with the Norwegian colors on it. The vessel which was laden to full capacity is of full canal size, and is one of 27 being built in Cleveland, so that there will in all probability by others following it. Another vessel belonging to the same firm passed down at an early hour this morning. They will go to Norway. This vessel will be tied up until the break in the Lachine Canal is repaired.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hunter have received a letter from their son, Lieut. Frank H. Hunter, informing them that he is now at the front in Flanders. The name of Lieut. Percy Breckle, Bank of Cornwall, appears in the list of officers who have gone to the front.

SQUIRREL FORCES SMALL CHILD FROM CARRIAGE

WATERTOWN, July 21.—When grey squirrels get so independent that they take charge of a man's household, even to the extent of forcing the baby to forfeit its carriage, then it seems to some that it is time the rights of men should be placed above those of the squirrel. But this is just what happened at the home of Philip H. Belch of 735 Gotham St. He claims that the squirrels gnawed a hole through the attic and finally ended up by taking possession of the baby's carriage.

"How can I defend myself?" queried Mr. Belch, when asked why we did not see that they were deterred from such an imposition. "The law seems to think that the squirrels have first rights here, and should I take a gun and shot one I would be liable to a fine."

His friends advise him to disregard the law in this case where the comforts of the baby are at stake, and put a permanent end to the little imposters.

GOES TO SISTERS RESCUE AND BOTH LOSE THEIR LIVES

Mrs. Edgar Fletcher and Miss Ola Ellis, Both of Toronto, Perish While Swimming in St. Clair River; Bodies Not Yet Recovered

TORONTO, July 27.—Two days before her husband was to join her for a two weeks' outing, Mrs. Rita Delametter Fletcher, wife of Edgar S. Fletcher, Secretary of the Fletcher Manufacturing Company, 29-41 Hayter street, met death by drowning in the St. Clair River near Corunna. With her perished her sister, Miss Ola J. Ellis, 673 Euclid avenue, a teacher in Park School. The accident occurred while both were bathing in the river.

News of the tragedy sent Mr. Fletcher to Corunna yesterday. He was to have left Toronto on Saturday for his holidays, which were to have been spent with his wife and sister-in-law in Corunna.

Mrs. Fletcher, while enjoying a morning swim, got beyond her depth and was caught in a swift current. In response to her cries, Miss Ellis started to the rescue. On the way she dropped into a deep hole and did not reappear. Mrs. Fletcher maintained her struggle for fifty rods, then perished in view of her aunt, Mrs. Edith E. Clemens, with whom she had been staying.

Mrs. Fletcher, 27 years old, was born in Toronto, and had spent her entire life here. She had been visiting in Corunna for two weeks and was to have remained there a month. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Bessie, three years old. The family residence is at 97 Hilton Avenue.

Miss Ellis was 25 years old. She had taught in Toronto schools for several years. Surviving her are her mother, one sister, Mrs. E. A. Steiner, 106 Admiral road, and a brother.

The bodies, if recovered, will be brought to Toronto for burial.

CAVALRY FROM CANADA NOW READY FOR ACTION

Waiting in Their Saddles Anticipating an Order at Any Moment—Horses Not Quite Accustomed to Roar of Artillery A Great Number of Prisoners

LONDON, July 22.—Special—A letter from the Canadian front line says:

"The incessant roar of guns has become necessary to us now. We would wonder what had happened if they stopped. We thought one day our chance had come, as we were right up behind our trenches waiting all day with the saddles on ready to move off in five minutes, but the time was not yet. Where we halted was in a valley with guns on every side. I have never been in such noise. Our poor horses for the first hour did not know what was happening.

"The firing kept up all day. Before we came away the horses had got quite used to it.

"Four of us in the afternoon were having a little session. I held four sixes, had just made it two francs to draw cards when an anti-aircraft shell whizzed down a few yards off. I hunched my shoulders and bet five francs, which made them all quit but one. He raised me five and I saw him. He saw four nines. We live in the open absolutely, sleeping on the ground, having the sky as our roof. Everyone seems more contented and bright.

"There are hundreds of prisoners coming through here every day. They are put into big wire enclosures until the trains can take them back. I saw about 300 officers and men yesterday. It reminded me of a big stockyard, officers in one corral and the men in the other. They wandered aimlessly about the enclosure just like I have seen cattle doing at home. Our doctors were dressing the wounds of prisoners. There is one young officer who, at a distance, is the very image of 'little Willie.' For sure they get well fed and looked after."

TACTICS OF HUNS NIPPED

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, July 22.—A strong German attack northwest of St. Die in Vosges, was repulsed last night by the French, a war office report of to-day says. On the Verdun front the Germans bombarded violently the French positions in the sectors of Fluery and Fumin wood.

In the region of Moulin Sous Toutvent a strong German reconnaissance was dispersed.

Says Farewell To 109th Batt.

Marched Through Kingston Streets Before Taking Train—Number Collapsed From Intense Heat

KINGSTON, July 22.—(Special.) — Barriefield camp is the poorer to-day for the loss of nearly 1,000 of the finest soldiers that ever paraded on the historic old commons. Thursday the 109th Battalion, of Victoria and Haliburton, folded their tents, packed their belongings, and as the sun was setting in the crimson west, marched out of camp for the city in response for the demand for more troops to keep the fiendish Hun on the run.

Before leaving camp, the 109th were drawn up in front of the administration building where Col. Hemming addressed the unit, and complimented them on their conduct during their stop in camp, and their smart and soldierly appearance at the hour of their marching out Col. Hemming said that he regretted to part with the 109th, but duty demands, that they obey the order which called for leaving Barriefield camp, and going to some other place where they would continue to do their duty and play their part as soldiers really should.

SUICIDE TRIED BY DESPONDENT LOVERS

MONTREAL, July 21.—Two attempted suicides, the victims of both of which will recover, took place last night. One was in Lachine, the other in the city. Both are said to have been caused by affairs of the heart.

Nicholas Nikas, a Greek laborer at Lachine, was standing on 4th avenue when he put a revolver to his chest and pulled the trigger. A friend who had just left him rushed up, and had him taken to the hospital. The bullet was taken out this morning. A week ago Nikas had a quarrel with a girl, which resulted in her having a warrant issued for his arrest, and in his leaving town. He came back last night, had an interview with the girl, at which his friend was present, and then left her at her house.

Joseph Alex is a Syrian who keeps a little store at 85 De Courcelles St., also shot himself in the chest. The return of a woman who once lived with him is said to be the cause of his readiness to end his life. He was taken to the Western Hospital, and is doing fairly well.

Young Bank Clerk Fell Under Train

Melvin H. Smith, of Stratford, Ont Seriously Injured at Valcartier Station

QUEBEC, July 21—Melvin H. Smith, of Stratford, Ont., employed here in the Bank of Montreal, was crushed beneath the wheels of a Quebec and Lake St. John train at Valcartier station, 15 miles from this city, yesterday afternoon. He was on his way to Lake St. Joseph and, having alighted at Valcartier, was running to catch the moving train when he slipped and fell under the wheels. His left shoulder, arm and leg were badly crushed. His left arm may have to be amputated.

Mr. Smith, who is summering at Lake St. Joseph, had left the city on the 4.15 train, with a number of his friends. On the arrival of the train at Valcartier, he alighted and ran over to one of the ice cream booths. Ordinarily the train stops for fifteen minutes or longer, but to-day the delay was shorter and the train started on as Mr. Smith was completing his purchases. With the cones of ice cream in one hand, he spurted to catch the departing train and as he neared the platform of one of the cars he slipped and fell headlong. His head struck the side of the car and he rolled over his left side on the rails, where the wheels crushed his shoulder, arm and leg.

A physician was secured at Valcartier camp and Mr. Smith was placed on the next train to Quebec. The victim was unconscious all the way to Quebec. His friends, Messrs. E. Savard, T. Delaney and R. Hammill, accompanied him to this city, and on the arrival of the train Mr. W. W. Symonds, accountant of the Bank of Montreal, was waiting with Dr. Geo. Ahern. They had the victim taken to the Hotel Dieu Hospital in the ambulance. He regained consciousness at the hospital and in spite of his suffering he spoke cheerily to his friends, saying that he was all right.

While Mr. Smith's injuries are serious, Dr. Ahern does not entertain immediate apprehension for him.

Mr. Smith, who belongs to Stratford, Ont., where his parents still reside, came to this city three years ago and has been in the employ of the Bank of Montreal here since that time. He is 27 years of age and had taken an active part in the bank league hockey matches.

PIT FULL OF SKELETONS

Bones are Unearthed at Griffiths Island

OWEN SOUND, July 21.—Men employed in shovelling gravel to be loaded on a scow at Griffiths Island about twelve miles from town, have come upon a pit containing the remains of fifteen or twenty skeletons. The bones were well preserved, but in many cases the skeletons were not complete. No trinklets or articles of any nature were found with the bones, which were found in a pit about six feet deep and about 100 yards from the shore. There were evidences of fire having been laid at the base of the pile, and some of the bones were charred. Capt. Long of the tug Loon, reported the find to T. L. Dates of the Union Cement Company, who is getting the gravel from the pit, and he will bring the matter to the attention of the archaeological authorities.

ALLIES IN WEST ARE HOLDING ALL THEIR GAINS

Stronger German Counterattacks are All Repulsed — Heavy Enemy Losses—Teuton Troops With Grenades Succeed in Penetrating a Part of the Leipzig Redoubt, But Are Driven Out—Forced Back in Disorder

LONDON, July 22.—(Special.)—Despite the fact that the Germans are developing a strong counter-offensive against the new front won by the Franco-British troops in Picardy, Gen. Haig's forces have further increased their gains, carrying the greater part of the strongly-fortified Foureaux Wood, north of the Bazentin-Longueval line. The Germans to-night are delivering violent attacks against the ground won in the forest.

The latest encounters have been almost entirely of a local nature, Gen. Haig wires to-night. His report tells of strong fighting around the Leipzig salient and the Bazentin-Longueval line. By grenade attacks the Germans penetrated a part or the Leipzig redoubt, but were at once driven out.

Teutons attacking the newly-won French positions were hurled back in disorder.

The French gains in the new attacks on the Somme have aroused great joy in Paris, the despatches add. They have served to increase confidence that the results will be great.

That the German losses in the last few days of fighting have been terrible is indicated by to-night's statement. Thirteen battalions of Germans attacked on a 200-yard front in the Delville Wood on Tuesday, it is stated, in the face of a terrific British machine gun fire. "The enemy's losses were correspondingly great," says Gen. Haig.

FIRED TWO BULLETS INTO HIS OWN BODY

Joseph Alex, St. Henry, May Have Succeeded in Attempt to Kill Himself

MONTREAL, July 21.—Shooting a bullet through his chest and another in his arm, Joseph Alex. of 87 Coursol street, St. Henry, tried to take his life last night. The man was in the house when suddenly a shot rang out and when the rest of the occupants of the house found him, he had two bullets in his body and a revolver lying by his side. He was taken at once to the Western Hospital, while the police were notified. At the hospital his condition is reported as very serious and it is doubtful whether he will recover.

STOLE DRUMMER'S WATCH

KINGSTON, July 21.—A traveller on the G.T.R. fast train missed a watch shortly after the train pulled out from Kingston. The conductor was notified and it was not long before the time piece was discovered in the possession of a man named Bowen who had boarded the train at Kingston for Montreal. The police at Brockville were notified and were at the depot when the train pulled in ready to take Bowen into custody. As the watch had been returned and the owner was unwilling to appear and prosecute, Bowen was allowed to proceed on his way.

Drop Bombs on Railway to Great Destruction—Along the Front

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 22.—(Afternoon statement.)—Between the Oise and the Aisne we disposed of a strong reconnoitring party of the enemy in region of Moulan Sous Toutvent. In Argonne we exploded a mine with good results at Bolonte. A surprise attack of the enemy against a small position at Fillemort was repulsed.

On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front), there was violent bombardment of the sectors of Fleury and Fumin Wood. An attack by the enemy on a trench south of Damloup was beaten back by our fire.

In Vosges, after a spirited bombardment, the Germans delivered an attack at eleven last night against our positions northwest of St. Die. It was repulsed with heavy losses.

One of our aeroplane squadrons yesterday bombarded three times a railway station at Metz Sablons, throwing 115 large bombs on railway, buildings and tracks. The bombardment must have caused great damage. In the course of these expeditions a German aviator who was pursuing our squadron, was brought down. One of our machines was compelled to land after an accident and has not returned.

GUELPH, July 21.—Lieut. Norman J. MacDonald, of the Royal Flying Corps, who was seriously injured on April 1 in an areoplane accident, has arrived home. On April 1st he was making a practice trip near Dover. When the machine had risen to a height of 2,000 feet the engine suddenly went "dead" and the machine crashed to the ground. Lieut. MacDonald received a compound fracture of both bones in his right leg and a fracture of two or three bones in his left ankle. He was also badly bruised all over.

Lieut. MacDonald expects to remain in Guelph for about two months.

WILD TIME ON A PORT HOPE STREET

Cattle Crazed by Heat Make Things Lively For Residents

PORT HOPE, July 21.—Four cattle being driven to the station this morning created quite a stampede on Dorset street caused no doubt by the intense heat. They tore across lawns and through gardens levelling everything in their path. One of the cattle became so wild that it had to be tied to a tree, while the other three were taken to the station. In the absence of the men the poor thing threw itself over the embankment, the rope tightened and before help could arrive, it had chocked to death.

Some better and safer plan of taking cattle through the town should be adopted. Fortunately no children were about otherwise we might have several fatalities to relate.

Satisfied in Nickel Matter

British and Canadian Governments in Close Touch on the Matter

HAMILTON, Ont., July 21.—That the British and Canadian Governments have been in close touch with one another on the nickel question was the statement of Hon. Arthur Meighen, solicitor-general for Canada, at a banquet tendered the Life Underwriters of Canada to-night.

During his speech he read the following cablegram from the Secretary for the Colonies in the Imperial Cabinet: "His Majesty's Government are fully aware of the arrangements made for assuring the destiny of the nickel refined from Canadian ore in the United States,, and are satisfied with the precautions that have been taken to prevent such nickel from getting to the enemy.

Mr. Meighen also dwelt upon the attitude of the Canadian Government towards the question and defended Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues. He affirmed that had the export of ore being tampered with international complications with the United States would have resulted, and many Canadians would have been thrown out of employment. Also had the Canadian Government undertaken the refining of ore a dangerous delay would have resulted, and the Allies deprived of a rush delivery of munitions.

He further assured the audience that "not one pound of Canadian nickel has reached Germany since the outbreak of the war."

Bring Trouble and a Circular

Military Reporters at Camp Borden Get in Wrong — Letter Gives Instructions

The newspapers at Camp Borden have been sending out articles that have finally brought down a censor on all messages sent over the wires and a circular letter that effects every military camp in Canada. The letter states that newspapers are to be allowed every facility for gathering reliable information, but any wrong reports published must be either retracted by the newspaper so doing or circulating of that paper in the camp may be cancelled.

The order cannot possibly affect Barriefield Camp and officials, while not commenting, seem more than satisfied with what the Kingston press has been trying to do in assisting the recruiting and giving reliable information of the soldiers' movements to the people at home.

The policy of the press has always been to keep the highest of patriotic ideals and help rather than hinder, what the officers in charge are trying to do in making the men of the C.E.F., in their hands as efficient as possible so that they will be a credit to this part of the country when they go into the trenches.

TWIN OF DEUTSCHSAND CAPTURED BY BRITISH

Craft Was Caught off The Coast of Ireland on Her Trial Trip

WASHINGTON, July 21—Before the German merchant submarine now in Baltimore harbor had so much as started for this country, her predecessor, the first submarine of the Deutschland type, was captured off the Irish coast by the British navy, on her trial trip, so naval authorities here state.

This first undersea craft of the Deutschland type is now in England, according to a report on file here. On board her when she was captured by the British warships were several scientists, expert mechanics and sailors, all of whom are now interned in England.

The capture of the initial merchant submarine intended for trans-Atlantic service was effected because of engine trouble, which developed off the Irish coast. For reasons of policy the fact had been kept secret by the British Admiralty, but the facts are on file with the United States officials in Washington, it is said.

The chances of British destroyers or other types of craft catching the Deutschland depend largely, according to expert opinion in naval circles, on whether the wake of the submarine is sighted as she attempts to slip out

Accuracy is Demanded

It won't do to guess what time it is—not these days.

Every man that "does things" must own a watch that he knows will stand by him.

If it won't do that, then he should let us fix it so that it will do that.

Don't wait to have it done, hand it in at once.

It is bad for the watch to neglect it and inconvenient for you. Does this apply to you and your watch?

MUSIC AND DRAMA

NAT GOODWIN IN "THE MASTER HAND"

Famous Actor in a Sensational Photoplay Plot and Counterplot

The five-part photoplay, "The Master Hand," based on Carroll Fleming's drama of the same name, is to be exhibited at Griffin's Opera House on Monday and Tuesday night. Nat C. Goodwin, the famous actor, appears in the film.

"Nat" is welcome in pictures. As an actor he is versatile; his name and personality are familiar to millions. Any picture in which he appears is assured, in advance, of special attention.

"The Master Hand" is a strong drama, if ever there was one; with a trio of villains just as villainous as villains can be. There are (1) a husband who marries a rich widow, wants her money and stops at nothing short of slow murder to gain his ends; (2) a female accomplice, a lady doctor, who drugs the unsuspecting woman and plans to marry hubby when the wife dies; (3) a rascally doctor who keeps a private sanitarium and conspires with hubby and the lady doctor to have the wife committed to his sanitarium.

This prologue of evil-doing is followed by four thrilling acts of plot and counter-plot; throughout all of which Mr. Bigelow, played by Nat C Goodwin, appears as the instrument of good. He rescues Mrs. Rallston from the sanitarium; restores the fortune which her cowardly husband squandered; and rounds off everything else happily, even after Rallston has done himself to death by reckless automobile riding.

ECZEMA

Pimples form, run watery matter which turns to crust, itching becomes painfully intense, and the disease spreads over the body. There are many variations of eczema, but all are cured by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Relief from itching is obtained at once, and gradually and naturally the sores are healed. You can see with your own eyes just what is being accomplished from day to day by this wonderfully healing, soothing ointment, and this will encourage you to keep up the treatment until cure is complete.

PALACE CLOSES FOR IMPROVEMENT

During the next two weeks, to give oportunity for interior improvements, the Palace Theatre will be closed. During this time special programmes will be screened at Griffin's Opera House, where every effort will be made to please the theatre-going public. A catchy program is on at the Palace this evening.

"THE FAMILY CUPBOARD AT GRIFFIN'S LAST NIGHT

When a man finds home life a trifle uncongenial, he is tempted to blaze out a course all his own that is more than likely to culminate in his downfall. This was the state of Charles Nelson's life, as vividly portrayed by Holbrook Blinn in the attractive play of the above title. His wife was alright, but since prosperity had come to the home, she assumed an air of extravagance that more than balanced the income. The daughter, charming Alice, was also a society young lady, and Kenneth, the son, had developed into an almost hopeless tippler. The father went wrong—with the aid of an attractive but unscrupulous young woman, and thus the money flew. Things went from bad to worse until the family became divided, Miss Alice standing by her father, and the mother shielding the son. Then, when this same girl inveigled Kenneth into deep, dark ways, trouble became rampant. The young man drew on his mother for funds, only to throw it away—the female vixin profiting accordingly. Finally, following a series of thrilling episodes, the young woman eloped with a third lover, the father and son came to their senses, the family was again united, and harmony reigned. There were many incidents which drew forth excellent acting. The scenes were well laid, and throughout interest was held. In a word the play was of high grade, with impressive personalities, rich settings, and costumes of an attractive nature. Several other pleasing films made up an excellent evening's programme, which will be reproduced in full tonight.

Good Rich Blood Means Good Health

JUST A LITTLE MORE RICH, RED BLOOD CURES MOST AILMENTS.

The lack of sufficient rich, red blood does not end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are tired, languid, run-down folk who do not enjoy life. Food does not nourish; there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache and nearly always nervousness. If this bloodlessness is neglected too long, a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more rich, red blood cures all these troubles. Then you have new health, new vitality and pleasure in life. To get more rich, red blood the remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases and enriches the blood so quickly or so surely. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done this over and over again throughout why thousands of people always have a good word to say for this medicine. Miss Gertrude Haffner, Kingston, Ont., says:—"About two years ago I was suffering greatly with anaemia, so much so that I had to give up my situation. I became so weak that I could scarcely walk without help. I had no ambition, no color, no appetite and was constantly troubled with headaches and dizzy spells. I was taking medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me a particle of good. One day a friend asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Though as the result of my condition I was greatly discouraged, I began the use of the Pills, and thanks to that good friend's advice after using a few boxes I began to feel much better. Under the continued use of the pills I gained in weight, my color came back and I grew gradually stronger. I looked so much better that people would ask me what I was taking and I had no hesitation in giving the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am so grateful for what this medicine has done for me that I will do all I can to extend its use."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Belleville, Ont., July 21, 1916.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly allow me to appeal through the columns of your paper to those who are interested in children. We have now about twenty-five under our care in the Shelter, and we all know how unbearable hot it has been, and those of us who have been able to get a few moments on the Lake Shore know how we enjoyed the refreshing breezes; so we wondered if some of our generous citizens, who own auto cars, would be so kind as to take these children and give them a run to the Sand Banks next Thursday afternoon at twelve o'clock, so that they can enjoy for once in their lives a picnic by the lake, and I know many of our friends would send along something special in the way of cakes, etc., to make it a time to be remembered. I shall be glad to hear as soon as possible from those who can volunteer, so that final arrangements can be made. Phone 836, or Mail Box 46, P.O. Thanking you for your kind favor.

I remain yours sincerely,
THOS. D. RUSTON,

THIS IS THE 641ST DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

NOT WITHOUT HONOR SAVE IN HIS OWN LAND.

One is in a quandry as to what gain can be effected by the reckless criticism of the Borden Government, which is leaving no stone unturned to make good our country's part in the terrible conflict that is now raging overseas. It is only necessary to examine the press of the United States and Great Britain and of the more honest Liberal journals to expose the rank injustice of the partizanship which masquerades in the columns of the Globe under the name of patriotism. Take, for example, the New York Sun, one of the powers of American newspaperdom. This is what it recently had to say of Canada's contribution to the war:

> Sir Sam Hughes, the target for so many political shafts, has proved himself one of the most formidable men in Canada. He overrode the law, the expert advice of army men and engineers and extemporized the great army training camp at Valcartier whence soldiers by the hundred thousaid have gone forth since August 1914 to fight England's battles. He organized the Canadian war industry that has produced millions of dollars worth of shells in the past eighteen months. Whether or not he showed the same contempt for rules here as at Valcartier, he produced results everywhere, and made Canada's participation in the war a glorious one.

The Christian Science Monitor, referring to the work of the Canadian Government, says:

> The marvellous results of this devotion have been recorded. They have won the unconcealed admiration of the United States and they have earned the praise and gratitude of the Empire and its Allies.

The Boston Transcript, in paying a remarkable tribute to Sir Robert Borden, declares that:

> Canada's debt to him will only be realized when the full story of the war comes to be written.

These wholesome appreciations of Canada's efforts are more than re-echoed in the British press. They are found in great organs of public opinion—the London Daily Chronicle, the Daily News, the Pall Mall Gazette, the Times and the Morning Post. And even here in Canada there are Liberal newspapers and Liberal politicians who can rise sufficiently high above party to pay tribute to the Government's work. The Ottawa Free Press has time and again borne testimony to the Administration's energy, far-sightedness and patriotism. Speaking in the House of Commons last spring, Dr Michael Clark voiced the views of fair-minded Liberals when he declared:

> "When this war is over history will record that, whatever the petty political fortunes of the parties happened to be, the present head of the Government has since the war cloud burst kept an eye single to the winning of the war and has not been turned aside by any improper purpose or small consideration."

And yet, in spit of all that these tributes convey, in spite of the fact that the Empire is fighting for its life and that the Government is carrying a weight of responsibility such as has burdened no other Government in the history of Canada, a certain class of mad party papers and politicians conceive no better service to their country than denunciation and abuse of those who are at its head.

The wonder is that we have done so well. Despite unpreparedness and inexperience in war, we have placed an army of 350,000 men under arms. We have withstood the financial shock of the conflict in a manner that has in reality surprised the world, and to-day we are not only paying our own war expenditures, but are granting credit to the Motherland as well. And despite the failure of the Province in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier is supreme to recruit, we shall raise the 500,000 men which Sir Robert Borden pledged. After all the people of Quebec are not altogether to blame if many of them would "resent fiercely" fighting in a "European war." Too long they have been led to believe that it is none of their affair what happens outside of their province. Even in the midst of this world war Sir Wilfrid Laurier raises the sinister flag of racialism, and preaches in Quebec that the English-speaking people of Canada are warring upon the French race and language.

Montreal Herald: The best testimony we have yet seen to the efficiency of the British air service comes from a French officer just back from the Somme, who describes the British flying champions as "Lords of the Air." "Your brave aviators," he said, "have come into their own at last, and France to-day salutes them as the lords of the air. Even the Bosche fliers, who have been captured by us have had the chivalry to admit that the British airman have accomplished some noteworthy performances. Not only have your intrepid aviators flown far over the German defences and defied the anti-aircraft guns, but single-handed they have fought and beaten off as many as three and four Fokkers at a time. The Bosche fliers, who, a very few months ago, looked with contempt on your airmen, to-day respect and admire them as the result of bitter experience. That great young British aviator who sent Captain Immelman to his death, has become a terror to the Bosche. You ought to have him on all your picture-postcards. Like all your men he is a real hero, and France is proud and gratified for their invaluable co-operation. 'Oui, ils sent magnifique.' "' Evidently the reassurances given in the British Parliament at the time the Fokkers first appeared were well founded.

Whether prompted by inherent pomposity or unadulterated cussedness, the Vossische Zeitung persists in expressing the opinion that "there is in this war no room for a compromise with England. England is the enemy who has raised up and is still keeping against us a world of enemies. We can expect from England's goodwill nothing. . . . for our national future. We must for the sake of a reconciliation with England abandon none of the war-aims which we have achieved by conquest and which we deem it necessary to retain in the interests of our country. The only important thing is to weaken England's power and to strengthen our own to an extent that would allow us to impose peace upon England, willy-nilly, and to make her recognize our right to existence, our right to the future, our right to access to the world and to the world's oceans." And yet, as the slaughter goes on in France and Russian successes continue in the east, is it not more likely that such bombast will, ere another winter appears, be turned to a spirit of pleading for mercy? The fall must come, and when it does the drop will be heavy.

Enjoy What You Eat

More cases of Indigestion are due to habitual Constipation than to imprudent diet. Unless the bowels and kidneys are regular, there is an excess of poisonous matter which remains in the system and is bound to affect the stomach and interfere with complete digestion.

To correct this tendency to Constipation—to have the bowels move regularly every day—to keep the stomach sweet—and to enjoy what you eat without fear of pains, "heartburn" or heaviness, take a cooling, refreshing, pleasantly invigorating glass of Abbey's Effervescent Salt every morning.

This famous household remedy will put your whole system in its normal, active condition, & "make you forget you have a stomach". Take it in warm water.

Current Comment

German shipyards are reported to be working overtime in repairing the warships damaged in the Jutland battle. They do well to make haste, for it is a safe prediction that the next fight on the sea, when it does come, will mean still more work for the same yards.

"Teach your children to swim," is good advice, and opportunity should be afforded to all to learn this most important art. If suitable bathhouses were established at convenient points within the city limits it would be a step toward acquiring the necessary accomplishment.

The fact is now well established that Germany and her allies have lost the initiative—lost it probably never to regain it. The tide has turned against them. However furiously they may strive against it, they cannot hope to stem it now. Coming slowly or coming quickly, surely their defeat is coming.

It is said that man is a fighting animal. So he is. But he is also a grower and a builder, and it is because he is a grower and a builder that man is made the lord of creation, because his most powerful instincts are those of growth and construction, not of death and destruction.—Toronto Star.

The apparent willingness of the Government that this anti-Imperial crusade shall proceed in the midst of the war, possibly means that the rulers of Germany desire to prepare their people for very modest terms of peace. We may be sure that the gag has not been taken off the German platform and press for nothing.—Montreal Star.

PAINFUL SWOLLEN VEINS QUICKLY RELIEVED AND REDUCED

Mrs. R. M. Remler of Federal, Kansas writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact one had broken), for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks and, to quote from her letter. "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since."

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

The Fatal Bargain
OR
The Man Who Dared

By NICKOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued

Lying on the bureau was the key fitting the door of the room, where Judge Packard had evidently placed it.

Observing the overcoat and hat on one of the chairs, Nick also examined them. The overcoat pockets were empty. Looking into the soft felt hat, however, thinking that it might contain initials that would absolutely prove it was that of the dead man, Nick made an unexpected discovery.

Sticking to the sweat leather was a single hair, the more noticeable because it was alone, and most remarkable because it was of considerable length, and—gray.

Judge Packard was a man not yet sixty, and his hair, cut quite short, still retained the raven-black hue of youth.

Nick Carter's eyes lighted a little when he discovered this bit of evidence. He took it from the hat and placed it between two pages of his notebook. Then he held up the coat, surveying the back of it, and glanced at the garments of the dead man.

He was not thinking of him, however. He had recalled the elderly man with gray hair and beard, with black leather bag and ebony cane, with nervous haste and unsteady steps, whom he had seen pass through the hotel office in the direction of the elevator, a quarter of an hour before the murder had been reported.

Glancing around, Nick again observed the indenture and soiled spots on the bedspread, previously mentioned. Taking a lens from his pocket, he leaned over the bedspread, previously mentioned. Taking a lens from his pocket, he leaned over the bed and examined the spots, and Holman ventured to ask, with his curiosity stirred:

"What have you found there, Mr. Mouser?"

"Nothing," Nick tersely said.

There was no opportunity to say more, for the door was opened at that moment by Soley, who entered in company with Jackson, a tall, cadaverous young man clad in a servant's livery.

Nuck saw him shrink and turn pale upon viewing the scene in the room, and he rightly judged that he had not the nerve to have committed this crime, even if there had been any material evidence of it.

"Your name is Jackson, I'm told," he said, approaching him.

"Yes, sir; it is," was the reply, huskily made.

"Did you bring a drink to this room about twenty minutes ago?"

"I brought up a drink, sir, ordered from the telephone," said Jackson, pointing to a small instrument on the wall. "A glass of plain whisky, sir, without a chaser."

"Was that the order?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who was in this room when you entered?"

"I did not enter, sir," Jackson quickly replied.

"How was that?"

"As I was nearly to the door, sir, a gentleman stopped me and said, 'That's the drink I ordered, isn't it?' and he mentioned the number of this room and glanced toward the door."

"Well?"

"I told him it was, sir, and he slipped me a half dollar and said, 'All right, waiter; I'll take it in. I have a lady calling to see me on business, and she is mortally afraid of being seen here, even by one of you chaps. So I told her I'd step out and get the drink, instead of admitting you.' He laughed and winked, sir, and I supposed it was all right."

"You gave him the tray and the glass?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see him enter this room?"

"Yes, sir, just as I started down the stairs."

"Did you see anybody else in the corridor?"

"No, sir. There wasn't anybody."

"Was this the man who intercepted you and took the tray?" asked Nick, pointing to the body on the floor.

"No, sir, nothing like him," Jackson quickly declared. "The man I saw was younger and larger, with a black beard and mustache. He wore a dark suit, but no overcat, and had on a derby hat."

"Do you think, Jackson, that you could identify him?"

"Yes, sir; I'm sure I could."

"Holman, where is that disguise?" asked Nick, turning to the detective.

"Here," cried Holman, quickly producing the disguise belonging to Fenno. "I reckon you've got the same idea that I have, Mouser."

Nick did not reply to this remark. Instead, he turned and said rather curtly:

"Stand up, Mr. Fenno. I wish to see how you look in disguise. There you are, and a capital fit. Now, Jackson, what do you say?"

Without the slightest protest from Fenno, Nick had adjusted the disguise to his face. His design in so doing was obvious to all, and Jackson, the moment he saw the change in Fenno's appearance, cried confidently:

"That's the man, sir! I'll swear that he was the man!"

"You are very sure of it, then?"

"As sure as a man possibly could be, sir," Jacksoin stoutly insisted.

Fenno gazed at him darkly, but did not speak.

"It's just as I thought," cried Holman impulsively. "There's really nothing more to it. I've felt sure of him from the first."

There was an odd light in Nick Carter's eyes, however, as he removed the disguise and tossed it upon the table. While doing so, he said quickly, but in too low a tone to be heard by the others:

"Take a tip or two from me, Fenno. Don't open your mouth until we meet again. That will be at the Tombs within an hour. Meantime, keep a stiff upper lip. I'll bring Nick Carter along with me. He'll pull you out of this scrape, or lose a leg in trying it."

Then, without awaiting a reply, he turned and added in offhand fashion:

"It looks bad for him, Holman, I'll admit. "You'd better call an officer and have him removed to the Tombs. I'm much obliged for the privilege of looking into the case. I am now done with it as far as anything here is concerned. It is now up to you, and I reckon you'll handle it all right. So long, Fenno; I'll see you later."

Nick saw plainly that Holman had questions he wanted to ask, but he did not wait for them. Apparently oblivious of the fact, he took his hat from the table and hurried from the room.

Making his way through the throng in the corridor which had become a dense crowd of morbidly curious people anxious to get a glimpse at the tragic scene, Nick hastened down to the hotel office. There also, though less than half an hour had passed since the crime was discovered, it now was the chief topic of discussion, as was evidenced by the grave faces and subdued voices of nearly all. Of Todd and McNulty he saw no more, however, and supposed they had left the house.

As he passed through the office, Nick saw several policemen entering, followed by the district coroner and Central Office men, and he knew that the hotel managers had lost no time in sending for the proper officials.

"I reckon both Holman and Fenno will receive a shock if they mention Mouser to those two detectives," Nick thought dryly. "Yet Fenno will know enough to keep quiet—I'm sure of that—and they'll lose no time in running him down to the Tombs. By Jove! there's a mix-up here, and no mistake.'

Approaching the office inclosure, Nick beckoned to one of the clerks, who hastened to join him.

'I'm the Central Office man who has been looking into this affair upstairs," he said quietly. "I want you to answer a few questions for me, and then forget that I asked them."

"I understand," the clerk nodded. "Mum's the word."

"I saw you speak to a young lady in navy blue, who was looking over the register about half an haur ago."

"I remember her."

"Do you know her?"

"I think not, yet am not sure. She was veiled."

"She asked you a question, didn't she?"

"Yes. She asked which apartments Mrs. Selkirk has, and on which floor they are located."

'You informed her?"

"Yes, and offered to send some one to show her. She declined, however, and said she could find the rooms."

"That was all?"

"Yes."

"Who is Mrs. Selkirk?"

"She's the wife of Mr. Patrick Selkirk, the brewer. They have lived here since their marriage, more than a year ago."

"Any family or servants?"

"No."

"Now," said Nick, "when was Judge Packard assigned the room in which he was killed?"

But,—instead of merely grinding against said Earth,—for Traction,—they CLING to it, much as your bare foot clings to slippery surfaces.

This new and wonderful Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber," is as stretchy almost as a pure Rubber band, —Light-weight as Rubber in its native amber color, but stronger, tougher, longer-wearing (in Tires) than pure Rubber could ever be.

That Lightness, Stretch, and CLING-quality is due, in part, to the absence of the heavy and inert white substances which, in other Tires, provide the gritty texture designed to give effective but grinding Traction, when Clutch or Brakes do their work.

To provide its maximum Traction with minimum Friction (which means minimum Heat, minimum Tread-Wear, and lessened Strain on the rubber adhesive between fabric layers.)—

—That's the Mission of the new Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber."

MEDICAL INSPECTOR GIVES WARNING

(Ottawa Free Press)

Dr. P. H. Bruce, medical ispector of the immigration branch of the Interior Department, has issued a warning to parents concerning poliomyelitis of infantile paralysis now prevalent in New York.

Detecting It.

"Under the heading "Early detection of infantile paralysis," Dr. Bruce, says:—

"The present very serious outbreak of this disease in New York city, which is especially marked by an inflammatory condition of the interior part of the spinal cord and is caused by an ultra miscroscopic germ (that as yet cannot be actually seen under the miscroscope, although its poisons produced in the blood are present) makes it very desirable that the public should be acquainted with the fact that 25 to 50 per cent. of the cases do not cause paralysis or are mild and therefore become sources of infection to other persons through the germs which are carried on the mucous membrane of the nose.

"Every mother of a family should therefore be on the outlook for any of the following symptoms which may exist for a few days or even two or three weeks before recovery or later paralysis takes place.

The Symptoms.

"These symptoms are: fever, unusual nervousness, irritability, drowsiness, headache, vomiting with varying degrees of stiffness of the neck. When such symptoms occur, the wise mother will at once send for the physician who is in a position nowadays to have the nature of the disease diagnosed by taking a little fluid from around the spinal cord and having it examined.

"Especially should mothers be careful to at once place children in bed in a well ventilated room during the warm weather and carry out in the completent way possible the physician's instructions. As has been shown in very many cases the paralysis follows slowly the other symptoms so that early care of this sort will help to avoid such most serious effects.

Flies Dangerous.

"The screening of the bedroom and indeed all parts of the house where sickness exists against flies will be a most important factor in preventing the spread of the disease to other persons of the household and outsiders. Physicians may similarly greatly assist in protecting the public should any such cases occur by promptly getting in touch with the medical officer of health.

THEY DON'T LIKE DROWNING A SUB.

Men of the British navy have taken many submarines of the enemies out of their wire traps. That they make these undersea boats over and send them out as English submarines to torpedo other craft of the enemies is taken for granted though it is not admitted in the official reports. Worcester men may have made some of the wire in the traps which have captured the German and Austrian submarines, and there may be some satisfaction in that part of the work. Englishmen whose duty it is to take in the trapped diving boats, do not like the work. It is the most grewsome of all the ghoulish business of the great war in Europe, they claim.

An English doctor who has been with the "rescue" crews, tells the story, but he admits there is no sense of rescue about it, for nothing is done to raise the submarine from the trap until all on board are dead, and it is the most horrible of all the deaths of war, the doctor claims. When a submarine strikes one of the thousands of wire nets set all around the British Isles, there is no known means of escape. Every move of the boat means more mixing up with the enmeshed wires. And the wires also telegraph the capture to a naval station automatically. Then a destroyer boat hurries to trap like a hunter who discovers game has been caught in his deadfall. The destroyer takes a position above the submerged boat.

And the doctor is still more graphic in further description. "Then there is nothing to do but wait, sometimes for hours, some times for days. Officers and men of the waiting vessel know what's going on down in the green depths. They know that in time bubbles will come to the surface and oil will spread over the sea. The destroyer waits for the bubbles, 'death bubbles' they call them, for they tell of death struggles going on in the submarine.' That may seem simple to people who never tried it, and of course an Englishman should not bother about how much an enemy of his country suffers in war time.

Still men are al lmore or less human in their thoughts, if not in their acts, and the doctor says it is frightful there over an expiring corps of men who are experts in the worst kind of warfare practiced. They suffer until the horrible end, and in some cases it appears that the more and longer until the death bubbles rise to the top and show through the oil, and then the hoisting crane comes and lifts up the submarine and the net and the disentanglement takes place.

And you may expect to read what the English naval men find in the German submarine. On that point the doctor says: "Seamen who fought through the maelstrom of Skager Rac will tell you their story, but no sailor speaks of the sights seen in a recovered submarine. Those sights make strong men weak and drive sensitive men delirious with horror." Then there is something about the war which is not allowed even to get as far as the censors. It is too horrible for the observers to talk about. And sailors are not as a rule squeamish. For that reason and some others, it is probably not true that for months, as the cable reports have it, the German people have been urging the imperial government to turn the submarines loose to do their worst with the peaceful shipping of all nations.

At last the car built in Canada for Canadians, for the man of everyday income—the car that removes the last obstacle in the way of your coming into your heart's desire and owning a motor car that carries with it pride and happiness of possession.

A car that is so beautiful, so strong, so light, so powerful and withal so economical that it brings motoring within reach of thousands who heretofore have not been able to obtain the class of car they wanted at the price they wanted to pay.

Just as Benjamin Briscoe created a new era in motordom when he brought out the Briscoe Four-38 and Eight-38, so too, motor history begins all over again with the coming of the Briscoe Four-24 at $825, the car with the half millon dollar motor.

The Half Million Dollar Motor is the longest long-stroke motor in the world, 3⅛ inch bore to 5⅛ inch stroke—that's why the Briscoe Four-24 made 32 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

104 inch Wheel Base—Demountable Rims—Briscoe Line 5 Passenger Touring Body—Briscoe Line 4 Passenger Roadster Body—Exceptional Body-room and Leg-room—Full Elliptic Springs—Floating Type Rear Axle—Splitdorf Electric Lighting and Starting—Completely Equipped.

Five Passenger Touring,—Four Passenger Roadster,—$825.

It is a car to give you everything you could ask for in the way of style, attractiveness, comfort and equipment, with the minimum cost of upkeep for tires and gasoline.

Look up the Briscoe dealer and see this new Briscoe creation—the Four-24.

Write for copy of "The Half Million Dollar Motor" by Benjamin Briscoe. There are wonderful facts, little pathetic happenings and sunny spots of piquant humor. It's a real story written by a real man with the creative and artistic temperaments combined—probably the greatest ever written about a motor car. Mailed free on request.

Briscoe 8—38
Touring or Roadster
$1185

—the de Luxe Eight of super-power—the aristocrat of motordom. For sheer beauty of outline, luxury of appointment and even flow of power, the Briscoe Eight-38 leaves nothing to be desired.

114-inch wheel base—French stream line body—full cantilever rear spring suspension—and every refinement that comfort suggests.

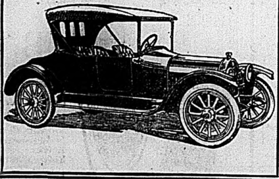
The price includes every accessory.

Briscoe 4—38
Touring or Roadster
$975

The Car which was adopted by the Canadian Government for the Light Car Requirements of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

The motor is exceptionally smooth, efficient and sturdy—a veritable brute for power.

Completely equipped—not a dollar to spend for extras.



A Wonderful Proposition for Dealers

The Briscoe Cars are the greatest combination of light cars that any dealer in Canada can handle. First of all, they are Canadian-built cars—built right here in the Briscoe factories in Brockville.

Then, consider the price range.

Here's the new Four-24 at $825—the car for the average family.

Then—the Four-38 at $975—with longer wheel base and larger motor.

And the Eight-38 at $1185. the first Eight made in Canada, and the car that has paralyzed "light six" competition.

With the Briscoe Agency, you have Cars to suit practically every buyer,—and powerful advertising to help you create sales. Write, Phone or wire, or better still, come and see for yourself.

Plucky Rescue Of Drowning Man

Montrealer Saved Drowning Man and Superintended Work of Resusctation

MONTREAL, July 21.—Mr. E. J. Ryan, of 152 Ottawa street, a member of the Royal Life Saving Society of Canada, made capital use of the knowledge which entitles him to the certificate and medal of the society yesterday afternoon at Chateauguay Basin, where he saved the life of another Montrealer, Armand Brisebois. The rescue was effected at 6 p.m. Brisebois had gone for a swim and, being a strong swimmer, had gone out a considerable distance beyond any of the other bathers in the vicinity. He was heard to cry out, and the onlookers saw him making feebly for shore, apparently in distress. He made but little progress and was presently seen to throw up his arms and sink beneath the surface.

One or two swimmers started toward him and cries were set up for boats. Ryan, who had just finished dinner ina cottage near the scene, heard the cries and ran out. He stripped and swam out toward Brisebois, who had reappeared, struggling frantically. When Ryan reached the spot, Brisebois had gone down for the third time. Ryan dove and located the victim, but was unable to bring him to the surface at the first attempt. A second trial was successful, and Ryan kept the unconscious man's head out of water and swam shoreward until picked up by a boat. Brisebois was apparently lifeless, when shore was reached. Work of resuscitation under the direction of Ryan was carried on for a full twenty-five minutes before Brisebois showed signs of life. He recovered rapidly and was reported last night as being out of danger.

LARGE HAY CROP

The work of harvesting the hay crop is nearing completion. Farmers throughout the country are taking advantage of the fine weather and are hustling the crop under cover as fast as labour conditions will permit. This year's hay crop is excellent and will exceed last year's by a substantial amount.

ELECTRICAL STORM

During the electrical storm which passed over this vicinity yesterday morning no particular damage was done. A large elm tree situated in front of Mr. H. Huff's place, Massassaga Road, Prince Edward county, was struck and split in two. The downfall of rain was general, and did a vast amount of good.

NURSING SISTER HAMBLY

An officer of the British Army who came from duty at the front unheralded for a brief leave at home with her father, Lt.-Col. P. H. Hambly and family, returned to active service yesterday. Nursing Sister Mary Hambly was one of our first to enlist and serve, and her skill and enthusiastic work have earned her official commendation. No honor can be too great for our lifesaving sisters. Colonel Ponton, President of the Veteran's Association, saw her off at the noon train, and Col. Stewart, Secretary, presented her with a bouquet of roses on behalf of the Veterans.

Military Matters at Barriefield Heights

MUSKETRY VERY IMPORTANT.

Musketry must be considered as the first and most important branch of training soldiers for service at the front, and to bring this about Lt.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O., makes every available man go on the ranges until he has passed the efficiency examination to make him fit for the front.

The ranges at the camp, under the able direction of Captain W. E. Swaine and a competent staff, are in use practically all of the time. Every possible attempt is made to give the tion in musketry that time will permit.

The staff colonel has been paying particular attention to those who go to the ranges and has men even assigned to light duty to get this branch of the training completed. Cooks and every person that holds even an noncombatant position in the battalion must become familiar with the rifle, and the staff officers are making it as thorough as inoculation, which, like death, seems never failing.

At present the 154th Battalion occupies the ranges, the 109th having been completed. The next will be the 155th, which will commence next week.

Musketry has been given to all of the men in these battalions, but the ranges at the camp not being available at the outlying points during the organization, preliminary training in this work could not be carried on when the instructional staff were conducting the preliminary course in the work during the winter.

NEW MACHINE GUN COURSE.

A machine gun course of three weeks' duration has started at Barriefield camp under Lieuts. Young and McGie. There will be twenty-one in attendance when all report.

The value of the machine gun in warfare, particularly of trench warfare, has been increasing by leaps and bounds, and it shows the good sense of Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O. when so much attention is paid to this branch of the work.

Before this war the machine gun was a novelty, and few men had ever seen it let alone operate it. Now these guns are common, and the knowledge of their mechanism is becoming more widely known. To make every officer commanding a machine gun section and a number of other officers of every battalion thoroughly acquainted with the working of this deadly machine these courses are proving of great value. It is planned to have every officer qualified, and if this can be accomplished the battalion will be far advanced for the firing line.

TO RUN EXCURSION.

Arrangements are being made to run an excursion for the presentation of colors to the 155th Battalion on July 29th. The Argyle Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire have been getting the colors and making the arrangements. The reasons given for having the presentation at Belleville rather than at Kingston are the assistance such a gathering would be to recruiting, the holiday for the boys of the battalion and the opportunity it would give the residents of that district to see their battalion as a unit. The expenses of the trip to Belleville would be borne by the soldiers themselves.

NOTES.

The 155th Band has returned from Belleville.

The 155th will return to camp on the 30th.

The 155th Battalion are getting ready for work on the ranges.

The 155th Battalion has received the necessary permission to go to Belleville on the 29th for the presentation of colors by the Argyle Chapter, I.O.D.E.

The annex to the officers' mess of the 155th Battalion has been made neat and cosy with the addition of new furnishings.

The Band of the 155th Battalion played for officers' mess dinner Thursday night, and as usual gave an excellent programme.

Capt. Gilmore left Thursday night for the east on command. He will be away from the 155th Battalion for about a week. This is his first trip as far east as the coast.

Capt. J. A. Harper, 155th Battalion, is detailed as a member of the ration board, to report to the field officer of the day at the C.A.S.C. supply depot.

The Machine Gun Section of the 155th Battalion have been given very handsome green and gold sweaters with the crest of the battalion in colors on the chest. "Verily, Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

Prof. D. A. Cameron, until recently of Albert College, Belleville, was in camp Thursday, the guest of the officers of the 155th to lunch. Prof. Cameron was chorister of the Bridge Street Methodist Church. He has completed a course in the I.S.I. and expects to go overseas.

The camp dentists have completed the work on the teeth of the men of the 109th Battalion, and have commenced with the 155th Battalion.

The 154th, 155th and 156th Battalions are arranging concerts for the men, each battalion furnishing talent for the other.

Major R. D. Ponton, headquarters staff, who received a machine gun bullet in the knee while at the front, was unfortunate enough to have a recurrence of the old knee trouble on a trip to Halifax. He is again under medical treatment.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—E. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240 Montreal, Can.

SHELLED BY SUBMARINE

LONDON, July 21.—The British steamer Virginia, which was sunk by a German submarine, several days ago, was first shelled by the submarine in a half-hour chase, according to Reuter's Malta correspondent. The Virginia was finally compelled to halt, when her funnel had been blown away, making the engineroom and stokehold untenable.

The submarine immediately torpedoed the vessel, the correspondent adds, and continued shelling her while the men were getting into the boats. Twenty-five of the crew got off safely, but twenty-five others went down with the ship. The captain of the Virginia was saved after being in the water for nearly an hour.

(Eugene Pier in the Boston Globe)

"Oh, dear, I suppose it won't be long now," sighed ma, as she passed Bob a cup of coffee.

"Sure it won't," replied pa. "But why the sigh? We will be going on our vacation very soon now."

"I wasn't thinking of that," said ma, with another sigh. "I was thinking of Bob calling on that girl last night. I wonder if she will—but of course she wont."

"Won't what" asked Bob. "If you mean return the call, I should say not. They are not doing it now."

"It isn't that," replied ma. "I was just wondering if she could darn socks But of course she can't. They are not doing it now."

"Why do you want to know that for?" asked Bob. "If you are especially interested I will ask her the next time I call."

"Interested—wouldn't any mother be? Haven't I kept your clothes mended and your socks darned all these years? And then to think that you will soon be leaving me for some girl who doesn't know how to darn socks."

"Great Scott, is it as serious as that?" exclaimed pa. "I never heard of this girl until Bob said he was going there to call last night, and I thought she was a new acquaintance."

"So she is," said Bob, "and I hadn't any idea of asking her to darn my socks. What on earth are you thinking of, ma?"

"Why, about your getting married," replied ma. "I am just all upset when I think that you will probably get a wife who is not capable, and who won't be able to look after your clothing, nor cook proper food for you."

"Gee, this is sudden," remarked pa. "Here Bob is still in high school, and you are worrying about the kind of wife he will have."

"That's right, make sport of it," said ma. "You can't realize how a mother worries about such things. So few of the girls now are trained to do housework. I just know the girl you marry will not know how to make beds, or dust properly, or bake bread, or cook anything as it should be cooked. Now if a boy would always let his mother pick out his wife there would be fewer misfits in matrimony. A mother knows just the kind of a wife her boy ought to have."

"Gee, pa, what a pity you didn't have a mother to pick out your wife," said Bob with a grin.

"Well, the one who did the picking qualified as a mother later," observed pa. "My mother had nothing to do with it, but yours had. She just decided who would be a suitable wife for me, and that settled it."

And pa winked at Bob.

ECONOMY AND CLOTHES

"Remember your husband's pocketbook."

That doesn't sound much like the beginning of a style review, but it proved to be just that at the headquarters of the National Housewives' League in New York.

Mrs. Ruth Butts Carson, of Boston, had announced she would lecture on the art and economics of dress. Hundreds of women were there to hear her.

"Some one earns the money you spend," Mrs. Carson declared. "You have no right to squander it on clothes. No woman has. Study what you husband likes to see you wear, and then dress simply in a way that will show you have an individual taste. Above all, have your money. Your husband will appreciate it. He will take more pride in your appearance if it costs him less financial anxiety."

The women applauded. Mrs. Carson then demonstrated how simplicity and economy could beat fashion in clothes designing. She appeared in the one-piece "Penelope" gowns and wraps that she had designed. The first dress was a straight mohair cut on Princess lines, with numerous pockets. It slipped over a simple little blue shirtwaist Mrs. Carson declared that the dress was built to outlast the styles for ten years to come.

Here are some "don'ts" that Mrs. Carson insisted the well dressed woman should remember if she would make her wardrobe a really personal affair—an exponent of good taste.

Don't wear tight corsets. Follow the line of least resistance if you are too fat. Diet and exercise will do what corsets never can.

Don't wear what every other woman does simply because it's the style. Make your clothes as individual as your friends are.

Don't forget that the first question you should ask yourself when you buy clothes is—"Do I need it?" Learn to be honest with yourself.

Don't attempt to standarize your clothes the way men do. It won't be good for your morals. Adopt the simplicity of masculine attire without its severity.

Don't forget that a well dressed woman is never plain.

A Careful Driver

Mrs. MacDowell when interviewed by a reporter this morning, stated that she could not understand how the accident hapened as Mr. Will McFarlane was a most careful driver.

GIVES HIS REASONS FOR CHURCH DECLINE

LONDON, July 22.—The retiring president of the National Conference of British Methodists, the Rev. Richard Waddymoss, discussing the reasons for the "Decline of Methodism," as shown by a loss in the total membership of the church during the year, said yesterday:

"The church's position is not due to the absence of the spirit of God, but merely to the fact that the people's minds are preoccupied. There is a great difference in the spiritual atmosphere with the period following the Franco-Prussian war.

"Then the minds of the people were filled with doubt; but now, while there is a certain element of surprise because we do not understand God's way, the people do not forget or doubt that God exists."

QUEEN CITY GREETS LARGE ORANGE MEET

Annual Gathering of Grand Lodge of British America at Toronto To-day — Will be Welcomed by Mayor Church at Victoria Hall—Trip Around The City

TORONTO, July 24.—Toronto Orangemen are enthusiastic at having secured the annual session of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America. Not so, however, with some other people.

Last night unknown persons entered the County Orange Hall on east Queen street, which had been newly decorated at great expense, for the occasion of the Orange caucus, and wrecked some of the most valuable adornments. Somebody hurled a brick through a hand painting of King William and numbers of Union Jacks and streamers were torn from their fastenings.

Last year the annual meeting was held in Winnipeg, and it is twenty years since Toronto had the gathering.

The meeting opens to-day at 7 o'clock and Mayor Church will deliver an address of welcome at 8.30. On Tuesday, the 25th, the Grand Black Chapter will meet at 9 o'clock. And at 3 p.m. the ladies will be entertained by the city to a motor launch trip around the harbor and island, boats leaving Yonge street wharf at 3.30.

Trip to the Falls.

During the evening all the delegates will be the guests of the City of Toronto to a drive about the city and refreshments will be served in High Park. At 7.30 in the evening the ladies will be entertained at Scarboro Beach. The women will be shown around the shopping district by the following committee: M. Wor. Bro. Wealth Won't Follow War

Long Period of Diminished Purchasing Power Coming—Dispute About Future Tariffs

THE HAGUE, July 22.—Problems in connection with the re-organization of Germany's trade after the war are already causing much discussion.

The Vorwaerts says experience has shown that protective tariffs have in no wise enabled German agriculture to supply the population with sufficient food and that the highest economists recognize the necessity to completely revise the tariff laws.

BOOST TARIFF WALL

The Kreuse Zeitung on the other hand clamors for a still higher tariff wall ,arguing that Germany with a higher tariff will be helped to become self-supporting. This, the Vorwaehts calls nonsense, saying that nobody seriously expects the demand for cotton to vanish or that the Germans henceofrth will be clad exclusively in linen or wool. This newspaper also says that Germany will never be able to produce sufficient grain, fodder, meat and fat.

In a technical periodical published in Essen, Prof. Walter Troeltsch of Marburg university contributes an article on industrial cartels which he described as sheet anchors in the severe dislocation caused by the war. Prof. Troeltsch predicts a further expansion of the carted system after the war.

Hard Times Period.

"We shall have to face a long period of diminished purchasing power combined with higher costs o fproduction, owing to dearer raw materials, and also higher taxes and higher wages," says Professor Troelfsch. "This will compel industries to work in closer combination."

Sergt. Roosevelt After Discipline

PLATTSBURG, N.Y., July 22.—One of the horrors of war was visited upon Quentin Roosevelt, corporal of Company H. Fourth Training Regiment. His brother, Archie, did the visiting.

Archie is first sergeant of Company H. When the command was drawn up in company front the vigilant "top" noticed that a rifle far down the line had been dropped.

"What duffer has grounded his rifle?" he demanded sharply.

For answer his brother stepped sheepishly out of line.

Archie blushed and Quentin blushed and some one in the background tittered.

"That will do," said Sergt. Roosevelt with diginity, and the drill went on. But Archie blasklisted Quentin, and the company commander deprived Corporal Roosevelt or his liberty for three days. In that time Quentin cannot leave his company street except on duty.

He is only hoping that his father, who is due to arrive Saturday for a stay of several days, doesn't get in until his punishment is over.

Death of Sir William Ramsey

Discoverer of Helium in Certain Minerals, Also Finds Kripton and Xenou

LONDON, July 24.—(Special.)—Sir William Ramsay, K.C.B., the famous scientist, died this morning.

Sir William Ramsay was born in Glasgow. He had been a professor of chemistry at the University College, Bristol, since 1899. He was sent to school at the Glasgow Academey, and subsequently to the University. While at the University of Glasgow he went into the laboratory as an analyst and attended the lectures of Lord Kelvin. Then he went to the University of Tubingen for several years. After taking his degree there he went back to England, and at the age of twenty-one became assistant to the technical chair of chemistry at what is now Anderson College. From there he went as tutorial assistant of chemistry to Glasgow University for six years, when he was appointed to University, College, Bristol.

After the discovery of argon Sir William discovered helium in certain minerals. Next came kripton. He subsequently found neon, then xenon, only one part of which is to be found in seventy million parts of air—a fraction so infinitesimal that the whole quantity Sir William was able to find during all his experiments would only fill a thimble.

GERMANS ARE RETREATING IN GREAT DISORDER

Desperate Counter-attacks Fail to Arrest Advance of Czar's Forces — Austrians in Southern Bukowina Admit Withdrawal Toward Ridge of Carpathians

LONDON, July 24.—Special—Desperate counter-attacks by the Austro-German forces have failed to arrest the advance of the Russians along the Lipa and the Styr, south-west of Lutsk.

The Teutonic army continues to retire before the heavy onslaughts. They have been driven from the new positions occupied at Beresteczk after the big push that hurled them back of the Lipa. Petrograd reports the enemy is retreating in great disorder, and that Russian troops under Gen. Sakharoff have taken in two days' fighting 300 officers and 12,000 men. This brings the total number of Teutons made prisoners up to 26,000 since July 16.

On the right bank of Styr, south of the confluence with the Lipa, the 13th Austrian Landwehr Regiment was cut off and surrounded. It surrendered in its entirety.

Gen. Sakharoff's forces are now firmly established across the Lipa about 13 miles from its junction with the Styr, and are still pressing forward unchecked. This continued advance of the Russians further imperils both Kovel and Lemberg.

Meantime, the Russians are hammering away at the Teutonic lines in Bukowina, and in the Riga sector, in the north. An important height on the road from Delatyn to Maramaros-Sziget has changed hands several times. Petrograd reports it is now held by the Russians.

Austria admits that under the menace of a heavy Russian assault the Austrians in the Carpathian region of Southern Bukowina south east of Tatarow have withdrawn towards the main ridge of [illegible] Carpathians.

FABULOUS EARNINGS OF BETHLEHEM STEEL

NEW YORK, July 22.—The directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation met yesterday, but only routine business was transacted.

While no offficial periodical statements of earnings are issued by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, it is believed they were around $30,000,000 in the first half.

The Bethlehem Company has sufficient war business on its books to keep its plants in operation to the end of the year, and as earnings in June are understood to have established a new high record, profits of $60,000,000 or over for 1916 seem to be assured.

Bethlehem is now shipping 1,000,000 shells a month, or at the rate of more than 30,000 a day.

GOLD, NOT NICKEL GOES ON DEUTSCHLAND

Treasure Transhipped From the Kronprinzessn Cecilie—U-Boat Still in Harbor—And Will Remain There if the Bremen Does Not Arrive Soon

BALTIMORE, July 24—Special—All the treasure of the Kronprinzessn Cecilie is tucked away aboard the little green undersea packet, the Deutschland. They brought it down from Boston, where the Cecilie is interned, one day last week—the day they pulled the screen of old freight barges around the German submarine, and took other precautions.

In small bags, by rail, the money came—$4,000,000 in gold, and it was trundled aboard the Deutschland and stored in secret compartments. This is on the authority of a man who knows. Nameless he must be in the story—but he knows.

"They claimed it was nickel they were putting on the submarine, didn't they?" says the man. "Well, it was good old gold. And the reason they are not hurrying the Deutschland back to Germany with that gold is because they haven't yet given up hops of getting insurance."

Yet there is still another story—or maybe it might be called a theory—as to the delay of the Deutschland that differs materially from this tale of the continued attempts to secure insurance.

It is said that Captain Koenig is waiting to see the Bremen. The Bremen is expected tomorrow. For that matter, it was expected yesterday, which means that it is expected any day.

If the Bremen fails to arrive, if she is taken or destroyed at sea, it is said that Koenig will intern the Deutschland at once rather than run the risk of losing his boat and men.

The Germans do not minimize the danger awaiting the dash of the undersea boat. They know all about the warships of the allies doing sentry duty off the capes, and they know that it is going to be no easy task for the Deutschland to elude them.

HUNS WINCH AT DESTROYING ANGEL

ROTTERDAM, July 24.—Special—Max Osborn, in a despatch to The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin from Western Headquarters, says:

"We are shaken by burning pain as new streams of German blood are flowing, and we recognize our powerlessness over what cannot be changed.

"After two years of war the Angel of Destruction is passing thr ugh the ranks of the German arms with a fury and mercilessness as if the death dance of battles had only just begun.

"Whilst our enemies suffer fearful losses we do not blind our eyes to the new mourning come to us nor over the seriousness of the fate of this decisive battle raging on all fronts. We should be unworthy the stupendous task we have to fulfill and the almost incomprehensible sacrifices our heroes make if we were not able to understand for whole fury and burden of these weeks.

We feel the raging storm of the united power of the enemy. It is now a question of everything for the life or death of our nation. We stand differently now from what we did in August, 1914. Unexampled deeds of fate lies between. But still the concluding point has to be reached, and everything is in the balance of death or life."

WHEAT EXPORTS NEARLY MILLION BUSHELS DAILY

OTTAWA, July 24—Canada's wheat is flowing rapidly to the seaboard and across the Atlantic. Furthermore, it is selling at much higher prices than those paid in the United States.

Figures of the export of wheat during the first half of July are 13,000,000 bushels. Since May 1 the average amount of wheat exported has been close to a million bushels per day. When it is remembered that ruling prices for wheat in Winnipeg are some six cents higher to-day than in Chicago, it is apparent that the Canadian wheat farmer, where he can get labour, is doing well this year.

UNINVITED GUEST VISITS CITY RESIDENCE

Consternation prevailed in a residence on the east side of the city on Saturday night, when a man was discovered in a room where he had no business to be. An alarm was sounded by the occupants of the house and the police were summoned. In the meantime the intruder made himself scarce by jumping out of a window to the lawn. In his hurry to get away the uninvited guest left a straw hat. A pearl ring is also missing from the room in which the intruder was discovered. An accurate description of the man was unable to be secured.

Snipers Are To Be Chosen

Will Be Selected From Ranks of Battalions at Camp

The specialist training of the men for this great war has taken a firm hold on Barriefield camp, and almost every man is a specialist in some one or other branch of the service. There is the physical training and bayonet fighting expert, who puts all of his trust in cold steel and the possibility of building up a high standard of Canadian manhood. There are machine gun men who are confident that the machine gun is the only thing that is bad enough for a German, and he has the greatest confidence in finally plugging the Kaiser with this effective weapon. Again the bombers and grenade men impress on the soldiers that every person must be able to pitch bombs as accurate as narrow trench fighting demands. When this is accomplished, the Canadians can go through to Berlin and nothing can stop them.

The snipers have not been receiving their share of attention, and that branch of the work is to be attended to. Major Ackerman, who was overseas with the 2nd Battalion, and has for the last three weeks been at Valcartier on this work, has arrived and the training of expert marksmen for the popular sport of "getting" Huns via the lone bullet route will be started.

The major has had constructed a rifle rest worked on the ball and socket principle, which may be set in any position. This invention will be tried out to determine its value.

Austrian Frontier Is Again Closed

Call for General En Masse of the Teutons— 400,000 Are Available

MILAN, July 24.—Special—Information received from Switzerland states that the Austrian frontier is again closed. The reason is believed to be a general levy en masse. Austria is calling out her last reserves, including half-recovered invalids and wounded, and is withdrawing a large part of her troops from the Italian front, as well as transporting troops now in Serbia.

These forces are being sent to the Russian front. It is said that already 100,000 of her army of occupation in Serbia have been sent to Galicia. The maximum number of reserves that can be put into the field is estimated at about 400,000 men.

Another reason for closing the frontier is to prevent the news from getting to the allies of the grave situation of the empire. Owing to the panic created by the Russian victories disorders have broken out in many towns. At Salzburg a great mob of women and soldiers made a demonstration in front of the governor's palace, demanding the conclusion of peace with Russia.

Warspite As Good as New

No Scars of the Great Jutland Battle Are Now Visible on the Battleship

LONDON, July 24.—(Special.) — Doubts concerning the fate of the British battleship Warspite, which may have been caused by German assertions that she was sunk in the Jutland battle, were dispelled when a representative of The Associated Press and other neutral correspondents visited this week a British port, where the squadron of Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty was viewed. The entire squadron, with light cruisers and destroyers, was aligned ready for work. Whatever damages it suffered in the battle had been repaired, and no scars were visible.

"Here she is, as good as new," said the commander of the destroyer on which the party encircled the Warspite within a stone's throw of her. She was able to return to port at a speed of 21 knots, a navy officer said, and was in dock, undergoing repairs, two hours after her arrival.

Officers and men of the squadron with whom the correspondents talked all expressed eagerness for another encounter with the Germans.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

CANTEEN HOURS

There is a feeling that with the great heat of these summer days, there should be an extension of canteen hours. At present all canteens in camp are compelled to close from nine to twelve o'clock, and from two to five o'clock, and from two to five o'clock. Chlorinated water is not the most delightful liquid for a dry and thirsty soldier to consume, and if he was permitted to have access to the canteen where good wholesome drinks are sold, it would help him bear the heat of the day better. The argument cannot be used that it is a mistake to drink much when on duty, for a soldier can turn to any tap in camp and drink all the water he wants. If he can drink water, why not something else? Mr. Wilson of the "Y" staff is contemplating furnishing oatmeal water for the boys on parade, and if this is done, it will certainly be appreciated.

TWO NEW BATTALIONS

Capt. James, quartermaster, and Capt. Clarke, medical officers, 235th Battalion at Cobourg, were in camp on Friday morning. It is being arranged to have a little camp built outside of the town of Cobourg as an advertising stunt and popularity measure for the 235th. Here the battalion will be located until brought up to strength, which in consideration of the good methods in use, should not be very long. There are at present about 200 men in the battalion but more are coming in steadily and in a few weeks the unit should be ready for Barriefield.

The officers of this battalion are firmly convinced of the value of advertising and they frankly admit that it is by full use of the newspapers they have been able to spread the name of the battalion far and wide and thus bring many men into the unit who would not otherwise be in khaki. The district used is Durham and Northumberland.

The 240th Battalion, which is being recruited in Perth and Lanark districts, has not yet launched on the big campaign. Most of the time since the authority came through for this unit has been devoted to the construction of the foundation for a good battalion.

Now that every thing is ready the whole attention of the officers will be turned to recruiting work and with a good organization behind them they should find little trouble to make another 1,000 men see their duty and the need for enlisted men. Major E. J. Watt is a real officer and man and one who is well-known in the district being used. For this reason every confidence is placed in him that he will be able to get the desired number of men in record time. This battalion will also be coming to the camp when it is up to 500.

WORK OF CAMP DENTISTS

The camp dentists have to attend to some fifteen emergency cases every day. All cases of toothache are treated by the dentist.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS

It has been made clear by an order issued Friday in the daily orders of camp, that men who are declared medically unfit to accompany a C.E.F. unit overseas, cannot claim a discharge from the service. When he enlisted, it was for the period of the war, and when considered unfit for one class of service, a soldier can be held for another during the period of the present war. It is the intention of the government to make some use of the men with slight defects preventing them from going overseas, and the first step in this matter has been taken.

On July 26th the 155th Battalion will go to the fireman's convention in Trenton.

On July 29th the 155th Battalion will leave for Belleville to receive their colors. The two bands of the battalion will accompany the unit.

The dental inspection of the 155th Battalion has commenced.

The band of the 155th Battalion is engaged for every night this week The bandsmen of the 155th love to play and bandmaster Hinchey believes in lots of practice.

Sister Lazier of Belleville, Sister Smith of Kemptville, and Sister Henderson of Lindsay have arrived in the city and all the nurses from the Third Military District are expected by Monday.

Lieut.-Col. Brown, G.S.O., is responsible for the instructional work of Barriefield camp, and since the camp opened in May, the instructional work has never been permitted to lag. Every capable instructor that can possibly be secured has been brought into service, and every man and officer in camp has profited by the persistent work of a most capable general staff officer.

Maj. C. H. Ackerman, of the staff of Col. Helmer, director of musketry training, Ottawa, is engaged in camp. Maj. Ackerman came back from the front badly torn by German shot and shell, and for some time it was believed that he would succumb to his wounds. But the major has improved sufficiently to undertake instructional duties. Maj. Ackerman is director of "sniping."

Special Bulletin For The Commission of Conservation, Ottawa

A report just issued by the Commission of Conservation, "Conservation of Fish, Birds and Game," directs attention to a report of the proceedings of a conference of the Committee on Fisheries, Game and Fur-Bearing Animals of the Commission, and contains a fund of information regarding the present condition and the necessity for protection of Canada's fish, birds and animals.

Canada is taking a prominent part in the international movement for the protection of wild life. A Migratory Bird Treaty between Canada and the United States is under consideration. Through the influence of the Commission of Conservation and other interests, bird reservations are being created, where the birds may find safe nesting and breeding places.

The fur-bearing animals of Northern and Western Canada are being rapidly exterminated. This is clearly shown by the present report. To secure their more adequate protection, the Commission is advocating the amendment of the Northwest Game Act to place responsibility for its administration upon the Dominion Parks Branch, which already protects the animals in the Dominion National Parks.

The future of the fisheries of Canada is dealt with in an able manner by the highest authorities in this country. That they are of great present value is recognized, but there is also a potential value in our oceanic and inland waters which, upon development, would mean the creation of new industries. To meet this condition, the Commission is suggesting vocational training and simple demonstration stations for the fishermen, that they may take advantage of the most practical and modern methods of their calling.

The report is replete with illustrations applicable to the subject matter.

BODY OF WOMAN FOUND BY TRACKS

Remainsof Mrs. A. Smith Lying Along T., H. & B. TRACKS

HAMILTON, July 21.—The body of Mrs. A. Smith, an employe of the Wentworth Quarry company, was picked up along the tracks of the T. H. & B. railway this morning, about a mile east of Vinemount. As to the manner in which the unfortunate woman met her death no one seems to know, but it is thought that she was run down by a train in the night or early this morning. On her person was a watch, which was stopped at 4 o'clock, and this leads to the belief that she was killed at about that hour. The body was brought to the city this afternoon and the matter reported to the crown attorney, and an inquest will be held.

NICKLES ARE NOW WORTH SIX CENTS

Demand For Metal in Munitions Manufacture Cause Increase in Vaine

The European war, upon which almost all abnormal conditions are blamed these days, has boosted the actual value of the United States five-cent piece to six cents.

Since the war the value of nickel has been due to the great demand for the metal for the manufacture of ammunition and weapons.

Back in the days when the world was at peace there was actually about one and one-quarter cents' worth of nickel in every American five-cent piece increased as nickel became scarcer, until the worth of the metal has increased about 500 per cent. and now makes the value of the metal in the coin 20 per cent. greater than its currency value.

SAMUEL SPANGENBURG DEAD

(Kingston Standard)

The death occurred in Toronto last evening, July 21st, of Samuel A. Spangenburg, residing at 201 Cottingham street, Belleville. The deceased was the second son of the late George A. Spangenburg, of this city. Besides a wife, three sons and one daughter, the late Mr. Spangenburg is survived by a brother, Fred W. Spangenburg, of this city.

The remains will be brought to this city on Monday and the funeral held from the G.T.R. station to Cataraqui on the arrival of the noon train.

REFUSED TO HIDE THEIR NAKEDNESS FROM WHITMAN

CAMP WHITMAN, Green Haven, N.Y., July 22.—While Gov. Whitman was inspecting the National Guardsmen in camp here, about sixty recruits of the Tenth Infantry, most of them from Albany, went on strike, refusing to be hidden outside of camp, demanding that the governor could see the state of their equipment. They were without shoes, uniforms or other suitable clothing, and they insisted that they wanted the governor to understand what they were being made to endure because of the inefficiency of the supply departments.

They Mutined.

The sixty men had been kept out of sight while the governor was reviewing the troops. In the afternoon again they were ordered in charge of Second Lieut. Samuel Crump, Jr., to take a position in a patch of woods some distance from the camp. This they interpreted as a plan to keep them from the sight of Gov. Whitman in order that he might not see the real conditions, and they mutinied.

No Uniforms.

There have been many complaints in the Tenth Infantry, which is probably the worst equipped of all the units remaining at Camp Whitman. There are more than a thousand men at camp without shoes or uniforms. They drill and work at digging roads while wearing civilian trousers and undershirts, often in bare feet.

COLONY OF LEPERS SHOT BY SOLDIERS

CANTON, China, July 22—Julius A. Kempf, a member of the American Reformed Presbyterian Church Mission at Tak Hing, on the West river, in Stantung province, has advised the American consulate here of the complete extermination of a leper colony near the mission by recent revolutionary soldiers, and sought the assistance of the consul in preventing a recurrence of such barbarity.

The leper colony consisted of thirteen unfortunates who made their home on a houseboat on the West river near a temple in which the soldiers were quartered. Without warning the soldiers fired upon the houseboat, killing ten of the lepers. Two members of the colony jumped into the river and started for the opposite shore, but it is not known whether they escaped death. One leper escaped into the hills. The soldiers then burned the houseboat.

Mr. Kempf and his associates had been assisting the leper colony for some time, supplying the sufferers with food and endeavoring to better their condition.

If is not uncommon for leper colonies to be exterminated in China either by the military or civilians, who resent having the unfortunates near them. In many cases the lepers provoke the attacks by begging insistently and threatening to touch persons who refuse to give them alms.

Legislation was once threatened to prevent Toronto holding an Exhibition except in years specified by the Ontario Government. Fortunately, the matter never reached the House.

THREE BATTALIONS AT CAMP

On Friday morning with the 109th Battalion on the way overseas, there were 3,646 officers, N.C.O.'s and men remaining at Barriefield camp.

Some people have the opinion that with the number of battalions being taken away from the camp, there are hardly any men left on the Heights. The number here is greater than at any time last year in spite of the fact that so many have been taken to other camps or sent overseas. The number of officers at the camp is 200 now without the Lindsay staff, which leaves over 3,400 N.C.O.'s and men under canvas.

Desertions Too Numerous Here

Pte. George Gravelle Gets Two Years — Deserted the 77th to Join the Voltigeurs

OTTAWA, July 22.—Two years, less one day, at hard labor on the Ontario Prison Farm, was the sentence imposed by Deputy Magistrate Askwith in police court this morning on Private George Gravelle, a deserter from the ranks of the 77th Battalion.

According to the evidence given at the hearing Gravelle jumped the 77th on the day on which the battalion left Ottawa en route for England. He lost little time then in joining the 230th battalion.

The Magistrate said there were too many desertions in Ottawa lately and he was determined to make an example of some one. It was a serious offense, the penalty for which in France could be death, and he would have to be severe. He therefore imposed the two year less one day sentence.

DROWNING ACCIDENT AT PETERBOROUGH

Edward Guedin, aged 21 years, was on Friday evening drowned in the Otonabee river at Peterboro in an attempt to swim to a boom of logs. A companion named Mitchell had made the boom and when he heard Guerin call out "I can't make it," he jumped into the water to assist the little swimmer. Guerin grabbled him by the neck and Mitchell freed himself only after considerable difficulty. Before Mitchell had recovered himself Guerin had gone down, and was carried away by the current. Edward Guerin was one of eight children of Mrs. Guerin. The father is at Shorncliffe, England, on overseas service with the Pioneers.

THIS IS THE 643RD DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE MINISTER OF MILITIA AND THE GLOBE.

In a speech delivered by the Hon. Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, a few days ago, he declared he relished and courted condemnatory comments upon his political and official conduct by his political opponents. The Toronto Globe has accepted his challenge, and in its issue of the 21st inst. can be found about two-thirds of a column of editorial devoted to the honorable Sir Sam, of a style and character of as bitter denunciation as ever appears even in that organ of Liberalism.

The Globe is not content with criticising the Minister of Militia's utterances and his management of the affairs of the volunteer force at the present time, but gratuitously and untruthfully assigns reasons for the Premier, Sir Robert Borden, taking Sir Sam into the Cabinet. Whatever the reasons were that led to the selection of the M.P. for North Victoria, as Minister of Militia, certainly that given by the Globe is not true. It says: "The "Premier did not want Hughes "except as a truly loyal Orange "makeweight against Monk, Pel"letier, Nantel and Doherty. Be"sides the alternative to Hughes "as Minister is said to have been "a clenched fist and a threat to "raise the lodges."

To say the least of this utterance it is a gross insult thrown at the gentlemen whose names are mentioned and an unwanton reflection upon a body of men who are guided in their political actions a thousand times more honestly than are those of the Globe stripe of party political writers

That any threat "of raising the "lodges," was ever made by anyone is a gross slander on those who belong to the Order. Such a threat never, we venture the opinion, was made or ever thought of by anyone except the writers in the Globe, whose past history secures for them a record of engendering race and creed animosities whenever it was thought possible. In the latter part of the 'fifties and early part of the 'sixties, the Globe did succeed in drawing sympathizers into its political fold by hypocritical attacks upon Roman Catholic incorporations, but those who were misled by the cry soon learned the character and hollowness of the professions of such journals as the Globe and returned to the fold from which they had been drawn by falsehood and misrepresentation. The Globe may rest content, the Orangemen of Canada know its history and have in the past, and will continue in the future to profit by such knowledge, and act accordingly.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL ON NICKEL.

It will be generally admitted that the Solicitor-General, Hon Arthur Meighen, in his recent address before the Underwriter's Association made out a very strong defence of the Federal Government's course in regard to Canadian nickel since the beginning of the war. Says the Hamilton Herald: "He declared that if the export of nickel matte to the States for refining purposes had been stopped, the consequences of such action would have been serious. International complications with the United States would have resulted; more serious still, Britain and her Allies would have been badly handicapped in their war preparations by being deprived of the refined nickel necessary in the manufacture of weapons and ammunition.

"This would be a sufficient answer to the Government's critics if there were no way of restricting the export of nickel ore and matte as to prevent Canadian nickel reaching the open market in the States while permitting the American refining company to obtain a quantity sufficient to fill all orders from Britain and her Allies. But it is hard to disprove Mr Meighen's demonstration that the complete prohibition of nickel exports from Canada during the war would have been a mistake. Whether such restriction as we have suggested would not be feasible is another question. We believe it would be feasible. It should not be impossible even for the Dominion Government to control directly all the output of nickel refined by the International company from Canadian ore, and have Britain and her Allies supplied through agents appointed by the Government."

Mail and Empire: That the report exonerates Sir Sam Hughes and the Shell Committee will cause no surprise to Mr Kyte, whose "bombshell" brought on the investigation, or to Mr Carvell, Mr Pugsley, Mr McDonald, and the other members of the mosquito squadron that pursued the Minister of Militia, the Shell Committee and the Government. These politicians did not want a real enquiry. When an impartial board of judicial investigators was appointed Sir Wilfrid Laurier angrily objected, and demanded an enquiry by a Parliamentary committee. In behalf of Mr Kyte it was denied by counsel that he had made any "charges." All that was desired was to raise and swell to the largest size a cloud of suspicion. The remarks of Laurier politicians and of Mr Johnston since the close of the public enquiry were not those of men who looked for the upholding of the so-called charges. The bitter attacks upon the Minister of Militia and his colleagues in the Government now recoil upon the assailants. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr Pugsley, and Mr Carvell never looked smaller in the public eye than they do to-day.

Guelph Herald: The Liberal advisory council "voiced its opposition to a high protective tariff, especially under the guise of war taxation," we are informed. Yet it is that high protective tariff which has saved Canadian factories from being in some instances put out of business by the surplus goods turned out from American manufactories. And it is, furthermore, that high protective tariff that has forced American manufactories to establish branch factories in Canada, of which Guelph got its share, and expects to get more. Wonder what next good thing for Canada the Liberals will have the presumption to oppose.

Recent reports with respect to the Russians who are now landing in France indicate that they came from Petrograd by way of the White Sea and the Arctic Ocean. Naval experts are inclined to think that thousands of these troops will be brought from Archangel now that the German fleet has been crippled by Admiral Jellicoe's ships. These Russians are being employed in the Champagne district and this leads to the belief that the Allies are planning to launch a terrific offensive on that part of the front before the snow flies.

Sir William Robertson, in an interview with the Associated Press, makes it clear that the Allies are not worrying about the progress of the war. The British chief-of-staff is no boaster and he is very guarded in his predictions, but he leaves no room for doubt that the British generals are confident of their ability to defeat Germany.

Current Comment

Thirteen billions of dollars is the amount Britain will have put into the war by the end of September. The sum is incomprehensibly great, and so is the war.—Toronto Globe.

At the Canadian Military Hospital at Orpington the credit for humbling Immelmann, the daring Teuton aviator, is given to a young Canadian, Lieut. Clarence Rogers, son of Mr. Elias Rogers of Toronto, who is now believed to be a prisoner in Germany. military Liberals—some of them—cannot understand Premier Borden, and so they discuss his resignation. It is not easy for them to comprehend a Premier that does things, and says very little, instead of letting things go undone with a lot of general gush.—Guelph Herald.

Post-mortem investigations into the shooting of some Dublin citizens who are said to have been guiltless of rioting recall the story of the Westerner who was lynched by mistake. The chief lyncher was called upon to apologize to the widow, and began with the words, "Well, ma'am, I guess the joke's sure on us."—Mail and Empire.

According to one authority, the Canadian West will need between 60,000 and 70,000 men for the harvest this summer. That so many are required is gratifying, for it means that the crops will be large. If the labor demand is met it should be a prosperous Canada that enters on the coming winter.

Britain and the Dominions overseas will welcome the decision to award the Military Medal to women. It is a fitting recognition of the splendid response which they have made to the demands of the remarkable times in which we live. It is an admission that even "under fire," women, as well as men, are exhibiting "bravery and devotion."

The New York Sun says it has been decided by the United States Court that the men who photographed the pictures of the Willard-Moran fight across the Canadian border were guilty of smuggling. What would be the offence of a person who standing on United States territory, looked over the border at a production prohibited on our soil? If it is a crime to record the picture in a film, it must be a crime to record it on the brain through the optical nerve.

The Poets' Corner

DREAMING

When heat waves blur the city's street
And every sun-baked wall,
I think of slopes where winds are sweet,
And where the wild bird calls;
And clover runs before a breeze
As the sea's billows go;
And, higher than a baby's knees,
The purple blossoms blow.

I breathe beneath the pelting ray
The breath of forests cool
On windy slopes of yesterday,
And by a shaded pool,
In golden-dappled shade I lie,
And hear the wild birds sing;
And through green boughs watch the blue sky.
And drink out of a spring.

Out of a spring, which bubbles cold
And brings up silver sand,
Beside a beech tree known of old,
In youth's enchanted land;
In youth's enchanted land. In truth,
'Tis an enchanted way
In which we used to walk with youth
In the fair yesterday.

Could we have everlasting youth—
If years came not at all—
Youth would be tiresome, and in truth,
The ways of youth would pall;
And we should sigh for other ways,
And things we ne'er had known;
The greatest charm of youthful days
Comes when those days are flown.

His Remarkable Career.

Few careers have covered wider extremes of fortune than did that of John of Cappadocia. He was a Roman officer of very high rank under the Emperor Justinian in the sixth century. He was a very able man, and under his direction the finances of the government flourished wonderfully. Incidentally he amassed a great fortune for himself. But he was very corrupt, and the revenues were raised "on the deaths of thousands, the poverty of millions, the ruins of cities and the desolation of provinces." He lived most extravagantly and indulged in all sorts of wicked practices. But his life of ostentatious profligacy was suddenly changed into one of abject poverty. Though guilty of many crimes, he was accused of one of which he seems to have been innocent and was condemned to be scourged like the lowest of criminals. Nothing of his vast fortune was left him but one old ragged cloak, and it is said that for seven years he begged bread in the streets of cities that once had trembled at his name.

A Peasant Boy Philosopher.

Very remarkable was the boyhood of the celebrated James Ferguson, who was born at Keith, in Banffshire, Scotland, in 1710. His father, who was a day laborer, taught him to read and write and sent him to school for three months at Keith. At the age of eight he constructed a clock of wood that kept remarkably good time and afterward made a wooden watch with a whalebone spring. He began to earn his first money by cleaning and mending clocks in the neighborhood. His astronomical pursuits commenced soon afterward, his father having sent him to a neighboring farmer, who employed him in watching his sheep. While thus occupied he amused himself at night by watching the stars and during the day in making models. In 1747 he published his book on the phenomena of the harvest moon, and this was followed by other astronomical works. His books received the approval of the Royal society, before which he fre- [illegible]

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

The clerk consulted the register, turning back several pages.

"That room was not assigned to Judge Packard he replied, after a moment; "at least, not under that name. See for yourself."

Nick glanced at the name on the register.

"It was "Jason Page," with n. home residence mentioned.

"H'm! just so!" he muttered, glancing up: "I see that this man registered yesterday afternoon."

"Yes. I remember him distinctly, for he said he wanted to engage the room, though he might not occupy it last night, as he had friends with whom he might possibly stop. He paid for the room for two days, however, stating that he had no luggage."

"Describe him for me."

"He was an elderly man, with gray hair and beard. He wore a dark suit and overcoat, and a soft felt hat. I think, too, that he carried an ebony cane with a large silver head."

"Did he take the key of the room?"

"Yes, and it was not returned this morning."

"Was the room occupied last night?"

"I cannot say. I will find out from the head room clerk, if you wish."

The delay was not long. The clerk presently returned and announced:

"That room was not occupied last night, sir. The bed had not been disturber when the chambermaid went there this morning."

"Many thanks," bowed Nick. "Now one more question: Have you, personally, seen this elderly man in the hotel since he registered?"

"No, sir; I have not."

"That's all. Remember my instructions."

Nick Carter had finished his immediate investigations in the Hotel Royal, and he now departed. That he had picked up a tangle skein, one by no means to be easily cleared, was obvious to him. Nevertheless, recalling a promise made the previous night, he firmly resolved to clear it.

CHAPTER IX.
Nick Carters Opening Move

It is a terrible fall—from magnificent bachelor apartments in the Hotel Mammoth to the dismal confines of a narrow stone cell in the Tombs.

There are a few who have suffered it, who have writhed under the downfall, who have glanced with impotent resentment at the bare stone walls and bare iron door, or sat grinding their teeth in abject bitterness of spirit, crushed by the weight of conscious guilt, or galled by a sense of outraged innocence.

One man who occupied a cell in the Tombs that night, however, appeared unmoved by his situation. It was as if some power within was superior to any evil from without; as if he could ignore conditions and defy fate; as if he could still depend with unshaken confidence upon the rugged, resolute nature and resourceful, invincible will which had won him countless victories in the conflict for power, and with them the bitter enmity of the defeated. Only such a man could have conquered in the battle for millions—or have stood unmoved by a murder charge when caught red-handed beside the slain.

He looked up with some interest, however, when the thump of approaching feet in the stone corridor fell upon his ears, followed by the appearance of a turnkey at the barred door, and behind him—Mr. Artemus Mouser. But the identity of the latter was known here, having been confidentially disclosed, and the door presently swung open and Nick stepped into the cell, at the same time signing for the turnkey to withdraw out of hearing.

"I'm here, you see, as I promised," he remarked, with something like a low chuckle, as Fenno arose to shake hands with him. "Glad to see you again."

"And I'm glad to see you, Mr. Mouser, though sorry to greet you in such quarters," Fenno replied, with grave cordiality. "Before we proceed to any business you may have in view, I wish to say just a word, left unsaid this afternoon."

"What word is that?" asked Nick, smiling.

"I want to thank you for the way in which you called down Andrew Todd in my behalf," said Fenno, still warmly pressing the detective's hand. "I appreciated it very deeply, yet did not care to express my gratitude in the hearing of others."

"Good for you!" laughed Nick, nodding approvingly. "I like you all the better for it. Todd got only what was coming to him, however, for bolting in there as if he owned the place."

"Nevertheless, your arraignment and ejection of him were nothing less than splendid."

"H'm just so!" Nick chuckled, then pointedly added: "I'll give you a tip, Fenno, confidentially: When I call down Todd for the last time, it will be something more than splendid."

Fenno started slightly, regarding Nick's bearded face more sharply.

"You don't think——" he began.

"Never mind at present what I think," the detective quietly interrupted. "There'll be time enough for that. There is now something more important to be considered. Sit down, Fenno, and we'll talk it over."

Nick seated himself on the edge of the iron cot, while speaking, and Fenno resumed the stool from which he had arisen.

"You have neglected one thing, Mr. Mouser," said he, a bit regretfully. "After what you have done, however, and the acumen you have displayed, as well as I could judge, I cannot find fault with you."

"What's that I've neglected?" asked Nick, though he knew what the other referred to.

"You promised to bring Nick Carter here."

"Don't you remember?"

"Seems to me I do," Nick tersely admitted. "Do you think he can serve you better than I?"

"Well, I'll not say that, Mr. Mouser, yet—'

"Yet you want his advice?'

"Yes."

"And wish to see him?'

"Very, very much."

"Have a look," said Nick, quickly removing his disguise.

Fenno recoiled with a gasp, then bounded from his seat.

"God heavens!' he cried, under his breath. "You, Nick Carter himself, and——"

"Easy," cautioned Nick, drawing him back to his seat. "We're not in your private office, dear fellow. I told you last night, you remember, that some day I might be able to repay your service."

"Repay it!" Fenno quickly exclaimed, wringing the detective's hand. "You repay with a thousand per cent. interest. I am overwhelmed with amazement, to say nothing of gratitude, Mr. Carter, on my word."

"Good enough. Let it go at that," Nick laughed softly. "Now, Fenno, we'll get at the business that brought me here. Bear in mind, however, you are to say nothing about my being identical with Mouser."

"Not I. Mr. Carter; I promise you." Fenno said, more grevely. "I'm more than relieved by this assurance of your aid in this dreadful affair."

"Very good. Now, what can you tell me?"

"Tell you?"

"That you left untold on the scene of the crime," added Nick. "I saw, of course, that you withheld something."

"You did?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Do you think others observed it?"

"No; I'm quite sure of the contrary," said Nick, quick to notice the exceeding gravity that had settled on the other's face. "Why do you speak in that way?"

Fenno hesitated for a moment, gazing doubtfully at the stone floor.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654, by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany.

Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

She—I don't see why you are always telling me of the biscuits your mother used to make. He—Well, so far as that goes, I don't see why you are always telling me about the dollars your father used to make.

"Brevity is the soul of wit," observed the sage.

"Maybe," replied the fool, "but I never feel very witty when I am short."

"You can't improve on nature."

"That may be," said the druggist, "but you'd be surprised at the amount of complexion dope we sell."

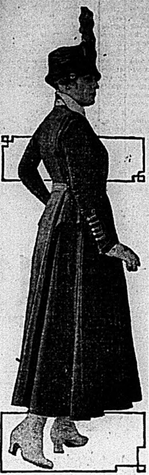
BRILLIANTINE TRIUMPHS.

Beautiful Suit of a Serviceable, Modish Material.

Navy blue brilliantine is featured in this Redfern model, the material being well adapted to the rippling folds. Fine white braid and buttons trim the sleeves, high collar and girdle. The basque front is also braided. Tiny blue ostrich tips make the stickup on the turban.



GRACEFUL SILHOUETTE.

HEALTH FOR THE HAIR.

How to Keep Your Tresses Bright and Beautiful.

Fresh air is as necessary to the health of the hair as it is to the health of the lungs. The woman who is not guided by this truth has hair which, as a rule, is matted down and of an unattractive shade. The outdoor girl, whose coiffure is blown about by the wind, usually has a head of hair that is full of life and vigor, and its coloring is fine.

Fresh air and plenty of brushing, with the shampoo and gentle massaging of the scalp, will often make sickly hair healthy.

Brush the hair for five minutes every night and massage the scalp briefly with the tips of the fingers. Then let the hair hang down unplaited until ready to get into bed.

In the morning while preparing to dress again let the hair fall loosely. On balmy days stand at an open window so that the breeze may blow the hair about and the sunshine warm it. In cold weather stand in the sunshine for a short sun bath.

When motoring or playing golf you should dress the hair loosely that it may have the benefit of the airing. Let the hair hang loosely in the sun for a few minutes each day if possible. This treatment naturally bleaches the hair slightly. The wholesome effect upon it of the sun more than compensates for the bleach. For a blond this treatment is especially effective; it maintains the fairness of the hair as nothing else will.

Close fitting hats and extra puffs and braids cause the hair to perspire and do not allow the air to circulate through it to the roots. Lack of air is responsible for so much poor hair among city women. There is no hair tonic that equals nature's.

Latest Fad of Brides.

For blankets the latest brides take pleasure in embroidering in silk immense monograms the color of the satin ribbon with which the blankets are bound. The same monogram may be used for sheets or toweling, and a pair of handsome blankets so bound and embroidered will be welcomed by any bride. For a cover for baby's crib or couch there is a charming fancy in blue or pink linen with a wide white border, the whole quilted as though made of silk. On the colored centers are appliqued fascinating white "bunnies" with long ears, cut out of white linen with embroidered black eyes.

Your "Get-Away" Power in Summer is low. Summer brings mental and physical lassitude. The spirit is languid, the liver is lazy. Nature is trying to unload the toxins that come from heavy foods and lack of outdoor exercise. Help Nature to restore natural vigor and vim. Get an eight-cylinder stamina by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit with fresh fruits and green vegetables. Cut out meat and potatoes—eat these delicious, nourishing little loaves of baked whole wheat and be cool, contented and happy. For breakfast with milk or cream; for luncheon with berries or other fruits.

FLIGHT OF THE ALBATROSS.

Wing Movements That a Chance Snap With a Camera Revealed.

During the voyage of a vessel from British Columbia to San Francisco the photographic test was applied to a long disputed point in natural history. A large albatross had been following the steamer and keeping pace with it for several hours, and the wonder grew among the watchers on board the ship how the bird was able to fly so swiftly while apparently keeping its wings extended without flapping them. As this is a common method of flight with the albatross, the explanation used to be offered that the bird took advantage of slight winds and air currents, and was so able to glide upon what might be called atmospheric slopes.

As the albatross sailed alongside the ship, about fifteen feet away, the naturalist snapped his camera at it and obtained a photograph that astonished him and his fellow passengers.

The photograph revealed, what no eye had caught, the wings of the albatross, each some five feet long, in the act of making a downward stroke. The explanation naturally suggested was that more or less frequently the bird must have made a stroke of this kind with its wings, although the eye could not detect the motion, and that the camera chanced to be snapped at precisely the right moment.

Changed the Koreans.

Koreans were quick to quarrel in ancient days and won a bad reputation on this account. At one time, a historian explains, fatal quarrels became so frequent in the country that drastic measures were necessary. A law was promulgated ordering adult males to wear on all occasions a china headdress shaped like an inverted flowerpot. It was impossible to fight when crowned with this fragile gear, and the penalties for removing it were severe. The first offense entailed fifty blows on the soles of the feet, and the second meant decapitation. This decree had the most soothing effects, the nature of the inhabitants changed as if by magic, and Korea was called the Land of the Morning Calm.

Dumas and a Dog.

Dumas pere, designing to be in the fashion during the sporting season, purchased a fine dog at an equally fine price. The next day he set out shooting in the environs of Marly. A partridge rose, and Dumas fired, wounding it. It fell about 100 feet away. Away went the dog, but simply gave the bird the coup de grace. Dumas, enraged, took the ramrod of his gun to whip the dog. The dog took the ramrod between his teeth, rose on his hind legs and began to dance a polka. The famous author then perceived that the dog had not been trained to retrieve. His fame had been made in a circus. Disappointed, Dumas gave Fido to the first peasant he met.

A Sty on the Eye.

A sty is not dangerous, but it can be most unbecoming and troublesome if not attended to at its very start. Sties are due to the irritation of the hair follicle out of which an eyelash springs. They should be opened as soon as pus is formed, for they will not get well as long as pus remains. For inflammation and scaliness add to vaseline fifteen grains of precipitated sulphur. In applying this ointment it is well to warm it a little, as it will not then be so sticky. Apply several times a day until the sty is gone.

Insulted.

Duels have been fought over the most remotely fancied insults. M. Romieu, who seems to have been an editor in Paris, got a letter from a young lawyer which ran: "Sir, I send you with this note a ballad, which I beg you will read with great attention. If you think you can add a few words to it and they suit me I consent to accept you as a collaborateur."

The manuscript was returned with a note thus: "Sir, I have read your ballad with the greatest attention. I leave to you the choice of the weapons."

Know Not "Impossible."

Know that "impossible," where truth and mercy and the everlasting voice of nature order, has no place in the brave man's dictionary; that when all men have said "impossible" and tumbled noisily elsewhither and thou alone art left, then first thy time and possibility have come. It is for thee now; do thou that, and ask no man's counsel but thy own only and God's. Brother, thou hast possibility in thee for much; the possibility of writing on the eternal skies the record of a heroic life.—Carlyle.

Who Is to Blame?

It is a very conservative thing to say that there are four women to every man in the church membership of America. Many people are wont to lay the blame for this upon the churches. Quite a number of folks would like to lay it upon the men. Some fault the women for it. Is it not possible that the responsibility rests upon our social structure?—Bernard I. Bell in Atlantic.

Matter of Sentiment.

"What makes you go in through the kitchen?"

"I don't know your servants very well," replied Mr. Cumrox. "Someway, the front hall seems kind of formal and distant. Around at the kitchen steps they've got an old doormat with 'Welcome' on it."

Sometimes.

Willis—What is it called when two people are thinking of the same thing at the same time—mental telepathy? Gills—Sometimes; other times just plain embarrassment.

Rush Cake.

Into a sieve put one cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, pinch of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder or one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Sift twice. Add one-quarter cupful of melted lard. In the cup you have melted the lard in put one-quarter cupful of sweet milk, break in two eggs and fill the cup up with sweet milk. Pour into flour and sugar and beat five minutes. Flavor. Bake in

SPRING SALADS.

They Should Figure Largely in the Diet at This Season.

All salad greens should be thoroughly washed in cold water. If they are withered they must be soaked for a time in cold water. Then after they are washed they should be wrapped in a piece of clean gauze and placed on the ice for an hour or so. They will then be crisp and clean and appetising.

Lettuce has the approval of centuries behind its use, for it was known on the royal table of the Persians some four centuries B. C. The Greeks used lettuce, too, and it has been used in all lands and ages since then.

Endive has more and more been used of late years, and by endive we usually mean those thick, smooth leaves which grow in a stalk rather than a head.

Then there are the cresses. Watercress is the one most used. It so often appears as a garnish that some of us forget its use as a legitimate salad green. Dressed with French dressing and served very cold, broken up on lettuce, it is delicious, and mixed with other salad ingredients it is also good. Watercress, which always grows in running water, has difficulty in making its roots hold fast, and so it often rises to the top of the water. There is no more appetising occupation than to go forth in the early spring hunting fresh growing watercress, to find it in some little running stream in half timbered woods.

Great care should be taken in cleaning watercress bought in the markets because of the very fact that it does grow in running water.

Nasturtium is really one of the cresses. In England it is called Indian cress. And nasturtium ought to be seriously counted among the summer salad greens. Leaves and buds both can be used in salad to advantage, and the buds and seeds pickled are a good salad garnish all winter long.

In the spring dandelion greens, uncooked, can be used for salad. Only the freshest, smallest, and therefore tenderest leaves can be eaten uncooked, but these are not at all bitter. They can be served, with French dressing, with other salad greens.

Sorrel is a salad green that is more used nowadays than it was a few years ago—a green with a future, it seems—for those who eat it urge others to follow suit. It is a weed and can be gathered by any one energetic enough to do so, and, as most of us remember from childhood experience, it has a pungent taste that is quite refreshing.

Dainty Boudoir Pillows.

Little boudoir or slumber pillows are dainty trifles that are alluringly feminine. The daintiest pillow of all is usually placed on the bed just at the base of the bolster roll. Other pillows of cretonne to match the overdraperies or else of white over a pale tint are placed on a couch or, if one is the fortunate possessor, on a chaise longue. Place a long bolster shaped pillow along the back as a support for the smaller ones, which may be round, square, long, and narrow or heart shaped. These are extremely dainty when made of sheer material over a color, palest pink being particularly lovely To make them fine linen or voile is satisfactory and quite as effective as the more expensive batiste and handkerchief linen. These slips should always be arranged to button on, for half their charm lies in the fact that they are washable. Hand embroidery, cut work, and filet squares, one or all, are used to embellish these little slips.

Modern Venuses.

These are the training rules for the girls' basketball team at Cornell:

1. Each girl must have three regular meals a day.

2. Nothing may be eaten between meals except fruit. No candy is permissible.

3. No stimulants, such as coffee, tea, soda, etc., are to be taken. The girls may drink milk and cocoa.

4. An average of eight hours' sleep is the minimum required. After the beginning of the second term all candidates must be in bed by 10 p.m.

5. Any girl who cuts practice, except for sickness, will be dropped from the squad.

A training table has been started in both residence halls occupied by girls.

For Window Boxes.

To have sunny windows, one constant living bouquet from early summer to late fall, first soak seeds overnight in warm water—sweet peas, petunias, four-o'clocks, nasturtiums. Anything that will grow in the garden flower bed will flourish and bloom in a window box. After seeds are soaked plant in boxes in the house, keep slightly dampened until the plants are one or two inches high, then transplant to window boxes. It is not generally known, but if small bushes or slips of the crimson pink and baby rambler rose bushes are set out in window boxes in April one will be rewarded by a constant and profuse mass of small blossoms in June.

Manicuring the Nails.

First soak the finger tips in warm water; then clean in under the nails, first with the file and then with a bit of cotton rolled around the orange stick moistened and dipped in the powdered pumice. This will clean out any stains. Soak the fingers again and file the nails to the desired shape; then soak them for the last time and shove the cuticle back gently with the orange stick. Use the cuticle scissors (which should always be kept very sharp) to cut away all the loose cuticle and hang nails.

Fringe on Parasols.

Fringe trimmed parasols are being shown among the new things for spring, the fringe being of silk or worsted, fully four inches wide and in matching or brilliantly contrasting colors.

South American Hats.

Throughout the West Indies, Central and South America the native women make wonderful straw hats. The Dutch island of Curacao, near Venezuela, is famous for the exceptional women's straw hats that are there produced. Porto Rico and Cuba make excellent ones from the leaves of the palm, while Ecuador, Panama, Honduras and Peru are noted for their Panama hats.

While wealthy men have been known to pay as high as $100 for a Panama hat, such prices are decidedly unusual. Hats of the best quality, pliant and flexible so that they may be folded and carried in the pocket without injury, can be purchased for from $2 to $40, depending upon the shrewdness of the buyer and the financial needs of the maker or seller. Women and children, owing to the deftness of their fingers, make the best hats, and but few men are engaged in the industry. No factories exist for their production. As the hats are finished they are either traded to the village storekeeper for necessaries or sold to the native buyers, who send them in lots of fifty to a hundred to the merchants at the port.—W. E. Aughinbaugh in Leslie's.

Nature Worked Backward.

The following is an interesting instance of the reversal of the ordinary course of nature that cost an English market gardener dear:

Watercress is eagerly devoured by caddis worms, and caddis worms are a favorite food of trout. The trout in turn have a voracious enemy in herons, which catch the fish after they have grown fat on caddis worms. Now, in the case referred to, it happened that a large grower of watercress had three-quarters of his crop ruined by the ravages of caddis worms. On investigation it was found that the trout, which ordinarily protected the plants from the worms, had been devoured ahead of time, so to speak, by a flock of hungry herons, which, in thus reversing the course of events, had brought disaster to the owner of the watercress.

Finnish Grammar.

Finnish grammar is of a difficulty absolutely repulsive. None of the other languages of the same group is half so hard. Hungarian—nay, even Turkish, despite the vexatious initial impediment of the Arabic alphabet—is easy in comparison. The syntax is at once provokingly elaborate and perplexingly obscure. It possesses fifteen distinct cases and twenty-four differentiated infinitive forms; but, on the other hand, there is no real distinction between nouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions, infinitives and participles, so that the student must not be startled by finding infinitives regularly declined like nouns and nouns taking upon them degrees of comparison like adjectives.

Result of an Accident.

Accidents are not always misfortunes. Chemists discovered by research the process of making artificial indigo, but it was only when a thermometer broke in the solution that they found out how to make the indigo cheap enough to be commercially valuable. The mercury so increased the yield of a certain acid that the process was cheapened sufficiently to make artificial indigo less expensive than natural indigo.

Short Lived Joy.

Wife (who last week quarreled with her husband and now seeks him among his companions at the inn)—Can you forgive me, Edward?

Husband—Well, you used me very badly, but let it go. Yes.

Wife—How I thank you for taking me back! And now you're coming straight home with me! What business have you sitting here till 11 at night?

Honeymoon Over.

The honeymoon is not absolutely over until the first time a man tries to square himself with his wife by offering her a check instead of a kiss—and succeeds.—Exchange.

How Could She?

Mistress—Did you see if the butcher had pig's feet? Maid—No, ma'am, I couldn't; he had his boots on.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

After Effects of Grip.

The state board of health is advising grip sufferers to live out in the open air as much as possible in order to get rid of that pernicious disease, which, as Mr. Dooley says, makes you sick six months after you get well. "The after effects of grip," says a recent health bulletin, "is usually the worst part of the disease, and it is just this for which fresh air is both a preventive and a cure. Grip sufferers usually feel that cool moving air would be the death of them, but the trouble is they are not on good terms with fresh air and can't appreciate its good qualities. They need to cultivate its acquaintance by living in it every day, walking in it and sleeping in it at night. The saddest story connected with grip," says the bulletin, "is not that a person has the grip now, but a later story that not infrequently follows—'He never got over the effects of grip,' or 'His grip went into pneumonia or tuberculosis.' Only fresh air, sunshine, rest and good food taken in time will prevent this sad story."

The attendance the first year of the Canadian National Exhibition was 101,000. It ran three weeks. Last year there was a daily average attendance of 72,000 for 12 days, a total of 864,000.

Won by a Bluff.

When the armies of Napoleon were overrunning Europe, General Massena, with 18,000 men, suddenly appeared before the Austrian town of Feldkirch and demanded its surrender. Instead of complying, the burgomaster issued orders that the church bells were to be set ringing and that the burghers, their wives and daughters, clad in holiday attire, were to assemble in the market square and there make merry.

The result was exactly what he had hoped for. Massena heard the sounds of rejoicing, watched from the heights overlooking the town the gathering throngs in the streets and came to the conclusion that the townsfolk must have received intelligence that the Austrian army, which was believed to be somewhere in the vicinity, was advancing to their relief.

As to give battle there and then formed no part of Napoleon's general plan of action, Massena ordered a retreat. Feldkirch was saved, and by a bluff, for as a matter of fact no relieving force was anywhere near at the time.

Coming and Going.

One afternoon a cast down hobo timidly knocked on the door of a suburban home, and when the owner of the house appeared he meekfully asked for bread.

"I see," responded the proprietor, critically sizing up the tramp, "that the knees of your trousers are badly worn."

"Yes, sir," answered the hobo, in a subdued voice. "I wore them through kneeling in prayer."

A few minutes later the tramp was handed his fodder, and with many thanks he turned and started toward the gate.

"Just a moment," exclaimed the proprietor. "I notice that your trousers are also pretty badly worn in the back."

"Yes, sir," responded the tramp, steering for the gate. "I did that backsliding."

Giant and Dwarf Honeybees.

In some of the East Indian islands and on the mainland of Hindustan are to be found the smallest species of honeybees in the world. These dwarf honey collectors are known to entomologists as Apis florea. Their honeycombs are no larger than a child's hand, and the cells are about the size of a small pinhead. This honey is excellent, as is the wax. The little creatures build the comb in the branch of a low tree, and as they have not to provide for winter, they work all the year through, raising broods like themselves.

In the same land there is a species of giant bees, Apis dorsata, as large as a field cricket. These monsters of the bee world build honeycombs that are from six to seven feet in length, four or more in width and weigh from 300 to 400 pounds each.

Blotted Out "Lord Penn."

The first book of any kind published in Philadelphia was Atkin's Almanack for the year 1686. It was an unpaged pamphlet of ten leaves, only two copies of which are now known to be in existence. The first copy of the Almanack printed was sent to Colonel Markham, Penn's deputy, who reported to the council that the book had erroneously declared Pennsylvania to have been founded by "Lord Penn." The council disapproved such a high sounding title and directed the author and printer (William Bradford) to "forthwith and effectually blott out ye words 'Lord Penn.'" This had the effect of recalling the whole edition and the abolition of the obnoxious words.

Homely Philosophy.

Don't build your house on the site of Tribulation Town and then growl when the hurricane sweeps it away.

The minute we think we're overstocked with wisdom it's high time to ask the good Lord to give us some.

When we hang out the trouble sign that's the time all the little troubles locate us and crowd in to give us all that's coming to us.

No Oratorio.

"A young bookkeeper attended a pupils' recital in greater Boston and was questioned next day by a musician as to the program. "Good music, eh?" "Oh, yes; fine!" "Popular stuff or classical?" "Oh, all classics." "Any oratorio?" "Oh, no; no oratorio, all music."

Discretion.

Though a man has all other perfections and wants discretion, he will be of no great consequence in the world, but if he has this single talent in perfection and but a common share of others he may do what he pleases in his particular station of life.—Addison.

Suitable.

"Can't you give me a position in your bank, Mr. Jiggs?"

"I don't know but what you might qualify as teller, Miss Gossip," retorted the brute.

Somber Reflection.

"Biggins insists on being the life of the party."

"Yes," commented Miss Cayenne, "and life is sometimes such a sad thing."

Complete.

Knicker—Is the car equipment complete? Bocker—Yes, it even includes letter forms for putting off the grocer and butcher.

Apologies only account for what they do not alter.—Disraeli.

In the first few years of the Canadian National Exhibition the bulk of the crowds were carried to the grounds by ferries running into Dufferin Street slip.

CHINESE PRINTING.

Queer Old Ancient Methods Are Still Used by Many Natives.

Chinese hold that the art of printing was discovered in China about fifty years before the Christian era. Until the discovery of the art of paper making, A. D. 95, they printed on silk or cloth cut in the form of leaves. The method employed to this day by many native Chinese printers is substantially as follows:

No printing press is used. The delicate nature of the Chinese paper will not admit of it. When the blocks are engraved, the paper is cut and the ink is ready one man with his brush prints a large number of sheets in a day. The block to be printed must be placed perfectly level and secured firmly. The printer has two brushes, one of them stiffer than the other, which he can hold in his hand and use at either end. He dips it into the ink and rubs the block with it, taking care not to moisten it too much or leave it too dry. If it were wetted too much the characters would be blurred; if too little they would not print.

When once the block is got into the proper condition he can print three or four impressions without dipping the brush into the ink again.

The second brush is used to rub over the paper with a small degree of pressure that it may take the impression. This it does easily, for, not being sized with alum, it receives the ink the instant it comes in contact with it.

It is only necessary that the brush should be passed over every part of the sheet with a greater or smaller degree of pressure and repeated in proportion as the printer finds there is more or less ink upon the block

THREE RACIAL INSTINCTS.

One Reason, Perhaps, For the Interest Taken in Baseball.

How shall we explain the absorbing interest in baseball and football? In baseball we have a game combining three of the most deep seated racial instincts—the instinct to throw, to run and to strike. During untold periods of the life history of our race survival has come to him who could throw the straightest, run the swiftest and strike the hardest. To throw something at something is almost as natural for a boy as to breathe.

Throwing, batting, running, are no longer of any service in this age of mind, but they were the conditions of survival in the distant past. Baseball reinstates those ancient attitudes and brings a thrill of cherished memories. Any one who has ever held a bat in hand and assumed the expectant attitude of the batter knows the peculiar thrill which is explained only by recalling that his distant ancestors in just that attitude beat down with a real club many an opposing foe, whether man or beast, and those who held clubs in this position and struck hard quickly survived and transmitted this instinct.

The awkward throw of girls, like the left arm throw of boys, is widely known. The plays of girls reveal their own set of instincts recalling the habits of primitive. "We are the descendants of those men who could throw and those women who loved children." —From "The Psychology of Relaxation," by G. T. W. Patrick.

No Sympathy.

What's the proper age to fall in love? If you're under forty you're a young fool, and if you're over forty you're an old fool.

No Pedestal For Him.

"Whatever you do," said Senator Sorghum to his faithful campaign assistant, "don't let my friends overdo it in representing me as a great and lofty figure. Don't let them put me on a pedestal."

"What's the matter with a pedestal?"

"I have been studying the statuary in the park. Putting a man on a pedestal generally means that he'll have to stay out in the cold by himself."

Kissing In Iceland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Iceland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will. If it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

Right In His Line.

"Need any more talent for your moving picture dramas?"

"We might be able to use you. Have you had any experience at acting without audiences?"

"Acting without audiences is what brought me here."

Neglected.

Smitty (taking his watch from under his pillow)—Quarter to 8 and no one has come to wake me yet. I shall certainly be late for class if they don't come soon.

His Testimonial.

Ananias—Is the Junction House a good hotel? Job—Why, I wouldn't even lodge a complaint there.—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

Some people are so fond of ill luck that they run halfway to meet it.—Douglas Jerrold.

The Man Cure.

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, said in an after dinner address in Brooklyn:

"A modern girl, one of those pretty, vote chasing, athletic modern girls who ride astride, swim in men's swimming suits, smoke cigarettes and read Wells and Shaw—a modern girl of this type repined one day at a tea because she could not be an aviator in the army.

"'Oh,' she sighed, blowing a cloud of cigarette smoke from her pretty lips—'oh, if heaven had only made me a man!'

"'Heaven did, my dear,' said a placid matron, 'and you'll find him some day, and then all this new thought nonsense of yours will cease forever.'"

Hippocratic Face.

The hippocratic face is a condition of the human face produced by death, long illness, excessive hunger and the like. The nose is pinched, the temples hollow, the eyes sunken, the ears cold and retracted, the skin of the forehead dry, the complexion livid and the lips relaxed with cold. This appearance is so named from having been accurately described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine.

London's "Penny Situps."

Some of the cheap lodging houses in London are called "penny situps." They provide mere benches, with wooden backs. Each lodger places his arms on the back of the bench before him and then, resting his head on his arms, tries to sleep.

No Danger of That.

Mrs. Stubbs—John, no true man will smoke up his wife's curtains. Mr. Stubbs—I should say not. Anybody that smokes curtains would be a freak.

Forcing Flower Seeds.

It is a help to soak all hard seeds, such as sweet peas, nasturtiums, balsams, moonflower, etc., at least twelve hours and to file especially large seeds, such as canna and moonflower. This is done by rubbing the sharpest end (or any part away from the germ) over a file, just enough to have the white show. Filing must be done before soaking. Sweet peas may be soaked three or four days.

Another way to hurry coarse, slow to germinate seeds is to force between canton flannel. Take double pieces of canton flannel, wet thoroughly, place seeds between them and put in a warm place. Keep cloths moist all the time, and seeds will sprout in from one to three days. Transfer carefully to the ground with the root sprout down. —Farm and Home.

Composition of an Army.

In the United States an army is made up as follows: One hundred men constitute a company, four companies a battalion, three battalions a regiment, three regiments a brigade and from three to four brigades a division, although we have no division classified as such in our army.

In Germany and Great Britain there are about 20,000 men in a division and 40,000 in an army corps. In the German organization a division of infantry is made up of two brigades, a brigade of two regiments, a regiment of six battalions. A cavalry division is composed of three brigades of two regiments each and two or three batteries of horse artillery.

Mythology of Dragons.

The mythology of dragons is immensely mixed. The one thing certain seems to be that of the many writers who describe them not one ever saw them. Many of the descriptions come nearer to a winged crocodile than any thing else, and the conjecture that the dragon idea was developed from some tradition of an extinct saurian seems probable. In the gypsy lore of southeastern Europe the "drakos" becomes the ogre of the nursery. He takes a human wife, hunts, is an expert in horseflesh and lives, of course, in a palace. Andrew Lang pointed out that the modern Greek story of "the last Drakos" is the same as that told in Scotland of "the last Pict."

A Simple Matter.

"So you are in the market for an automobile?"

"Yes," said the man who likes to attract attention.

"Any particular make?"

"No. I merely want one that will make people turn around and stare at me when I pass."

"Oh, you don't need a special type for that. Get an ordinary car and exceed the speed limit."

[illegible] of Poverty.

A negro with a bad cut in his head came to a doctor. The doctor fixed him up, and as the man was about to depart the physician said: "That's a pretty bad cut in your head, Henry. Why don't you profit by this lesson and keep out of bad company in the future?"

"Well, I should like to, doctor," replied Henry sadly, "but, you see, I ain't got no money to get er divorce."

One Exception.

"No man can be always guarded in his conduct."

"I know of one class of men who can."

"Where are they?"

"In the penitentiary."

Pretty Poor.

Hicks—Bluffer is talking of purchasing an automobile. Wicks—Bluffer! Why, he couldn't buy a charge of ammunition for an air gun!

Too Much.

In a certain city the street car system is operated on the policy that the passenger is always right, and it seems to work to the advantage of the company. A man, woman and a boy, plainly of fare age boarded a pay-as-you-enter car. Father handed the conductor a dime and started for a seat.

"How about the child?" asked the conductor politely.

Father reached in his pocket for another fare and as he offered it to the conductor remarked:

"I never have paid for him."

"How old is he?" asked the conductor.

"Not quite five."

"I beg your pardon," replied the conductor. "I thought he was past six. If you say he is not five I cannot accept a fare for him."

Father returned the money to his pocket and sat down, with a flushed face, realizing the polite conductor had given him the worst of it.

"Well," remarked father to mother, "I guess we will pay for William after this."

Stamp Collecting.

In 1847 the island of Mauritius issued two varieties of stamps—one in red at a penny, the other blue at twopence. Of these only some twenty or so are known to be in existence, and within recent years two pairs of red and blue sold respectively for £680 and £1,921. Stamp collecting is necessarily a modern hobby, and it would be difficult now to trace it to its source. Some say that the hobby was of English origin and spread to the continent; others declare that it came to us from Belgium. The first note on the subject in Notes and Queries appeared in June, 1860, when Mr. Cresswell, a Tunbridge schoolmaster, communicating—as something new—the fact that a boy in his form had collected between 300 and 400 different specimens. In 1864 a provincial paper referred laughingly to a collector who advertised his collection for sale at £200, adding, "We only wish he may get it."—London Standard.

A Long Lived Eagle.

It has been a tradition from time immemorial that the eagle renews its strength when very old. It mounts aloft until it comes very near the sun, when, scorched by the heat, it throws itself into the sea, whence it emerges full of renewed vigor.

Such have supposed that the passage in Psalms ciii, 5, "Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's," alludes to this old fable. But the more probable fact is that it refers to the strength and vigor which characterize the eagle even in old age.

A couple of years ago a large specimen of eagle was shot on the fjord by the city of Nakskov, Denmark. Around its neck was fastened a small chain to which was attached a sealed bottle. On opening the bottle a note was found written in Danish, which translated reads as follows: "Caught and again made free by N. and C. Anderson in the year 1792."

Pain and Appendicitis.

That pain at what doctors call "McBurney's point" is not, as generally believed, proof of appendicitis was demonstrated before a Texan medical society recently by Dr. P. L. Nixon of San Antonio in an address published in the Medical Record.

Dr. Nixon told the history of several cases in which operation proved the diagnosis of appendicitis to have been erroneous and of one in which an exploratory operation proved appendicitis to be the trouble when there was no pain over McBurney's point. This is situated low down on the right side of the abdomen.

It takes a combination of several different symptoms together to warrant a certain diagnosis of appendicitis.

Canadian Mentions the Dropping Bomb as Mere Incident to Betting During Game

LONDON, July 22.—A letter from the Canadians' front line says: "There are hundreds of prisoners coming through here every day. They are put into big wire encolsures until trains can take them back. I saw about three hundred officers and men yesterday. It reminded me of a big stock-yard, officers in one corall, men in the other. They wandered aimlessly about the enclosure just like I have seen cattle doing at home. Our doctors were dressing wounds of prisoners hit. There is one young officer who at a distance is the very image of little Willie. For sure they got well fed and looked after. The incessant rear of guns has almost become necessary to us now. We would wonder what had happened if they stopped. We thought one day our chance had come, as we were right up behind our trenches waiting all day, with saddles on, ready to move in five minutes. But the time was not yet. Where we halted was in a valley, with guns on every side. I have never been among such noise! Our poor horses for the first hour did not know what was happening. The firing kept up all day. Before we came away the horses had got quite used to it. I and four others in the afternoon were having a little session. I held four sixes and had just made it two francs to draw cards when an anti-aircraft shell whizzed down a few yards off. I hunched my shoulders and bet five francs, which made them all quit but one. He raised me five and I saw him. He had four nines. We live in the open absolutely; sleeping on the ground, having the sky as a roof. Everyone seems more contented and bright."

Trap Shooting In Canada

Alfred Hewett is Backing Plans for Association That Will Promote Interesting Events

Although at this time Canada has not organized trapshooting upon a Provincial or Dominion scope, this is likely to happen in the very near future.

Alfred Hewett, secretary of the Dominion of Canada Game protective and Trapshooting Association, is working the Province and later in the Dominion as a whole, and it is certain that something good will result from his efforts.

The great distance between the trapshooting centres in Canada makes it difficult to hold tournaments which are representative. However, this may be overcome by systematic provincial organization.

It is the ambition of Mr. Hewett to hold provincial registered tournaments each year, corresponding to the State shoots in the United States. Then there could be a Dominion championship, staged at some central point, and somewhat along the lines of the Grand American Tournament.

Instead, it is possible that either the winners of the Provincial championships or the Dominion title will be sent to the Grand American to compete for the Amateur Championship. In any event, Canada is almost certain to have a Dominion amateur champion this year, and possibly this man will appear at St. Louis to contest with the best shots in the United States.

Building 12 Like Deutschland

Three Underseas Merchantmen Are Ready — Prince Henry of Prussia at Farewell

AMSTERDAM, July 22.—Through the agency of one who was present at the launching of the Deutschland, I learn that the occasion was severely private, only a few of the leading commercial shipping men and a few selected friends being present. Prince Henry, of Prussia, was sent to attend the launching by the Kaiser and to make a speech to the assembled guests.

The Prince, who appeared to be most cheerful and optimistic, endeavored to inspire his hearers with hope and confidence, said: "With the launching of the Bremen and the Deutschland we have made a beginning in the great work of renewing, restoring and enlarging Germany's oversea trade. Though this is but a comparatively small beginning, I can promise you the enlargement of the new fleet will be rapid and that the extension of the scope of its enterprises will take place. Indeed, you may confidently expect great developments. We have now begun to show all the world that Germany's merchant marine, which already has made great progress, is in such hands that it cannot now be beaten out of the field of world wide commerce."

It is said that three such boats as the Deutschland already have been built and that twelve more are in various stages of construction.

Great Changes Around Soho

Belgians Have Replaced Germans and Austrians—Foreign Quarter Becomes Pro-Ally

LONDON, July 22.—Changed in many ways is London since the war began, but nowhere is the transformation more marked than in the cosmopolitan district called Soho, in the West End, within a stone's throw of Piccadilly Circus. Soho is not the hustling, merry place of pre-war days. The great conflict has made it quiet, almost lifeless, for Frenchmen, Belgians, Italians, Germans and Austrians who had their home in Soho have gone.

The change is even more pronounced in Charlotte Street. The German chemists, German laundries, German restaurants, Germans clubs and German paper shops have gone. There was even a Christliches Kellherheim (a home for Christian waiters). It is closed now; there are no German waiters. German books have been moved from the booksellers' windows; German signs have disappeared and certain shopkeepers are at pains to announce that they are French or Belgian firms.

The Belgians have lost their country for the moment, but they have taken their revenge in Charlotte Street. There is no gainsaying their victory there. Instead of the cafes and restaurants with German signs there are establishments named after Belgian towns. And in them may be seen Belgian soldiers on leave drinking coffee.

Snails Very Nutritious.

"All snails are edible and nutritious," says Canon Hersley in a book on British land and fresh water molluscs. He goes on to say that even the common or garden snail, though insipid, is as nourishing as calf's foot jelly.

There is a large white shelled snail called Helix pomatia that is commonly eaten by connoisseurs in the south of England, while all over France, Italy and Spain several species are used as food. In France are many small farms which yield a good profit to their owners. In the French and Italian quarters of New York snails may be bought either alive or cooked, and at most of the French restaurants they are served, "escargots farcis" being the most usual form of dish.

Snails are easy to raise in large quantities. They need lime for making their shells, but they do not have to be fed, as they can find their own food, which is exclusively the leaves of many plants. They are most delicious when properly prepared and cooked, and, as Canon Hersley says, as nourishing as calf's foot jelly.

The Shadow of Happiness.

How shall I find a name for that subtle feeling which seized hold upon me this morning, in the twilight of waking? It was a reminiscence, charming indeed, but nameless, vague and featureless, like the figure of a woman seen for an instant by a sick man in the uncertainty of delirium and across the shadows of his darkened room. I had a distinct sense of a form which I had seen somewhere and which had moved and charmed me once and then had fallen back with time into the catacombs of oblivion. But all the rest was confused—place, occasion and the figure itself, for I saw neither the face nor the expression. The whole was like a fluttering veil, under which the enigma—the secret of happiness—might have been hidden. And I was awake enough to be sure it was not a dream. —Henri Frederic Amiel.

Defoe and Savings Banks.

Though Duncan of Duthwell was the founder of our first savings bank, the first suggestion came from Daniel Defoe. When he found himself compelled to hide from the bailiffs in a small Bristol inn he turned his enforced leisure and financial failure to account by writing the "Essay on Projects." It deals with savings banks, friendly societies, insurance, academies and bankrupts. On all these subjects Defoe offers from his fertile brain suggestions that startle the reader by their modern ring. On bankrupts and savings banks Defoe naturally wrote with feeling. During his stay in Bristol he was known as "the Sunday gentleman" owing to his natural unwillingness to take the air except on that day of the week which deprived bailiffs of their sting

PRISONER IN GERMANY

Pte. Fred Mott, No. 113410, 4th C.M.R., 3rd Canadian Division, reported missing since 2nd of June, is now reported prisoner of war at Stuttard. Word to this effect was received at Campbellford last week.

Pte. Mott enlisted with the 33rd Battery, Kingston, last August, was drafted to the 8th C.M.R. in October and went overseas to Bramshott Camp in January. He was drafted to the 4th C.M.R. and sent to France, thence to Belgium. He is nineteen years of age and only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mott, formerly of Belleville, now of Campbellford.

Anonymous Shakespeare.

Margaret Anglin had been playing Viola, Katharine and other Shakespearean heroines in the great theater at Melbourne, Australia, which had been crowded to the roof at every performance. But the time came to move on to a smaller city with a less sophisticated population, and her manager was assailed by doubts. He did not think Shakespeare would do. He proposed confining the repertory to modern plays. When she remonstrated he explained:

"They want to laugh."

"Then why not 'The Taming of the Shrew?'" Miss Anglin suggested.

He hesitated. Despair had him, but finally he replied: "Oh, well, we'll try it, but we mustn't let them know who wrote it."

"I had forgotten this incredible remark," says Miss Anglin, "until I arrived in the city to play, and there, to my horror, everywhere advertising was displayed announcing blithely that Miss Anglin would appear in a comedy 'The Taming of the Shrew, by Immortal Bard.'".

The Tale of a Dime.

The woman slipped a dime into the glove on her left hand. She would be at the subway in a moment, and the dime so placed would facilitate matters. As she entered the station the ring of a coin as it struck the pavement reached her ears. She saw a dime rolling at her feet.

A fat man also heard and saw it. Both stopped to pick it up. She was first. His hand only fanned the dust from the sidewalk.

"I beg your pardon," he said as he straightened up, rather red in the face.

"Not at all," she said. "I thank you for your courtesy." Then she hurried downstairs.

Seated in the train, her gloved hand involuntarily went up to her hair. A dime dropped into her lap. Then she understood.—Youth's Companion.

Infinitives Fearlessly Split.

The English of Henry James is remarkable not only for adverbs, but, like Robert Browning's, for infinitives fearlessly split. Most people split them by wedging in one word only, an adverb. But Henry James split one infinitive, at any rate, by four words interpolated, thus: "I have already missed my time to so much even as name properly," etc. Nor did he hesitate to stop upon that half of the infinitive which closes so many women's pretty phrase in accepting invitations, "Oh, thank you; I should love to." Henry James wrote, "We can't not accept this, and little enough on the whole do we want to." "Can't not," by the way, is very common in French, and other peculiarities of James' style also are Gallicisms.—London Chronicle.

Different Style.

Edward, aged six, was sent to a barber shop to get his hair cut. The barber who was assigned to the job had red hair.

"Would you like to have your hair cut like mine?" asked the barber.

"No, sir," answered Edward. "Cut it some other color, please.".

Filial Repartee.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who was always distressed for money, was one day hacking his face with a dull razor when he turned to his eldest son and said:

"Tom, if you open any more oysters with my razor I'll cut you off with a shilling."

"Very well, father," said Tom, "but where will you get the shilling?"

SNEEZING OMENS.

At One Time to Sneeze Was Regarded as a Death Warrant.

Sneezing from very remote times has been regarded with superstition.

Our forefathers went to bed again if they sneezed while putting on their shoes. A sneeze to the right was deemed lucky; to the left, of evil portent. To sneeze near a burial place was very unlucky.

Tradition has it that sneezing was at first a fatal sign—every human being sneezed but once and then died—but Jacob petitioned the Creator to remove the sneezing ban and succeeded. Thence arose the once universal custom of saluting a sneezer with "God bless you!" or "May you live long!" The custom still obtains in some parts of Europe.

In England not only was a sneezer blessed, but friends raised their hats to him as well. In an old book, "The Code of Conduct," it is directed that "if his lordship sneezes ye are not to bawl out, 'God bless you!' but bow to him handsomely." All over the world the sneeze was recognized. Whole nations were under orders to make exclamations when their king sneezed.

Sneezing was believed to be a sure cure for hiccough and was also looked upon as a sign of sanity. If ancient and universal belief goes for anything it is good to sneeze.—London Telegraph.

WHEN WORK BECOMES PLAY.

The Secret of Contentment Is Found In Proper Employment.

A philosopher once said that "no man properly employed was ever miserable." And a more truthful statement was never made.

To be properly employed one must be engaged in a business in which he has faith and confidence and for which he has respect. If he doubts the legitimacy of the business, if he must resort to practices which he feels are questionable, if he isn't proud of his occupation, he is not properly employed. If the work he is given to perform palls upon him, if he feels that he ought to be doing something else, if he envies the other employee his place in the shop or factory, then the work deadens and destroys, and misery follows.

The writers got things balled up when they talked about work and play. Too great a distinction was drawn. Play was pictured as something that gave happiness and work as something which one performed only because he was hungry.

The truth is, it is all play or ought to be, for the man who is properly employed is only engaged in playing. He gets as much delight from it as he formerly got from the childish games or should. Certainly there can be no misery where a man has found his work.

Knew Just How.

Many years ago in Paris, at the first presentation of a tragedy that had for its closing scene the murder of a Swedish king which had taken place nearly half a century earlier, all went well till the murder scene came on, when a very dignified old gentleman in the stage box called out angrily:

"Absurd! They've got it all wrong!"

The manager himself heard this plain spoken comment, and, being naturally disturbed by so sweeping a condemnation, he sought out the critic and politely begged to know what fault he had to find with it.

"Why, my good sir," cried the old man, with an air of authority, "the whole grouping of the scene is incorrect! You have made them kill the king to the right of the door, whereas we murdered him on the left!"

Recipe For Troubles.

Would you like a recipe for the little vexations and annoyances of life that keep the mind uneasy and disturbed? Let us give you one. Go out in the silence of some starry night and look up at the stars for a minute or two. Get within their influence for a moment. Take in the spirit of their tranquility and peace. Think what they are and where they are, and you will soon lose yourself in the infinity of their being. You will begin to feel God has made this world big enough for you and that the little cares that vex you are only intruders that you should despise and scorn. Just try it, and if it does not cure you you are not the man you think you are.

Why We Have Two Eyes.

Because we have two eyes the things we see seem solid and not flat, with the result that we can judge their distance from us with fair correctness. Look through a window at a house across the street with one eye closed and then with the other eye closed. The bars of the window frame will cut across the opposite house in different places. The two fields seen with the eyes separately, although in the main alike, differ. When you look at the house with both eyes open the two fields seen by the two eyes are combined and the house across the street assumes depth and relief. Although we see a house with each eye, we see only one house with both eyes. This makes the stereoscope possible—an instrument so designed that the two eyes are made to converge on a single point and yet to see two different pictures. If these two pictures represent a chair as it would appear to the right and left eyes respectively they are perceived as one solid object.—Popular Science Monthly.

Needed No Hints.

A man from the backwoods visited New York for the first time and went into a restaurant to have his dinner.

All went well until the waiter brought him a napkin. The eyes of the backwoodsman flamed, and, pulling a six shooter from his hip pocket, he told the waiter his mind.

"You take that blamed thing away at once," he said evenly. "I reckon I know when to use a handkerchief without having them darned hints thrown out."

Order of the Golden Fleece.

The Order of the Golden Fleece was instituted by Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, in 1429, on account, it is said, of the profit he made in the wool trade. The original number of knights was thirty-one. At the end of the collar was hung a golden fleece. The order finally became common to all the princes of the house of Austria and now belongs to both Austria and Spain. In fact, its membership includes royal personages from many lands, and the order is practically as wide as royalty itself.

Legend of Hapsburg Castle.

According to legend, the ancient castle of Hapsburg, overlooking the Rhine, was founded in 1020 and was without surrounding walls for defensive purposes, a strange omission in those warlike days. A friend coming to stay at the castle so greatly deplored the absence of the usual defenses that its lord declared that before sunrise on the following morning his stronghold would be surrounded by impregnable walls. Naturally the visitor smiled, and did not believe that this thing could come to pass, but in the early morning he was awakened by the lord of the castle, who bade him look out upon the walls. He had kept his promise, but in an unexpected way. Instead of seeing a surrounding wall made of stone, the visitor saw an unbroken circle of the lord's followers, all in their armor and bearing weapons. And it has since been the boast of the Hapsburgs that the family's devoted subjects were sufficient defense in no matter what emergency.

Effect of Cold on the Senses.

An explorer who took part in an antarctic expedition states that the most remarkable effect of the cold which he noticed was the loss of sense and touch in the fingers. It was almost complete.

"Suppose you wanted to look for a knife in your kit bag. You would put your hand in and feel round for it, and you would actually have it in your hand and not know. It was the same with everything we handled. We saw that we picked it up and saw that we held the article; we could not feel that we had it."

He added that it was not possible to shave, because the skin became irritated and sore, while if the beard became too long it became moist and then froze into a block. The only thing to do was to keep the beard and mustache clipped close.

Ax Head Money.

In olden times money was sometimes made in the shape of ax heads. So that if a man wished to buy a house he would offer for it so many gold axes, so many silver axes and so many bronze axes, just as we today deal with gold, silver and copper money. Dr. Schliemann found many of these silver axes in the ruins of Troy, and bronze ax heads have been found in many old ruins. After the ax head had disappeared as actual money the memory of it was preserved in the coins of Tenedos, which bore the figure of an ax head. Dr. Gotze also suggested that the "wedge of gold" which Achan stole from the spoils of Jericho and for the stealing of which Joshua had him stoned to death was a specimen of the ancient ax head money.

Dresden China.

It is to Frederick Bottger, a native of Saxony—1682-1719—that we owe the secret of making china or porcelain. It was in 1710 that a lucky accident revealed to Bottger the true nature of the required paste. Having noticed the unusual weight of some hair powder, he inquired what it was made of and found that it was a finely powdered clay from Aue. He forthwith procured some of the clay, made vessels of it and, to his infinite delight, learned that he had at last found the very material he wanted. In a word, he had made the discovery of porcelain.

To Win Notice.

DESERTERS OF THE KEY

Tells Why Telegraph Operators Become Railroad Presidents

(New York Sun.)

Why do telegraph operators become railroad presidents? The question forces itself upon the mind through the reiteration of facts. As often as we read that the winds will be moderate and southerly, and that Villa is dead, just so often do we read that the new head of the so and so railroad began his business career as a sender of Morse messages. Bernet of the Nickel Plate, Calvin of the Union Pacific, Levey of the Western Pacific, these are three of this summer's crop of presidents who went, as a railroad poet might say, from the sounder to the sceptre. The list of distinguished railroad presidents of these and older days is full of operators: Van Horne of the Canadian Pacific, Hughitt of the North Western, Newman and Brown of the New York Central, McCrea of the Pennsylvania, Hayes of the Grand Trunk, Tuttle and Todd of certain New England lines.

How telegraph operators become railway presidents would be easy to tell. Your operator hears everything, knows everything, does everything. He is aware how far a division superintendent may go in spirited debate, by wire, with the general manager. He comes to know upon what days the chief despatcher is afflicted with tantrums. He flags the night express on the bring of the washout, supplies the jolly brakeman from his own paper of fine cut, chops Mrs Jone's telegram to ten words, fills the station stove, figures transmississippi freight rates, sells excursion tickets and has an eye for the ladies. On Sunday afternoons, between the 2.45 and the 5.58, he plays first base on the town nine. Thus he acquires a rounded life, with the wisdom of near and far. Presently the boss of the division takes him into his own office and his doom is written. Nothing but the scythe or the bottle can prevent him from becoming president of the road.

Hoosier Singer Dies From Heat

James Whitcomb Riley's End Comes Peacefully at Home Many Fine Tributes

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24— Special —James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet and friend of the children, died about 11 o'clock last night as a direct result of a heat attack suffered earlier in the day.

The poet appeared to have recovered late in the evening, and his physicians gave out the statement at the time that there was nothing alarming in his condition. Later, however, the patient weakened and sank rapidly until the end came.

A Fine Talker.

"I like the looks of this parrot," said the lady who had stepped into the bird store. "Is he a good talker?" The proprietor replied that the bird was an excellent talker, and it was evident the customer was favorably impressed.

"What is your price for him?" she asked.

The man had noticed the rich apparel worn by his customer, and he judged that there was a chance to make a little "easy money" at the expense of one who would never miss it.

"Ten dollars," he said, with just the slightest possible hesitation.

"Five dollars, madam," instantly croaked the parrot.

The lady looked at the proprietor, who had turned red.

"He certainly is a fine talker," she said, "and he also seems to have good sense. I am willing to take him at his own valuation. Do I get him for that?"

"You do," answered the bird man sadly.

Ancient Corfu.

The island of Corfu claims a maritime history antedating that of Athens. According to tradition, this was the land of the Phaecians, and here Ulysses landed in the course of his wanderings, and on this sea shore that delightful story had its setting, which Homer tells, of how the hero received much needed hospitality and kindness at the hands of Nausicaa, the daughter of King Alcinous—perhaps the most beautiful episode in all the "Odyssey." Indeed to this day two islands close to the shores of Corfu dispute the honor of being the ship of Ulysses turned into stone.

Electrical Oscillations.

Hertz years ago first produced rapid electrical oscillations and showed that they traveled through space with the speed of light and reappeared as electrical oscillations and sparks in suitably arranged conductors at a distance. Starting with waves twenty feet long in air and oscillating 50,000,000 times a second, he worked down to waves one-tenth as long and ten times as rapid.

Officer Became Crazed, Killed His Men

Tragic Episode Connected With Destruction of German Work —Half Defenders Slain

PARIS, July 24.—(Special.)— The destruction of a German fortified work on the Somme front was marked by a tragic episode, says La Liberte. The order was given to destroy the fort at whatever cost. In less than six hours more than 2,500 great shells were fired at it, and the defences gave way one by one in a cloud of dust and smoke. The infantry then went forward and the German positions were conquered.

French artillery officers, examining the ruins, discovered amid a mass of debris a Bavarian officer with his chest crushed and at the point of death. At sight of the French officers, the Bavarian seemed to collect himself, then began to speak softly, the Frenchmen kneeling about him.

The story told by the Bavarian, and later recounted by an artillery officer, was to the effect that 32 men had occupied the work. After the bombardment had continued for a time, half of the men were victims of an awful death. Two were decapitated; and of three others, near whom a shell exploded, not a vestige remained. The survivors crouched at the bottom of the subterranean shelters and awaited their fate.

Another terrific explosion occurred, the men being thrown together in a confused heap. Almost immediately flames shot up from the underground cavern. There was a moment of indescribable terror, for now fire was ravaging the work. The lieutenant in command went mad and shouted wildly at imaginary enemies. Then,, in the sinisteir glare of the flames the officer set furiously upon his men, killing one after another, and was himself burned to death.

The Bavarian determined not to die by the hand of his chief and scaled the ruins, clinging to a slope of the work, only to be buried under a bock of stone. He died soon after the French officers found him, in the hospital to which they carried him.

Bomb Outrage In San Francisco

Set on Market Street and Left to Unchain Death and Destruction

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—Special—During the preparation for a celebration Saturday afternoon, San Francisco was made the scene of one of the most terrible bomb outrages since the Haymarket riots of Chicago. The city is stunned by the mad act of a man who set an infernal machine at the crowded corner of Stuart and Market Streets, and left it to unchain death and destruction.

Seven were killed and forty men, women and children were injured when the bomb exploded at 2.06 o'clock.

There is no trace of the man who left the timed explosive, sheltered in a cheap suitcase, by the side of the marchers.

The outrage is laid at the door of the foreign anarchists who have been sending out threatening and warning letters in connection with the "anti-militaristic" propaganda. The police department and other agencies are working with energy to find the guilty ones, for the crime has roused San Francisco as nothing has done in years.

PRESENT BRITISH DRIVE DESIGNATED TEMPORARY PUSH

REAL DRIVE NEXT YEAR

Statement Made That Present British Offensive is But a Temporary Push

Canadian Press Special.

NEW YORK, July 25.—The Herald tells of a letter just received in Washington from a high official of the British Government, which says the present Allied drive on the western front is only a temporary push. The real drive will come before April or May next year. "We are just blooding the new army, killing plenty of Germans in the effort, and gaining ground. By next year we shall have a million or more seasoned men who will know what war is.'"

Hay All In They Enroll at Once For War

Crop Off, Father and Two Sons Ready — Cumberland Youth Tells Similar Story

OTTAWA, July 24.—The right stuff and the right spirit were manifested this morning when Mr. Ladoucer, a husky farmer on the Merivale road, walked into the headquarters of the 207th on Metcalfe street, and announced that he and his two sons would finish their haying to-night and they were all coming tomorrow to enlist.

The offer was made of a motor car to bring them in to-morrow, but he replied that this was not necessary, as they would get in all right. Mr. Ladoucer was in the G.G.F.G. for a number of years, and also in the battery at Kingston.

A few minutes later Charles Holmes of Cumberland, a lad just eighteen, walked in with the same story—haying over, and he wanted to join the 207th.

This is just the spirit that the recruiting officers were confident would be shown by the farmers and farmers' sons in the country around Ottawa. They are strong, vigorous men who make good soldiers, and as the busy summer operations on the farm are completed, they will, it is believed, join the colors in large numbers, and help finish the big job now so well started at the front. The 207th has a good many men from the farms already, and it will welcome as many more as will come along.

ELEPHANT TOOK A RAMBLE

TORONTO, July 24.—One of the elephants of the Coop and Lent circus got away from his stable at Dufferin Park Saturday night, and before being captured caused much damage to lawns and flower beds in the neighborhood. The elephant refused to accompany his keeper and it was only after one of the animal's mates had been brought to his side that he consented to the return trip.

DANISH WEST INDIES ARE PURCHASED BY UNITED STATES

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Special—A special despatch to The Public Ledger from Copenhagen says: A treaty for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States has been negotiated between the Governments of Denmark and the United States, and in the near future is to be submitted to the Senate and House of the United States and to the two Houses of he Danish Parliament for approval, according to information given your correspondent yesterday in Copenhagen by the highest official authority. If the treaty is ratified as it stands "in project" form to-day, the United States will pay for the islands $25,000,000, and in addition will relinquish to Denmark the rights of the United States in Greenland. Greenland is a Danish possession, and the rights which the United States will abandon are merely rights of discovery.

The United States will obtain from Denmark full possession of the Islands of St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix, or Santa Cruz as it is better known. These islands lie about fifty miles off the east coast of Porto Rico. They are 142 square miles in area, and support a population of 27,000 persons. Nearly all the inhabitants of the islands are negroes, who live by the cultivation of cane sugar. The islands lie just to the east of Porto Rico, owned by the United States, and near the Leeward Island. The Caribean Sea lies between these islands and the South American coast.

TROOPS OF GEN. HAIG HOLD BAPAUME ROAD

Fierce Fighting in Progress Between Guillemont and the High Wood, Where Australians Bear the Brunt Against Picked German Troops—Minor Actions on French Front, in Which Enemy Guns are Taken

LONDON, July 25.—(Special.)—"Victory in a few months," bulletin the newspapers on War Minister David Lloyd George's speech before the Commons last evening, and they follow it with another bulletin, "New Advance in France."

A great confidence has been brought to London by the War Minister's words and the official announcements of continued successes by the British arms. A great surge of relief—a feeling that the end of all the war horrors really is drawing near—is felt in the metropolis to-night.

Firm ground for this belief is found in the latest word from General Sir Douglas Haig. His night report tells of further heavy artillery actions, apparently in preparation for a new general assault, while meantime the infantry has made further progress in Pozieres, where, beyond the German third line, the British straddle the important Bapaume high road.

The heaviest fighting to-day was borne by the Australiar corps, veterans of many battlefields in Europe and Gallipoli. During the night they inflicted severe losses on the Germans, who delivered counter-attacks on numerous sections of the front, their blows being especially heavy between Guillemont and the High Wood. Despite these attacks the soldiers from the Antipodes made further progress near the forest and village.

The most extensive gain, however, and one won against the most determined resistance, was registered in Pozieres, where house-to-house fighting is going on; the British now hold the larger part of the village, it is officially announced, while in the course of the fighting a number of machine guns and some prisoners have been captured.

The British are attacking on the eight-mile key sector of the Picardf front with more than 200,000 men, according to estimates made by the Germans and reported to-day from Berlin. The official statement of the German Headquarters, while admitting that the British made gains in their attadks of Saturday night and Sunday, state that the German lines have now been entirely "rectified," except for some houses in Pozieres which the British won at heavy cost, and which they still hold.

There were some minor actions of a rather sharp character. during the night and to-day on the French front, but no change of any extent in the front.

The artillery fire along the entire Picardy front has been terrific through out the day, and word of a new general assault is momentarily expected.

It was announced by the German War Office that the Brandenburg Grenadiers on the Somme front were the same troops that captured Fort Douaumont, northeast of Verdun, This was the first official admission that troops had been moved from Verdun to reinforce the Germans on the Somme front.

Standard Hotels Must Be Clean and Comfortable

Nothing Onerous or Drastic Contemplated in Regulations Being Issued — Applications by Middle of August

TORONTO, July 24.—"The regulations of the Ontario License Board with regard to standard hotels, which will prevail following the coming into force of prohibition on September 16, will be issued next week," declared Vice-Chairman Dingman, of the License Board, to-day. "There is nothing onerous or drastic contemplated whatever," Mr. Dingman continued. "The board will lay stress upon conditions of comfort, cleanliness, sanitary conditions, and satisfactory management."

"The regulations will be similar to those in force under the License Act. except that the question of hours will not be dealt with, as this will be unnecessary."

It is suggested that applications be in by August 15.

The $1 license fee relieves the holder of a standard hotel license from the municipal fees.

Sub-section 5 of Clause 146 of the Ontario Temperance Act says.

"The keeper of a standard hotel shall be entitled to sell all non-intoxicating drinks and beverages, cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, and to conduct an ice ecram or general restaurant or cafe without further or other license."

Many Applications.

Mr. Dingman said that the Board had reason to believe that there would be a large number of applications from all parts of the Province for standard hotel licenses. The number of licenses which would be issued would probably be less than under the present License Act.

"If the words "Standard Hotel" mean what we intend them to mean, they will be hotels which will be a credit to the Province. The hotelmen will themselves know that the word "standard" will mean a recognition well worth having," added Mr. Dingman.

Mr. Dingman spent yesterday at Borden Camp. Lieut. Widgery, Provost Marshall, he said, declared he was well pleased with the order observed around the camp, and the practical absence of drinking. In Barrie. Mr. Dingman was informed by reputable citizens that not a drunken soldier had been seen in the town since the Barrie hotels had been put out of bounds. The same reports were made with regard to other towns close to the big military camp.

BIG GUNS AT ALEXANDRIA

KINGSTON, July 25.—(Special.)—Premier Hearst, Sir Thomas White, Senator George Taylor, A. E. Donovan, M.P.P.; J. R. Dargavel, M.P.P., Hon Findlay Macdiarmid and Chas. Britton, Gananoque, are to speak at the annual meeting of the International Anglers' Association at Alexandria Bay on August 2nd.

DEPLORABLE IRISH TRAGEDY

Comments of Press on the Irish Breakdown are Earnest and Grave

LONDON, July 25—Special—All the London papers comment editorially earnestly and gravely on the collapse of the Irish negotiations. The Daily Telegraph says:

"The abandonment of the recent hopes of a settlement means trouble in Ireland and trouble in the House of Commons. We have the old millstone tied once more around our necks in a heavier and more dangerous shape than ever, and we shall be fortunate if it does not hamper our progress at every step through the deep waters to be traversed."

The Daily News says:

"The collapse of the negotiations leaves the Irish problem not merely unsettled, but worse than it has been at any time since the eighties."

The Press says:

"The whole business is a deplorable tragedy. There his been a phethora of delay and misunderstanding until now we are faced with the breakdown of a political truce which has existed since the begining of the war, and the leaders of the nation, who should be devoting all their minds to defeating the enemy, are again to be distracted by an internal feud and dissension."

The Graphic says:

"Once more the attempt to establish home rule has failed, because, like previous home rule schemes, it neither satisfies Irish sentiment nor secures justice for Great Britain."

THIRTY RELATIVES ARE ON FIRING LINES

KINGSTON, Ont., July 24.—Sergt. Amos Pugh, a nephew of Mrs. J. H. Walker, has been killed in action. He was a petty officer on a British submarine. He lived in Toronto ten years, and went back to England a year before the war opened. Thirty members of Mrs. Walker's family responded to the call of duty, and half a dozen have been killed or wounded. Just recently she had one son killed and another, who went through all the big battles and the retreat at Mons, has been missing for five months, and it is believed he is dead.

LURKING SUBMARINES SUBJECT TO ATTACK

STOCKHOLM, July 24.—Consequent upon the royal decree forbidding foreign belligerent submarines to pass through or to remain in Swedish territorial waters on pain of being attacked without warning, a general order has been issued to the Swedish naval and military forces. It directs that foreign submarines in Swedish territorial waters unless recognized as neutrals or as merchant ships, are to be immediately attacked.

PRISONERS GET AWAY FROM SIMCOE JAIL

SIMCOE, July 25.—(Special.) —Private James Potts, charged with deserting from the 133rd, and the bigamist, McDonald, awaiting transfer to the Prison Farm to complete his sentence, escaped from the County Jail here yesterday evening. They were seen dropping from the yard wall by residents across the street and the alarm was turned in promptly. Potts was barefooted. A step-ladder used in doing some interior painting and a bed sheet told the story of their scaling the eighteen-foot wall. McDonald's wife lives in London, his parents in Hamilton, and the partner of his second wedding ceremony, Miss Wark, lives in Brantford. Potts is thick-set and swarthy, a little under average height, has straight black hair, aged about forty years. McDonald is about twenty-two years old, of good physique, well proportioned, light brown hair and clear complexion.

VICTORY WILL COME BY MUNITIONS AND BRAINS

Lloyd George Says British Resourcefulness and Intelligence Will Vanquish an Apparently Invincible Enemy—Prospects are Excellent and Generals are Proud of The Men They are Leading—There is no Doubt of Results

LONDON, July 25.—Special—After a speech by Winston Spencer Churchill in the House of Commons yesterday, criticizing Premier Asquith for not reviewing the war situation, David Lloyd George, Secretary for War, replied, saying that it would be premature to survey a military situation and the prospects in the middle of a battle.

"The prospects are good," the War Secretary said, "our generals are more than satisfied and proud of the valor of our men they are leading. Great as British infantry were in Wellington and Napoleon's day, they never have been greater than now.

"One thrills with pride when one thinks one belongs to the same race. They are pressing back the formidable foe, who devoted his best brains to the study of war for generations. I feel confident that victory is assured to us." Continuing, Mr Lloyd George said:

"Numbers and all other resources are on our side. There was only one fear—that years of training and thought on the part of a great military power might be something that might be insuperable. Our men have demonstrated that it is not so and that British resourcefulness and intelligence are, as in fields of commerce in the past, when they have been able to snatch victory out of what appeared to be complete commercial disaster, going to snatch victory again in a few months from what appeared at one moment to be something that was invincible.

"There is no doubt at all that the lesson of this battle is that we have simply to press on with all our resources and with the material at our command, and victory will be ours."

Lively Fighting In Somme Sector

Sub. Lieut. Nungesser Brings Down His Tenth Aeroplane

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 25.—(Afternoon statement.)—South of the Somme yesterday we captured in a small attack south of Estrees a group of powerfully fortified houses. Our troops chased the Germans from some trenches north of Verdmandovillers and occupied them.

Between the Oise and the Aisne we dispersed with grenades several reconnoitring parties which attempted to reach our lines in the sector of Tracy le Val.

On the left bank of the Meuse an enemy attack with hand grenades against Hill 304 failed under our machine gun fire.

On the right bank there was a violent bombardment in the region between Fleury and La Laufee.

In Alsace, after artillery preparation, the Germans delivered an attack upon our Balschwiller positions northwest of Altkirch.

After lively fighting the enemy was driven out from some elements of trenches where he had gained a foothold.

On July 22nd Sub.-Lieutenant Nungesser brought down his tenth German aeroplane. On the night of July 24 and 25 on our aeroplane squadrons bombarded the railway stations at Pierrepont, Longuyon and Bivouacs near Mangiennes.

PRUSSIAN CITIES BUY 75,000 MILCH GOATS

BERLIN, July 25.—(Special.)— A number of German cities have taken practical steps to solve the milk problem, which still is very serious in the large centres of population. Tweve of the largest Prussian municipalities have bought 75,000 goats in Switzerland. The animas have been turned over to the owners of small farms in the suburbs of the cities on condition that they deliver seventy per cent. of the milk obtained from the goats to the relief stations, where it is distributed among poor families with small children. The goats furnish 200,000 quarts of milk a day.

The latest figures, fatalities from the explosion are twenty-two dead and six others dying. Superintendent Van Kuzen is not dead but may die.

ENEMY FAIL TO REACH TRENCHES

British Gunfire Beat Germans Back at Every Point—Casualties Very Heavy

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 25.—A full text of the British statement says: In the last few days the enemy brought further reinforcements of infantry and guns to the Somme front.

Throughout yesterday the hostile bombardment was fairly continuous and at times became very heavy. An attempt to attack our right flank was made yesterday afternoon, but it was frustrated by our artillery.

Last night two further infantry attacks, preceeded by a specially violent artillery fire, were launched against the centre of our line.

These attacks also were stopped by the concentrated fire of our guns, and at no place did the enemy succeed in reaching the British trenches. His casualties in the fruitless attacks must have been severe.

At other parts in the line there has been a good deal of hand-to-hand fighting, and our infantry worked their way froward in places.

North of Pozieres, a greater part of which village is now in our possession, the enemy continued to offer strong opposition, but here also we gained some ground and captured two machine guns and a few more prisoners, including two battalion commandants.

Russian Successes Due to This Enemy Cannot Protect Its Infantry

RUSSIANS REACH TOWN OF ERIZINGAN, IN ARMENIA

PETROGRAD, July 25.—Some Russian detachments already have reached positions about ten miles from the Turkish fortified town of Erzingan in Armenia, says a Russian official statement here to-day.

HINDENBERG DRIVEN BACK ON THIRTY MILE FRONT

LONDON, July 25.—Special —Russian troops have torn open the German front for a distance of thirty miles in the Riga sector for gains of twelve miles, according to a Reuter despatch received here to-day. This sudden advance, followed four days of severe fighting from the Gulf of Riga to Uxkul. The seriousness of the situation for the forces of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is emphasized by the official announcement in Berlin that the Kaiser and his General Staff have left the western front for the headquarters in the east.

A despatch from Petrograd to-night says:

Activity is steadily spreading over the northern area, where, besides fighting at Baranovitschi and Smorgen districts, the Germans lost trenches near Lake Sventen as well as farther north. It is clear now that the initiative was Gen. Kuropatkin's. There is now no doubt that the Russians regained the ground all along the Riga position, where the Germans lost their laboriously constructed front trenches and, according to unofficial but circumstantial reports, in some sections lost far more.

While the battles along the Dvina and around Riga overshadow other events along the eastern front, heavy fighting continues in Volhynia and Bukowina, especially between Kimpolung and Delatyn, the railroad junction west of Kolomea.

Ontario R. R. Board Meets In This City

The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board composed of Messrs. D. M. McIntyre, F. C. Kittson, W. E. Coo, and F. Dagger, held a setting in the Court House, Belleville, this morning. The matter under consideration was the application of J. H. & J. Bradden trading as The Bradden Telephone Company) for authority to increase the charges for telephone service from $10.00 per annum to $12.00 per annum. The Board after hearing evidence and argument in the matter decided to allow the Company to increase the rate as proposed. A proviso was also added that the company improve the efficiency of the service, and that a proper inspection of the line be made later in the year.

Mr. Wm. Carnew represented the Bradden Company in the hearing.

Whereas the Dominion of Canada is a democratic country where class distinctions do not and should not exist.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Routine Business At City Council

Small Matters Discussed Previous to Holidays—Estimates to be Considered This Evening

At the City Council session last evening considerable business of a routine nature was transacted. When the business was completed the Council adjourned until this evening, when the estimates for the year will be considered and the tax rate struck.

The members present were: Mayor Ketcheson, Aldermen Woodley, Smith, St. Charles, Whalen, Parks, Deacon, Platt and Duckworth.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the last regular meeting the Council went into Committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc., Alderman Whalen in the chair. The accounts recommended to be paid by the various civic committees were passed and the following recommendations were disposed of:—

That Wednesday, the 2nd day of August be proclaimed as a civic holiday. Carried .

That Samuel Barnum be appointed a member of the permanent fire department in place of Stanley Waddel, resigned. Carried.

A recommendation was made to the Council that the Chief and Chairman of Fire to be a delegation to attend the convention of fire chiefs at Windsor on August 8, 9, 10 and 11, and the sum of $50 be granted towards defraying expenses.

On motion the recommendation was struck out, as Alderman St. Charles stated neither he nor the Chief of the Fire Department desired to go.

BASKETS ASKED FOR.

A communication from a citizen asking that wire baskets be provided on certain streets for the placing in of loose papers, etc., was referred to the Parks Committee.

GRANT WANTED.

Mr A. Jones, President of the Belleville Agricultural Society, asked for a grant of $300 to the fair to be held this year.

Alderman Deacon asked if any other municipality assisted the fair. Last year we gave them only $200.

Alderman Woodley—Last year the management of the fair was $500 behind.

The matter was referred to an adjourned meeting of the Council.

A COMPLAINT.

Mr E. T. Cherry wrote the Council objecting to the Council interfering in the placing of sanitary garbage on his vacant property on Everett Street. Received and filed.

BUILDING PERMITS.

A report from the City Engineer showed that during the month of May building permits to the extent of $5,500 were issued, and for the month of June $7,700.

WALK WANTED.

A petition was presented asking for the building of a granolithic walk on the north side of Holloway Street, between Dunbar and Hillside Streets. Referred to the City Clerk and City Assessor.

STREET FLUSHING.

A communication was read from the pavement firm which placed the pavement down on Front Street, in reference to not having the pavement flushed or sprinkled too much during the hot weather. Once a week was suggested as often enough to flush it.

Alderman Smith—The merchants would want the pavement flushed more than once a week.

City Foreman Henderson—I do not think the water hurts the pavement, as it is dried off before the sun gets very strong. In Peterboro the pavements are sprinkled during the day and are also swept.

Mayor Ketcheson—What we are doing I do not think is doing the pavement any harm. It is flushed early in the morning, but is not sprinkled during the day.

On motion no action was taken on the communication.

WALKS BUILT.

A report was presented from the City Clerk and City Assessor showing what granolithic walks had been built the past year. Also repairs to certain streets in the city.

COST OF WALKS.

The City Engineer presented a report as to the cost of building certain granolithic walks last year as petitioned for.

The Committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Alderman St. Charles asked the Clerk if he would write to Toronto and get a copy of their smoke by-law.

City Clerk—I will do so.

Alderman Whalen—What about the military tank in front of the canning factory? It is reported to be in a rather bad state.

Mayor Ketcheson—Refer the matter to the Board of Health or the Sanitary Inspector.

Alderman Whalen—Is there a traffic by-law in the city? Autos were allowed to stand on Front Street and other streets for hours. In some cities they were only allowed to stand 20 minutes in one place.

Mayor Ketcheson—We might have a by-law prepared.

Alderman Smith—What about having the sweet clover cut in the city. In some places it is almost a nuisance.

Mayor Ketcheson—If it is a noxious weed, Mr-Arnott, the City Inspector, should see that it is cut down and owners of property so notified.

Alderman St. Charles—It is growing on some of the streets.

Alderman Whalen—We have men at work cutting it down.

Alderman Parks asked why a leak in a gas service at the corner of Pine Street and Bleecker Avenue had not been repaired, and why a load of gravel asked to be placed in front of Mr Fisher's place on Pine Street had not been placed there.

The leak in the gas pipe referred to was referred to the manager of the Gas Department, and Alderman Whalen promised to look after the second enquiry.

MOTIONS.

Alderman Whalen moved, seconded by Alderman Smith, that tenders be asked for the construction of sewers on North Front, Moira and Grove Streets, in accordance with petitions presented to the Council.

City Clerk—The petition for a sewer from Ridley Street on North Front Street, and Moira Street was not properly signed, but two-thirds of the Council could do it, if the approval of the Government was secured. It could be built on the initiative plan.

City Engineer Evans—We must decide what we are going to build before tenders are asked for. We must certainly get the Government's consent before we do anything.

The matter was left in the hands of the Chairman of Public Works and the City Engineer.

Council adjourned until Tuesday night.

Many from the city nightly wend their way to Zwick's Island and indulge in a plunge in the Bay of Quinte. Last night upwards of a hundred were over to the island.

WATERBOUND MACADAM

Mr. J. W. Evans, city engineer, reported at the Council last evening that it would cost $315 for a waterbound macadam covered with one coat of oil on Chatham street. The approaches necessary at each house would be extras this is a narrow street, and there is no chance of a curb, therefore an approach has to be made from the street walk to the pavement in front of each house, and a pipe put in to allow water to run through. These cost in the neighborhood of $12 each.

Orange Rulers In Convention

Proceedings Opened at Toronto by Meeting of the Grand Black Chapter—Order is Flourishing

TORONTO, July 25.—Special—After an absence of ten years, the annual conventions of the Supreme Grand Orange Lodge and the Grand Black Chapter of British America are being held in the city this week. The proceedings opened with the meeting of the Grand Black Chapter at Victoria Hall last night, which was attended by upwards of 200 delegates from outside points and many local members. After the chapter had been opened, Mayor Church extended a civic welcome to the visitors and conferred the freedom of the city upon them. His Worship in a brief address referred to the splendid response made by members of the order to the call of the Empire. He predicted that after the war, as the direct result of the splendid spirit of patriotism shown during the present crisis, the order would become a greater power for good in the Dominion and would materially assist in its development.

The Grand Master, Hon. Richard A. Squires, Minister of Justice of Newfoundland, thanked the Mayor and the citizens for the hearty welcome accorded the delegates.

Grand Master Squires, in his inaugural address, said that although it was almost impossible to expect any great increase in the membership during the war, yet very satisfactory progress had been made during the past year. Ten new chapters had been organized and the total membership had been greatly augmented. He referred to the great wave of temperance and moral reform that was sweeping through the Dominion and Newfoundland. He recommended the Government and the people of Ontario on the passing of the Prohibition Act, and said that if the progress of anti-liquor legislation was any fair indication of public opinion, as he believed it was, the day was not far distant when the drinking saloon would be abolished completely from Canada and Newfoundland. Dealing with the war, he paid a warm tribute to those who had enlisted and expressed the hearty sympathy of the members with the families of those who had lost loved ones in the war.

The reports presented by the Grand Registrar and Grand Treasurer were of a most satisfactory character, and were referred to the standing committee which were appointed immediately after the Grand Master's address. The committees will settle down to work and make their several recommendations at to-day's session, which will conclude with the election of the officers.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

PERIODICAL RELIGION

(By Hannah More)

We deceive ourselves not a little when we fancy that what is emphatically called the world is only to be found in this or that situation. The world is every where. It is a nature as well as a place; a principle as well as a "local habitation and a name." Through the principle and the nature flourish most in those haunts which are their congenial soil, yet we are too ready, when we withdraw from the world abroad to bring it home, to lodge it in our own bosom. The natural heart is both its temple and its worshipper.

But the most devoted idolater of the world, with all the capacity and industry which he may have applied to the subject, has never yet been able to accomplish the grand design of uniting the interests of heaven and earth. This experiment, which has been more assiduously and more frequently tried than that of the philosopher for the grand hermetick secret, has been tried with about the same degree of success. The most laborious process of the spiritual chemist to reconcile religion with the world has never yet been competent to make the contending principles coalesce.

But to drop metaphor. Religion was never yet thoroughly relished by a heart full of the world. The world in return cannot be completely enjoyed where there is just religion enough to disturb its false peace. In such minds Heaven and earth ruin each other's enjoyments.

There is a religion which is too sincere for hypocrisy, but too transient to be profitable; too superficial to reach the heart, too unproductive to proceed from it. It is slight, but not false. It has discernment enough to distinguish sin, but not firmness enough to oppose it; compunction sufficient to reform it. It laments when it does wrong, and performs all the functions of repentance of sin except forsaking it. It has every thing of devotion except the stability, and gives everything to religion except the heart. This is a religion of times, events, and circumstances; it is brought into play by accidents, and dwindles away with the occasion which called it out. Festivals and feasts which occur but seldom, are much observed, and it is to be feared because they occur but seldom; while the great festival which comes every week, comes too often to be so respectfully treated. The piety of these people comes out much in sickness, but is apt to retreat again as recovery approaches. If they die, they are placed by their admirers in the Saints' calendar; if they recover, they go back into the world they had renounced, and again suspend their amendment as often as death suspends his blow.

There is another class whose views are still lower, who yet cannot so far shake off religion as to be easy with out retaining its brief and stated forms, and who contrive to mix up these forms with a faith of a piece with their practice. They blend their inconsistent works with a vague and unwarranted reliance on what the Saviour has done for them, and thus patch up a merit and a propitiation of their own—running the hazard of incurring the danger of punishment by their lives, and inventing a scheme to avert it by their creed. Religion never interferes with their pleasures except by the compliment of a short and occasional suspension. Having got through these periodical acts of devotion, they return to the same scenes of vanity and idleness which they had quitted for the temporary duty; forgetting that it was the very end of those acts of devotion to cure the vanity and to correct the idleness. Had the periodical observance answered its true design, it would have disinclined them to the pleasure instead of giving them a dispensation for its indulgence. Had they used the devout exercise in a right spirit, and improved it to its true end, it would have set the heart and life at work on all those pursuits which it was calculated to promote. But their project has more ingenuity. By the stated minutes they give to religion, they purchase a protection for the misemployment of the rest of their time. They make these periodical devotions a kind of spiritual ensurance office, which is to make up to the adventurers in pleasure, any loss or damage which they may sustain in its voyage.

It is of these shallow devotions, these presumed equivalents for a new heart and a new life, that God declares by the prophet, that he is "weary." Though of his own express appointment, they become "an abomination" to him, as soon as the sign comes to be rested in for the thing signified. We Christians have "our new moons and our sacrifices" under other names and other shapes; of which sacrifices, that is, of the spirit in which they are offered, the Almighty has said, "I cannot away with them, they are iniquity."

Now is this superficial devotion that "giving up ourselves not with out lips only, but with our lives," to our Maker, to which we solemnly pledge ourselves, at least once a week? Is consecrating an hour or two to public worship on the Sunday morning, making the Sabbath "a delight?" Is desecrating the rest of the day, by "doing our own ways, finding our own pleasure, speaking our own words," making it "honorable?"

Sometimes in an awakening sermon, these periodical religionists hear, with awe and terror, of the hour of death and the day of judgment. Their hearts are penetrated with the solemn sounds. They confess the awful realities by the impression they make on their own feelings. The sermon ends, and with it the serious reflections it excited. While they listen to these things, especially if the preacher be alarming, they are all in all to them. They return to the world—and these things are as if they were not; as if they had never been; as if their reality lasted only while they were preached; as if their existence depended only on their being heard; as if truth were on long truth than while it solicited their notice; as if there were as little stability in religion itself as in their attention to it. As soon as their minds are disengaged from the question, one would think that death and judgment were an invention, that heaven and hell were blotted from existence, that eternity ceased to be eternity, in the long intervals in which they cease to be the object of their consideration.

This is the natural effect of what we venture to denominate periodical religion. It is a transient homage kept totally distinct and separate from the rest of our lives, instead of its being made the prelude and the principle of a course of pious practice; instead of our weaving our devotions and our actions into one uniform tissue by doing all in one spirit and to one end. When worshippers of this description pray for "a clean heart and a right spirit," when they beg of God to "turn away their eyes from beholding vanity," is it not to be feared that they pray to be made what they resolve never to become, that they would be very unwilling to become as good as they pray to be made, and would be sorry to be as penitent as they profess to desire? But alas! they are in little danger of being taken at their word; there is too much reason to fear their petitions will not be heard or answered, for prayer for the pardon of sin will obtain no pardon, while we retain the sin in hope that the prayer will be accepted without the renounciation.

The most solemn office of our Religion, the sacred memorial of the death of its author, the blessed injunction and tender testimony of his dying love, the consolation of the humble believer, the gracious apopintment for strengthening his faith, quickening his repentance, awakening his gratitude and kindling his charity, is too often resorted to on the same erroneous principle. He who ventures to live without the use of this holy institution, lives in a state of disobedience to the last appointment of his Redeemer. He who rests in it as a means for supplying the place of habitual piety, totally mistakes its design, and it fatally deceiving his own soul.

This awful solemnity is, it is to be hoped, rarely frequented even by this class of Christians without a desire of approaching it with the pious feelings above described. But if they carry them to the altar, are they equally anxious to carry them away from it; are they anxious to maintain them after it? Does the rite so seriously approached commonly leave any vestigo of seriousness behind it? Are they careful to perpetuate the feelings they were so desirous to excite? Do they strive to make them produce solid and substantial effects? Would that this inconstancy of mind were to be found only in the class of characters under consideration! Let the reader, however sincere in his desires, let the writer, however ready to lament the levity of others, seriously ask their own hearts if they can entirely acquit themselves of the inconsistency they are so forward to blame. If they do not find the charge brought against others but too applicable to themselves.

Irreverence antecedent to, or during this sacred solemnity, is far more rare than durable improvement after it. If there are, as we are willing to believe, none so profane as to violate the act, except those who impiously use it only as "a picklock to a place," there are too few who make it lastingly beneficial: Few so thoughtless as not to approach it with resolutions of amendment; few comparatively who carry those resolutions into effect. Fear operates in the previous instance. Why should not love operate in that which is subsequent?

A periodical religion is accompanied with a periodical repentance. This species of repentance is adopted with no small mental reservation. It is partial and disconnected. These fragments of contrition, these broken of penitence—what a succession of worldly pursuits is not only resorted to, but is intended to be resorted to, during the whole of the intervening spaces, is not that sorrow which the Almighty has promised to accept. To render it pleasing to God and efficacious to ourselves, there must be an agreement in the parts, an entireness in the whole web of life. There must be an integral repentance. A quarterly contrition in the four weeks preceding the sacred seasons will not wipe out the daily offences, the hourly negligences of the whole sinful year. Sins half forsaken through fear, and half retained through partially resisted temptation and partially adopted resolution, make up but an unprofitable piety.

In the bosom of these professors there is a perpetual conflict between fear and inclination. In conversation you will generally find them very warm in the cause of religion; but it is religion as opposed to infidelity, not as opposed to worldly mindedness. They defend the worship of God, but desire to be excused from his service. Their heart is the slave of the world but their blindness hides from them the turpitude of that world. They commend piety but dread its requisitions. They allow that repentance is necessary, but then how easy is it to find reasons for deferring a necessary evil? Who will hastily adopt a painful measure which he can find a creditable pretence for evading only part of it, the part they retain robs them of the benefits of their partial renunciation.

We cannot sufficiently admire the wisdom of the church, in enjoining extraordinary acts of devotion at the return of those festivals so happily calculated to excite devotional feelings. Extraordinary repentance of sin is peculiarliy suitable to the seasons that record those grand events which sin occasioned. But the church never intended that these more stated and strict and self-examinations should preclude our habitual self-inspection. It never intended its holy offices to supply the place of general holiness, but to promote it. It intended that these solemn occasions should animate the flame of piety, but it never meant to furnish a reason for neglecting to keep the flame alive till the next return should again kindle the dying embers. It meant that every such season should gladden the heart of the Christian at its approach, and not discharge him from duty at its departure. It meant to lighten his conscience of the burden of sin, not to encourage him to begin a new score, again to be wiped off at the succeeding festival. It intended to quicken the vigilance of the believer, and not to dismiss the sentinel from his post. If we are not better for these divinely appointed helps, we are the worse. If we use them as a discharge from that diligence which they were intended to promote, we convert our blessings into snares.

This abuse of our advantages arises from our not incorporating our devotions into the general habit of our lives. Till our religion become an inward principle and not an external act, we shall not receive that benefit from her forms, however excellent, which they are calculated to convey. It is to those who possess the spirit of Christianity that her forms are so valuable. To them the form excites the spirit, as the spirit animates the form. Till religion become the desire of our hearts, it will not become the business of our lives. We are far from meaning that it is to be its actual occupation; but that every portion, every habit, every act of life is to be animated by its spirit, influenced by its principle, governed by its power.

The very make of our nature, and our necessary commerce with the world, naturally fill our hearts and minds with thoughts and ideas, over which we have unhappily too little control. We find this to be the case when in our better hours we attempt to give ourselves up to serious reflection. How many intrusions of worldly thoughts, how many impertinent imaginations, not only irrelevant, but uncalled and unwelcome, crowd in upon the mind so forcibly as scarcely to be repelled by our sincerest efforts. How impotent then to repel such images must that mind be, which is devoted to worldly pursuits, which yields itself up to them, whose opinions, habits, and conduct are under their allowed influence!

If, as we have before observed, religion consists in a new heart and a new spirit, it will become not our occasional act, but our abiding disposition, proving its settled existence in the mind by its habitually disposing our thoughts and actions, our devotions and our practice to a conformity to each other and to itself.

Let us not consider a spirit of worldliness as a little infirmity, as a natural, and therefore a pardonable weaknes; as a trifling error which will be overlooked for the sake of our many good qualities. It is in fact the essence of our other faults; the temper that stands between us and our salvation; the spirit which is in direct opposition to the spirit of God. Individual sins may more easily be cured, but this is the principle of all spiritual disease. A worldly spirit where it is rooted and cherished, runs through the whole character, insinuates itself in all we say and think and do. It is this which makes us so dead in religion, so averse from spiritual things, so forgetful of God, so unmindful of eternity, so satisfied with ourselves, so impatient of serious discourse, and so alive to that vain and frivolous intercourse which excludes intellect almost as much as piety from our general conversation.

It is not therefore our more considerable actions alone which require watching, for they seldom occur. They do not form the habit of life in ourselves, nor the chief importance of our example to others. It is to our ordinary behaviour; it is to our deportment in common life; it is to our prevailing turn of mind in general intercourse, by which we shall profit or corrupt those with whom we associate. It is our conduct in social life which will help to diffuse a spirit of piety or a distaste to it. If we have much influence, this is the place in which particularly to exert it. If we have little, we have still enough to infect the temper and lower the tone of our narrow society.

If we really believe that it is the design of Christianity to raise us to a participation of the divine nature, the slightest reflecton on this elevation of our character would lead us to maintain its dignity in the ordinary intercourse of life. We should not so much inquire whether we are transgressing any actual prohibition; whether any standing law is pointed against us; as whether we are supporting the dignity of the Christian character; whether we are acting suitably to our profession; whether more exactness in the common occurrences of the day, more correctness in our conversation, would not be such evidences of our religion, as by being obvious and intelligible, might not almost insensibly produce important effects.

The most insignificant people must not through indolence and selfishness undervalue their own influence. Most persons have a little circle of which they are a srot of centre. Its smallness may lessen their quantity of good, but does not diminish the duty of using that little influence wisely. Where is the human being so inconsiderable but that he may in some shape benefit others, either by calling their virtues into exercise, or by setting them an example of virtue himself? But we are humble just in the wrong place. When the exhibition of our talents or splendid qualities is in question, we are not backward in the display. When a little self-denial is to be exercised, when a little good might be effected by our example, by our discreet management in company, by giving a better turn to conversation, then at once we grow wickedly modest—"Such an insignificant creature as I am can do no good"—"Had I a higher rank or brighter talents, then indeed my influence might be exerted to some purpose."—Thus under the mask of diffidence, we justify our indolence; and let slip those lesser occasions of promoting religion which if we all improved, how much might the condition of society be raised.

The hackneyed interrogration, "What—must we be always talking about religion?" must have the hackneyed answer—Far from it. Talking about religion is not being religious. But we may bring the spirit of religion into company and keep it in perpetual operation when we do not professedly make it our subject. We may be constantly advancing its interests, we may without effort or affectation be giving an example of candour, of moderation, of humility, of forbearance. We may employ our influence by correcting falsehood, by checking levity, by discouraging calumny, by vindicating misrepresented merit, by countenancing every thing which has a good tendency—in short, by throwing our whole weight, be it great or small, into the right scale.

The Toronto Board of Trade urged the C.N.E. Directors to run the Fair for three months as far back as 1885, but the management thought two weeks quite long enough.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

In a former issue of The Intelligencer, attention was called to the superior methods adopted in the West in the construction of roads in cities and towns, and the suggestion made that it would be a wise, economical and beneficial policy for Belleville to follow the example set by the municipal governors of the West.

Would it not be well to begin these improvements while constructing sewers in West Belleville, particularly on Bridge Street. That the Murney Hill should be made reasonably fit for ordinary travel without the necessity of steep hill-climbing, which has been the bane of travellers from the time the street was laid out by the surveyors. The bridge which crosses the river Moira will, it is said by engineers, have, in the near future, to be rebuilt or raised and materially repaired to secure safety to those who have to cross it. When this is being done, should not the street be properly graded from Murney Hill to the west end of the bridge. If a sewer is to be constructed west of the hill, would it not be economical to so grade the hill and street in order to prevent the necessity of deepening the sewer if ever the work of grading the hill be entered upon? If anything is to be done with this section of the city, let it be well and permanently done, and not patched.

The necessity of grading Bridge Street East has been often advocated, and, we understand, was petitioned for last year, yet nothing has been done. Why? The same old cry: taxes, a good reason for the general tax-payer if it were not that a large proportion of the cost would have to be borne by property holders on the north and south side of the street. The street now is either a dust-choking thoroughfare or full of mud-holes, the result of a daily overdose of water which it receives to allay the dust.

This is not the only street in East Belleville that requires attention. Examine George, William, Ann, and particularly Charles Street, and after every rain storm ponds, mud-holes and slush will be found immediately in front of almost every residence on portions of the street. We have no desire to particularize, but is it not disgraceful to have it necessary for a carriage or auto, in order to land their occupants upon the sidewalk in front of dwellings owned by Mr R. J. Graham, John J. B. Flint and others, to run into a mud puddle? Yet such is the case. It is a wonder the residents fronting this street have not rebelled long ere this. It may be that the fear of an additional tax may have induced peace, forgetting, as has already been pointed out, that the tinkering policy of patching in the past has been as costly to the general taxpayer as it would be under a system of permanent street construction.

Belleville has at present a live Mayor, and we are led to believe an enterprizing Chairman of Public Works, who, with a progressive body of Aldermen behind them, should lead them to get to work and do something. Make a beginning, no matter how limited it may be, and keep at it until Belleville can present an appearance commensurate with its importance as a business centre and its other attractions.

MOTORISTS.

The Police Magistrate of Toronto is setting an example to his fellow-magistrates, in dealing with reckless drivers. Scarcely a day passes but items appear in the Toronto papers, recording injury caused by fast and careless running of motor cars.

A case in point is the following: a woman was run over while travelling on College Street, Toronto, and the motorist tried to make his escape, but was captured and brought before Police Magistrate Denison, who when bail was asked for the culprit, the report says, refused.

"I will not give this man bail—not for a few days anyway," said Magistrate Denison in the Police Court, when George Marvin Brown, 151 Roncesvalles Avenue, the driver of an automobile, appeared charged with doing bodily harm to Eva Yolotovsky, 274 Euclid Avenue, who is now in the Western Hospital suffering from an injured foot.

Brown, it is claimed by the police, was under the influence of liquor and travelling at thirty miles an hour on College Street last night when the accident happened.

Colonel Denison made a scathing comment, regarding the automobilists who have injured so many people lately.

Mr Corley assured his Worship that the Crown was in no way lax in making prosecution when there was any evidence to support the action.

"It's probably for the best that your Worship decided not to grant bail just yet," said Mr Corley. "This woman is apparently not very seriously injured, but only the other day I took bail when an old man was struck and, though I did not think he was in any danger, he died."

Constables Forbes and Dunn saw the occurrence and the former arrested Brown after chasing him with a bicycle.

This furious driving up and down Belleville streets may be witnessed almost daily, particularly by tourists. The wonder is there are not more accidents, and a few months in jail or penitentiary for the delinquents might cure the evil.

Ottawa Free Press: If there should be any doubt as to the determination of the Allies to use their superiority and of their ability in the use of it, it is only necessary to glance at the reports from the front which the German government is permitting German press correspondents to publish. The correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin sees the situation from the German viewpoint. Of the British attack he says: "Even the powerful force of the enemy's attaacks in the first days of July is greatly surpassed by the rage, exasperation and tenacity of these new attacks. No matter how often the enemy is repulsed, they return again and again in fresh waves of assaults." This bears testimony to both the size and the quality of the new "great military power" which has projected itself into the land operations just at the time when the Teuton reserves have become exhausted.

Montreal Gazette: The judgment of the British Court condemning the Bank of Montreal to pay heavy damages because one of its servants advised a citizen of the United Kingdom to invest in a British Columbia company, which investment did not turn out favorably, is of more than passing interest. The decision should make responsible men chary of giving advice to those seeking investments. If all those who have lost money through taking someone else's advice were to be recompensed at the exxpense of the advisers, what a handing over of cold cash there would be!

In British Columbia, where agriculture has been overshadowed by other and sometimes less staple industries, rather to the loss of the province, the chief crops grown are hay, fruit, oats and potatoes. Because of unseasonable conditions the grain crops will be partial failures. Fruits, however, are reported in splendid condition, and growers expect a good return for their work. Pulp, paper and mining industries are strong and improving, while the lumber industry is stiffening, so that in the coast province, as in the others, the commercial outlook as a whole may well be characterized as good.

Current Comment

To hold an election during war time would have been heinous. To hold a Liberal pow wow at Ottawa during the same period is a beautiful thing. Herein you get the quintessence of Gritism all the time and every time.—Brantford Courier.

Russian official reports tell of snow and rain in the Carpathians. This may make little difference so far as the offensive is concerned. The Czar's armies let such things as weather conditions worry them but little. They seem to be proof against the elements.

A Hamilton Herald representative who visited Camp Borden Sunday has little to say in criticism of the arrangements there and much to say in their praise. On the whole, he thinks the soldiers in camp are more comfortable than most of them would be at home in this weather.

We should like to know why it is considered necessary that automobile horns should give forth the most discordant sounds that can be invited. Is it an example of our musical training? I fancy the difference if really musical notes were sounded, and why not?—Kingston Standard. Why not invent a steam horn on the graphaphone plan that could be operated by the foot?

No one who has followed the evidence in the Royal Commission investigation or read the reports of the Commissioners' fiindings, will think otherwise of Major General Hughes and the members of the Shell Committee than that they sought honorably and energetically to fulfil the obligations they assumed, and that their efforts were attended by a large measure of success.

James Whitcomb Riley, the "Hoosier poet," was a good deal more than that. Although many of his poems were written in the dialect of the "common people" of the American middle west, they were universal in their appeal. And all of Riley's poetry was not dialect verse. Simple as it was in form and expression, much of what he wrote was worthy to be placed in any anthology of choice English poetry.—Hamilton Herald.

Scandalous war the dead to get,
300,000
Servants of Iris, land of wounds,
Mountains on high,
Spirits with wounds,
Sculptors,
Sepulchers of war,
Berated
300,000
Tell to me,
We would not let the foe to see,
The wounds they have inflicted Verdun.

Fortunes more grave,
Wouldn't Heaven save,
Our souls from such affliction,
Our spirits all in touch,
How may we save,
More men and money too
Is grave,
In face of such affliction;
For foes are brave
To win again,
The toils from France,
Reduction,
And spirits brave,
Stand by to save,
And open Bibles o'er our graves.

Spirit of war,
Again we soar to you,
To help you in affliction,
Come home brave souls,
Come home for God
Will heal,
All men, and all affliction.

Our hearts are brave in love and war,
Our hearts are mold and to it soar,
To help no German is the cry,
Our country is no country more,
If Germany could make,
What Germany would take,
Would be but our affliction.

So Germany we love you when,
You Germany protect again,
And fold your flags,
From flaunt and boast,
And cry out to the Lord of Hosts,
Protect us in affliction,
That we may boast no more of war,
Resurrect;
From war affliction.

A CASE OF GRENADES.

Indian Soldier Stemmed German Rush Lone Handed.

The following letter has been written to Madras, by a soldier now serving at the front. He is an Indian belonging to Pondicherry who went to France, being accompanied by his master, a French gentleman under whom he was serving while in Pondicherry. Several medals have been awarded to him for his heroic deeds. He writes:

Dear Brother,—From 25th September fighting took a different turn. Comparative calm and inactivity were followed by a furious attack. We are now fighting with more fierceness and vigor. On the 25th and 26th we advanced and gained some ground without any serious loss. All of us were quite cheerful, but later on we had to meet serious difficulties. In spite of them we continued to advance. On 21st October it was a fearful engagement. The Germans were watching very carefully and seemed to be determined to attack at our first move. Our sergeant called for four persons as volunteers ready to face anything in order to avert immediate danger. I offered myself as one of them in response to his call and jumped out of the trench with three of my comrades carrying bombs and throwing them rapidly on the Germans, who on their part were also throwing bombs very violently. But when they came out of their trenches with their guns my friends ran back to the trench, leaving me alone. As I was exposed to the continuous fire of the enemy I thought my death was certain. Then a kind of blind faith and desperate courage got hold of me and took me forward. All my bombs were exhausted and I was defenceless. Should I succumb to death without seeing the result of our attack? I asked myself. Certainly not. This idea was instinctively taking me back towards our trench. On my way I found a big case full of bombs and grenades. I sat down behind it. I began to throw quickly these bombs upon Germans who were then rushing towards me. It seems to me that I threw more than fifty bombs or grenades. In a few minutes I had almost lost my consciousness and was acting like a madman. The enemy could not stand this terrific fire. They were forced back to their trenches, and myself being unhurt I joined my comrades, who received me amidst cheers and clapping of hands. Our sergeant came and shook hands with me very cordially. This is my first adventure in life, and I hope will not be the last if life is prolonged.

Is Old Age Hereditary?

It is interesting to note that the centenarian Mrs. Arthur Mozley, who so recently celebrated her hundred and first birthday, spent her venerable birthday under felicitous circumstances—in fairly good health, and in the society of her friends, by all of whom she was warmly congratulated, and was made happy by many gifts and congratulations.

It seems that Mrs. Mozley's grandmother was also a centenrin, she being the widow of the late Rev. Arthur Mozley, who, as will be remembered by many of our readers, held livings in London and Devonshire, and who died some twenty-three years ago at Cheltenham.

The fact that two almost direct descendants of the same family have reached a centenarian age would seem to point to the inference that centenarianism is hereditary.

Certainly observation favors the idea that ordinarily longevity is hereditary.

What a comforting thought for those who are able to trace their ancestors back through long years!

Officers' Training School.

The Defence Minister of Australia has decided to establish a Central School of Instruction for selected candidates for commissions in the Australian Imperial Force. The school, which will be in the neighborhood of the Royal Military College at Duntroon, will have 400 candidates, and will be under the supervision of the staff of the Military College. This will ensure a uniform standard of instruction throughout Australia. It has also been decided to establish a non-commissioned officers' school in each district, and no non-commissioned officer will be permitted to embark with the Australian Imperial Force until he has qualified at one of these schools. Candidates for commissions will also be required to pass through the non-commisisoned officers' school.

An African Myth.

Kilimanjaro, where General Smuts is marching from victory to victory, is believed by the natives to be crowned with silver, and on this ground has been identified with the "silver mountain" which Aristotle supposed to be the source of the Nile. It was discovered by some missionaries of the British Church Missionary Society in 1848. A revolt of mountain tribes against Teutonic tyranny took place in 1892, which resulted in a disastrous defeat of the German force and the death of Baron Bulow. After that the Kaiser insisted on the withdrawal of all British missionaries from Kilimanjaro, the pretext being that their presence encouraged rebellion and diminished German prestige.

Economy.

"There is much truth in the saying of the cynic, that the economical wife is a woman who never allows a crumb to fall from her husband's table without carefully picking it up and putting it in her husband's bed," says a writer in an English paper.

Meat Exports Grow.

A remarkable increase in the export of frozen meat from the Port of Auckland is shown by recent returns. The shipments during 1915 were greater by nearly 77 per cent. than those in 1914.

Butter-making competitions were introduced at the Canadian National Exhibition in 1899 for the first time in America. They are similar to those given at the Dairy Shows in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant, himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY

NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER IXV Continued

"Because, Mr. Carter," he at length replied, "I have told all that I can tell about this affair."

"Is that so?"

"Yes."

'You mean, Fenno, all that you will tell, not all that you can tell," said Nick, in a considerate way. "I judge that you are unexpectedly involved in some complication of circumstances the nature of which you cannot honorably disclose."

"Then you don't think me guilty of the crime?"

"No."

"Thank you for that," Fenno said warmly. "Yet I cannot tell more than I have told."

"Not even to me confidentially?"

"I regret to say that I must refuse."

"Do you realize that your life may possibly depend upon your disclosing all you know of this affair?"

"I realize it very keenly," Fenno gravely bowed. "Nevertheless, I cannot say more than I have said. I have given my word, Mr. Carter, and I never went back on that in my life. I shall not do so now, not even for the sake of life."

"Bully for you!" said Nick approvingly. "We'll take it for granted, then, that your situation is what I have suggested. That being the case, Fenno, you certainly are not so bound by any pledge that you must restrain me from further investigating this affair in my own way and in your behalf?"

"No; certainl not."

"I am at liberty to learn anything that I can personally discover?"

"Yes."

"Then, that's good enough for the present," said Nick decidedly. "I'm going to ask you a few questions. If any of them are objectionable, just say so, Fenno, and we'll cut them out. Now, to begin with, did you see that young lady who fainted in the corridor?"

"No, I did not. I heard her mentioned, but I did not see her."

"Naturally, then, you cannot say who she was," Nick remarked, with some secret doubts to the contrary. "Did you see any person in the corridor just before you entered Judge Packard's room?"

"No, not one."

"Another lady was there when I entered, who, I have since learned, is Mrs. Packard Selkirk," said Nick. "Are you acquainted with her?"

"Yes, and with her husband," Fenno replied. "He is a wealthy brewer. I have known Mrs. Selkirk for many years. In fact, we have always been friends."

"You saw her this afternoon?"

"I saw her look into Judge Packard's room when I was explaining my presence there."

"That was when I chiefly noticed her," said Nick.

Then he waited for a reply, for some disclosure explaining what he had observed at that time, but Fenno made no response. Feeling sure that a direct question would not evoke an explanation, if not voluntarily made, and thinking it might be to his own advantage to disclose what he had seen and suspected, Nick let the matter drop.

"Do you wish to tell me why you were in disguise at the Hotel Royal?" he asked.

"No." Fenno shook his head. "I cannot consistently do so."

"That's all right," smiled Nick, patting his hearer's knee when he observed the reluctance with which he declined to explain his conduct. "I'll find out, sooner or later, without any help from you. Let me alone for that. Now, there is one more question bearing directly on the crime, and then I'll switch to other matters."

"What question, Mr. Carter?"

"Fenno," Nick said impressively, "do you know who killed Judge Packard?"

"On my word of honor, Mr. Carter, I do not."

"Have you any suspicion?"

"Not the slightest. I am entirely in the dark."

"I believe you, Mr. Fenno," bowed Nick. "That has been my opinion from the first."

"I am a thousand times obliged to you, Mr. Carter," Fenno answered feelingly. "May I now ask you one question?"

"Certainly. What is it?"

"Have you any idea who killed Judge Packard?"

Nick smiled somewhat oddly, and sat back on the cot, clasping his hands over his knees.

"No, not exactly," he replied. "Ideas don't cut much ice, Fenno, unless one has evidence with which to back them up. I have a good many ideas, some of which may be right, or all may be wrong. It's up to me to run down the evidence that will enable me to sift the wheat from the chaff."

"You will do that?"

"As sure as you're facing me at this moment," Nick nodded confidently.

"I rejoice to hear you say so."

"No doubt."

"Yet I cannot for the life of me see which way you'll turn first."

"Well, I had time to work my thinking machine while at dinner," Nick said, with a smile. "I tried to size up some of the circumstances involving this affair. The case presents many complications and possibilities. It's so bad a mix-up, in fact, that I must proceed with some caution. In view of the decision rendered to-day by Judge Packard, and of the fact that a desire for revenge frequently drives men to desperation, you very naturally might be the first person suspected of the murder."

"I admit that."

"And others very possibly foresaw it," Nick dryly added, "and plotted very craftily to involve you in incriminating circumstances."

"Heavens!" Fenno stared frowningly at the floor. "I cannot believe that, Mr. Carter, on my word."

"Nevertheless, you are in a situation from which, on your word, you cannot honorably clear yourself," Nick pointedly replied. "It seems rather improbable that this entire complication of circumstances was the result of chance or accident.'

"Very true, Mr. Carter; it does."

"It is also rather strange that Packard—assuming you innocent—should have been killed so quickly after handing down his decision in favor of the United Transit Company," Nick proceeded. "I suspect, for reasons I will not now disclose, that there may be some connection between this very important decision and his violent death. Be that as it may, I have plans which I want carried out, Fenno, and I shall require your aid."

Fenno's gray eyes began to light with eager interest, yet he quickly shook his head.

"My aid, indeed?" he said rather sadly. "You may command me in any way, Mr. Carter, but I fear I cannot help you in this place. If I were at liberty—ah! but there's no hope of that, the charge against me being a capital offence."

"Stop a moment," said Nick. "Will you agree to follow my instructions, in so far as you can reasonably do so, and conceal the fact that I am at work with you?"

"I will, indeed, and very gladly."

"I'll come to the point then, and give you an idea of my plans."

"I'm all ears, I assure you."

"If I am right in some of my suspicions," Nick began, "a possibility exists that this murder is a direct consequence of the long litigation over United Transit. You have been a very serious block in the way of this enterprise, Fenno, from the start."

"True."

"If a final desperate master stroke were contemplated by the powers you have so vigorously opposed, one of the most natural moves first to be made by them would be that of—getting you out of their way.'

"By Jove, that's so!" Fenno darkly muttered, quickly seeing the significance of Nick's shrewd deduction. "Can it be that Todd and his gang have brought about this state of affairs?"

"Well, Todd and his gang, as you term them, are the persons chiefly interested in United Transit," Nick dryly answered. "One proceeding on this theory of mine would naturally suspect those having the greatest interest."

"That's true, Mr. Carter."

"There was a bad break in United Transit in the stock market this morning, wasn't there?"

"Yes, very," Fenno nodded. "Nearly sixteen points."

"Were you responsible for it?"

"Not at all. I did very little selling to-day. I preferred to wait for the Packard decision."

"Do you know who did the selling?"

"I do not. I only know there was a raft of the stock thrown on the market."

"Well, I may be able to learn a little later who was so bearish," said Nick. "Here's a point you may not have thought of Fenno: If Todd and his crowd were up to any crooked game, the success of which would be favorable to the United Transit Company, they very likely would have temporarily sacrificed big blocks of the stock, solely to indicate that they feared unfavorable developments, instead of favorable, and thus avert subsequent suspicion that they knew anything to the contrary."

The Name Cuba.

Cuba is the name by which the island was originally known to the Lucayan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it. One of its villages or cities was called by them Cubanacan, and it is reported that from the similarity of sounds Columbus, still supposing himself to be on the coast of Asia, imagined that this must be a city of Kublai Khan, the Tartar sovereign celebrated by Marco Polo. The survival of the original name for Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many times since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called in his memory Fernandina. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.

The Social Scale.

Any one having acute information as to what the social scale is will kindly communicate with this office instanter. Although a favorite expression in the best of authors' families, diligent research fails to reveal its true character, its limitations, denotations and connotations. The dictionary is very painstaking in telling us what scales are—not only scales in general, but numerous varieties of scales in particular. It is similarly minute in defining the word social, but there is never a hint as to what the social scale is. How is it established? It must measure something in connection with society. But what is its unit of measurement? Is it dollars per stratum, ancestors per century, shirt sleeves per generation, idleness per family or what?

Without these and other accurate details we must all remain at sea. Many of us at this very moment may think we are ascending the social scale when we are really traveling rapidly in the other direction.

William the Conqueror introduced horseshoes into England. Stirrups were, however, unknown to the ancients, who had posts erected on their roads to enable horsemen to mount.

An Artist's Fad.

THE ART OF SAVING

The Illusive Dollar That Burns Our Fingers.

LUXURY GROWS WITH SALARY

A Discussion of How, With Increase of Income and No Apparent Increase of Pleasures, Coin Still Takes on the Vanishing Qualities of Mist.

"It is easy enough to make money," said a business man the other day. "The hard thing to learn is how to save and how to spend it. The first year I was married I was earning three thousand, last year I pulled down four, and this year I am getting away with five. As I've said, it's easy enough to make money—any man with average intelligence can do it—but how in the world are you going to save it? I don't seem to be getting any more pleasure or comfort for the five thousand than I did for three. I am certain I don't put away any more than I did on the smaller salary, and the question that stumps me is, Where does the money go? There is certainly a leak somewhere. The whole trouble lies in the fact that I don't know how to spend it."

This situation is one that many a family faces. All may not be in circumstances as comfortable as those of the man mentioned above, but the situation is practically the same.

Family thrift is almost an unknown quantity in the average American household. Our men are famous for their generosity, and most of their wives run their households on the same generous scale. As the income grows larger the demands on it grow bigger, but so gradually does this change take place that it is almost imperceptible. A luxury or two here, a pleasure there, little things which seem of no consequence at the time of their indulgence, but mount up at an alarming rate at the end of a year.

It is quite true that a man might not be able to put his hand on a single tangible thing which he was enjoying with a salary of $5,000 a year that he did not have when his earning capacity was little more than half this amount. Extravagance creeps upon us so gradually that the inroads it makes upon our incomes are hardly noticed at the time. It is only when we sit down and take account of our mode of existence that we realize we are spending more and getting less for the money.

Every sane man and woman wants to save. They know it is their only insurance against the future. No matter how well matters are going at the present moment, every family stands the chance of facing a rainy day, and if they are wise they wish to be prepared for that dreary occasion. Sickness or loss of position has nothing like the dread for the man and wife who have a comfortable savings account tucked away in some bank as it has for the poor individuals who spend every cent as it comes in, draining the family exchequer to its last cent at the end of each month. Sickness or loss of position to such persons is a disaster, sometimes even a tragedy.

Perhaps you think it is impossible to save on the salary you are earning at present. In many instances, unfortunately, this is true. But, whatever your income, sit down and make out a family budget that shall provide for a certain percentage of savings regularly.

At Boarding School.

It was in the dining room of a certain boarding school for young ladies. The place had a reputation of giving pretty poor grub, and the girls never lost an opportunity to rap it one way or the other if the opportunity presented itself.

The other morning at breakfast Miss Jones, the most popular girl in the school, as well as the biggest joker, suddenly surprised everybody by remarking, "Oh, dear me, are we all here?"

"Why, certainly," replied the dignified matron. And she proceeded to count all the girls and call the roll. "Every one is here; no one is missing."

"Then I feel very much relieved," replied the sly one, with a wink at the other girls. "I see by the morning paper that a human skeleton was found in the outskirts of this city."

There was a chorus of giggles from the girls, and the matron indignantly rapped for order.

Liszt and Leipzig.

After young Felix Weingartner had finished his work at the Leipzig conservatory he went, as was the fashion at that time, to present himself to Franz Liszt at Weimar. Now, Leipzig, conservative in music then, as it is today, had never received the works of Franz Liszt with sufficient warmth to please him. In fact, Leipzig had shown itself quite unfriendly toward his compositions, and the great master of the piano resented it. Weingartner was presented.

"Charmed," said Liszt. "Where have you studied?"

"At Leipzig, meister," replied Weingartner.

"Leipzig, Leipzig?" said Liszt, as if he had difficulty in recalling the city, which, as a matter of fact, is only two or three hours away. "Oh, yes!" and the light of remembrance came into his eyes. "That's a fine place to take breakfast when you're on the way from here to Dresden."

Earliest School Books.

Among the discoveries in the archaeological excavations in ancient Babylonia are some stone tablets believed to have been used as schoolbooks in the first regular school ever held in the world. They are in the collection of the University of Pennsylvania.

These prehistoric text books have marks proving that they were used in a school conducted in a temple in Nippur more than 2,300 years B. C. This school is known to have been in existence at least 1,000 years, and no records have yet been found to indicate the existence of any preceding it. The tablets contain notes upon several sciences, evidently made upon the stone surface by a stylus. Several of them contain two forms of characters, indicating that the pupils attempted to copy the work of the teacher.

His Narrow Escape.

First Traveler—So you have returned from Africa? Have any narrow escapes?

Second Traveler—Only one—a regular prize winner, I should think.

First Traveler—Let me hear it.

Second Traveler—Well, I was chased by a big lion, and, having no cartridges left, I threw away my rifle and faced the brute. But as he sprang at me I caught him by the lower jaw with one hand and by the nose with the other. And there I stood and held his mouth wide open until he starved to death. A narrow escape, eh?—Exchange.

Old Seville.

Seville, one of the oldest cities of Spain, was a place of importance under Rome and later was the Moorish capital during the eleventh century. It was the country's chief commercial port when the new world was discovered and rose to great prosperity on profits from the Spanish main.

Ambiguous.

"Alice, if I told you that I loved you dearly, that there was no other girl in all the world for me, would you promise to be mine?"

"Would you mind telling me first whether that is a proposal or a hypothetical question?"

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Sleepy Time Story About an Interesting Little Animal.

GAY FELLOW OF THE WOODS.

Amusing Ways of the Raccoon—Very Dainty In His Feeding—Catches Fish Like His Big Brother, the Bear Things For Young Folks to Know—A Prize Baby.

This evening, said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and little Ned, I am going to tell you about

MOOWEESUK, THE COON.

Mooweesuk, the little coon, builds his house in the very quietest spot in the wood, far from inquisitive neighbors. When twilight shadows gather and the big, round, yellow moon creeps over the mountain little Mooweesuk comes out of his house to look about and feed on frogs and fishes.

The coon is a joyous little animal and is very particular to wash, when possible, all food before eating it. Coons are fond of many things, roots, clams, fish, the eggs of birds and sweet corn being much appreciated by these little wood folk.

When they go out for a walk the mother always leads the way, and the children follow, bear fashion, in single file behind her.

The coon can also walk on its hind feet, sitting up like bruin.

Mooweesuk relishes most things found in the woods and when hungry will eat ants, worms and beetles, found by grubbing in hollow logs. Coons are very fond of sweet sap, turtles and watercress and wintergreen berries. In order to get the turtle meat they drop a stone upon its shell and crack it. The little chaps also relish chicken and pumpkin seeds.

The coon has a very clever way of catching his fish. Like the bear, he knows how to flip it out of the water with his paw. But in addition to this he has learned how to attract the fish to the surface by dipping his whiskers into the water and moving them slightly. Mr. Finny is a bit curious, comes too close to the surface and is flipped out of the water by Mooweesuk's paw.

The coon makes a most entertaining pet, as he is full of mischief and a droll little creature and has a childish pleasure in new playthings.

Presence of Mind.

A boy in northern Alabama recently, while coming from the postoffice along a country road, saw on the other side of a narrow valley and a large stream over which there was no bridge the cabin of a neighbor beginning to catch fire at one end. The lad yelled an alarm, but the inmates, who he rightly believed were at supper and whom he could glimpse through an open door, failed to hear him. He was carrying some rolled papers that had come in the mail. Having seen or heard of a megaphone he quickly tore off wrappers, rolled the broad sheets into a cone and began to roar through the little end: "Maynard, Maynard! Fire! Fire! Fire!" This the people heard, or enough of the strange noise to excite their curiosity, and they came out to discover the flames and quickly put them out. The boy may have been given credit for quick thinking; he certainly deserved it.

A Pretty Baby Boy.

Recently there was held in New York city a "baby week," which ended in a parade, in which several hundred little people took part. John Ryan, eight months old, who was adjudged the most perfect baby, won the first prize, a gold cup. The lady who is holding John in her arms is Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, who gave the cup to John. Ten other babies received gold medals. The first thing Baby John did when Mrs. Hearst gave him the cup was to try to put it in his mouth. He failed because his mouth was too small. The hundreds of other babies present looked on, but without the slightest evidence of envy.

HAVE YOU HEARD
that eczema cases, which have defied all other treatment, yield to Zam-Buk? An illustration of this, is found in the case of Mr. J. L. Frenette, of Nigadoo, N.B. He writes:—
"My head was entirely covered with eczema, and although I tried numerous remedies and received medical treatment, I got no benefit. Then I heard of Zam-Buk and tried it. The first few applications stopped the burning. Gradually the inflammation was drawn out, and before long the sores began to heal. Perseverance with Zam-Buk resulted in a complete and permanent cure."

How Boston Might Be Destroyed.

One of the most novel methods yet conceived of destroying a city is described in Popular Science Monthly. The author says:

"An enemy need not bother mustering battleships or waste his time bombarding from afar the intellectual hub of this land of ours. In time of peace let him have his spies build a big pumping station right in the middle of that city, and at the proper time start drawing indiscriminately from the ground below the water saturating the subsoil. You know a large number of Boston's big buildings rest upon floating foundations. Pump out the water in the supporting quicksand, and down those structures would tumble into the yawning cavities so created. It would be far more effective in its demolition than the projectiles of a hostile fleet."

Salting a Census.

Ernest Edgren, formerly commercial agent for a railroad at Nanking, China, and later with the Pacific Mail company at Hongkong, is thus quoted in the Kansas City Star:

"No one knows how many people there are in China," he said. "The census figures say 400,000,000, but that is a guess. No census ever has been taken. The government arrives at its population figures by an old method. It has a monopoly on salt. By estimating the average per capita consumption of salt and dividing the total consumption of salt by that figure it is able to make a fair guess."

America's Largest Snake.

The largest American serpent is the anaconda, which may attain a length of thirty feet. It inhabits tropical America and is a handsome animal, with dark round spots scattered over its whole body on a groundwork of rich brown. It is very fond of water and haunts the banks of rivers, lakes and streams, there lying in wait for any deer or peccary which may come to the margin of the water to drink.

Philosophy That Failed.

"I don't see Si Perkins any more at the grocery lyceum."

"Si sorter lost caste. He was setting on a cracker barrel arguing that life wasn't worth living. A lamp exploded."

"Well?"

"Si was the first man out."

Phil May's Habits.

The all night and next day habits of Phil May, the artist, have furnished material for many a story. Joe Tapley, the singer, said that he came across May one night and heard that the latter had not been to bed for four nights and days. He remonstrated, and May said: "Never mind, Joe; we'll make a bargain. Don't you lose any sleep on my account, and I'll promise that as soon as I feel tired I'll go to bed!"

Not Baby's Color.

"I was rather surprised when the doctor told me not to give baby any blue milk."

"Why?"

"Of course baby is a brunette, and blue is not her color. But I didn't suppose that musty old doctors knew about such things."

THE DAILY TUB.

To Say Nothing of Hygiene, Beauty Demands a Good Scrubbing.

It would be wrong to prescribe hot water baths for all the world of women, for there are undoubtedly conditions when they would be harmful. But daily tubbing in water of some temperature or other is required for looks and health, and if the heart is in good condition the benefits of the hot tub are undeniable. So the long dead beauties of ancient Greece and Rome kept themselves fair, and so the beauty of to-day builds up her looks when she finds they are beginning to wane with time of a fevered life. Every weak woman anxious for her looks crowds the Turkish bath, boiling and steaming away complexion hurts, rejuvenating muscles, lightening her body of its superfluous flesh, soothing the nerves. And if women are used to such baths, or to some other preferred kind, they feel as fit as race horses for a week afterward.

Some medical facts concerning the usual effects of the hot or cold bath give this illuminating information: The hot bath facilitates and stimulates the natural combustion processes of the body. The cold bath, to produce the same results, lavishes just four times the same amount of energy. The cold bath is not sufficiently cleansing for the health of the skin, and when there is a predisposition to skin troubles the chilly water tends to increase them. The process called "hardening," which consists in submitting one's system to the shock of cold plunges, is thought, too, the worst thing in the world for any but the most vigorous constitutions.

The Beauty of Order.

A resourceful mother, remembering the latent love of beauty that lurks in the heart of every child, drew on it heavily when the time came when she was compelled to instill a love of order in her little girl's heart.

An old cottage set had been carefully enameled in a soft shade of cream, and dainty blue scalloped covers were made for the bureau and the low chest of drawers. Against a pale blue wall paper with a narrow cut out border of old fashioned pink roses the contrast was delightful.

The two top drawers of the bureau were divided into three compartments, each by means of heavy cardboard, and in these sections gloves, handkerchiefs, collars, ribbons, belts, and stockings were neatly arranged. There was no possible excuse for cluttering up things, and Betty exclaimed over the skillful arrangement.

The lower drawers and the drawers of the chest were filled with underwear. The closet cupboard was fitted with two rows of hooks. On the upper row hung Betty's stiffly starched linen frocks, each on a separate hanger to avoid mussing. Below, where the little girl could reach them herself, hung her gingham school dresses and her bathrobe. On the door was a well made shoe bag, and, in a corner her father had put up a little shelf to hold her best hat, carefully wrapped in a gay cretonne cover.

On the bedroom floor a simple rag rug in rose and white lent a warm note of color to the dainty room, and two low wicker chairs and Betty's little white desk stood in the corner by the window.

With such a well planned "place for everything," Betty learned instinctively what years of insistence would not have taught her—the perfect beauty of order.

Waists Are Large.

Waists are comfortably large, occasionally fitted with snugness, but not really compressed. Collars offer wide variety. They are high all around, high in the back and of any one of a half dozen low cuts in front, semi-low all around.

A good many fichu arrangements appear, but they are the becoming and very skillfully draped fichus that are not so trying as the demure surplice fichu of earlier days.

A Painter and His Pet.

Rembrandt, the famous painter, had a monkey he loved very much. The monkey took sick and died as Rembrandt was painting the picture of a noble family. He was told at once, and he commenced to cry, and then he started to draw the picture he was making. Nothing would stop him from doing this, although every one tried to do so. When the man he was painting the picture for saw the picture he refused to take it, for Rembrandt told him the picture was of the monkey and not of his family.

Cream Salad Dressing.

Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, two and one-half tablespoonfuls melted butter, one level teaspoonful flour, a shake of pepper and two egg yolks together until smooth. Add three-fourths cupful of thin cream. (You may take the top of the milk in the bottle and have the rest of the milk to use for something else.) Then add slowly one-fourth cupful vinegar or lemon juice, stirring as you add it. Cook over hot water until thickened. If too thick after standing to cool, thin with cream or milk.

A Fashion Tip.

The neck line of the modish summer frock is much wider and therefore much more becoming than was last year's—that is, the frock is cut away at the sides of the throat as well as in front, showing something of the shoulder line.

EXPERTS IN TRACKING.

Australian Natives of Both Sexes Trained From Childhood.

The Australian aboriginals are the finest trackers in the world, London Answers declares.

On many occasions they have performed feats which are almost beyond belief. But to them the work is quite habitual. The boys are taught to track from birth.

The women are just as expert as the men. Horse tracks are child's play to them. They can track a horse at full gallop. They can track anything—possums, snakes, iguanas, even beetles leave sufficient trail for them to work on.

The standard of honor among these tribes is high. When one of them breaks their strict code, fearing the wrath of the tribe, he bolts and, knowing he will be pursued, uses all his knowledge in an effort to elude those in search of him. But it is questionable if there is a single case on record where he escaped.

What might be called classes in tracking are held for the youngsters. The tutor will get them in a body and then disappear into the bush and do everything he can to make them lose his tracks. He will tiptoe along fallen logs, swim a quarter of a mile along a stream, double on his tracks, and so on.

Finally he returns to the boys, who then set out to pick up the tracks.

His Painful Specialty.

"My second cousin, Perry Petty, for years kept a series of diaries," related H. H. Harsh, "and had a habit of producing and disproving thereby almost every reminiscence that was uttered in his presence. He seemed to feel that it was his duty to do so. His funeral was the largest ever held in the neighborhood where he had resided, people coming for many miles to pay their last tributes of respect to a conscientious man and to see for themselves that he absolutely was dead."

Does Anger Correct?

Not so long ago we passed a small garden in which stood a sunny haired baby plucking from a rose the bright red petals and watching them float like fairy boats to the green grass at her feet. Then came a storm and a tragedy. A dark being sprang from nowhere with a terrible shadow upon his face and harsh words upon his lips. The being shook the baby roughly by the arm. The baby was smiling like an angel. There was anger in that clutch at the rose child's arm, and there was a blow in the words that accompanied the grasp. Then the creature went away, and we rubbed our eyes in wonder because it was dressed like a woman.

Clothed by the Year.

At one time tailors used to help a man to dress cheaply by taking back his old clothes. An advertisement in the Times of Nov. 19, 1834, states that "gentlemen can, if they choose, be dressed by contract. Two suits per year, 6 guineas; extra fine quality, the very best, 7 guineas; three suits, 10 guineas; four suits, 12 guineas, the old suit to be returned before a new one is obtained." Overcoats were obtainable on the same system, but clients were specially recommended the advertiser's "Spanish cloaks of superfine blue cloth, a complete circle of nine and a half yards, 4 guineas." Apparently these would never wear out.—London Globe.

The Origin of Pyrography.

About a century ago an artist named Cranch was standing one day in front of a fire in his home at Axminster. Over the fireplace was an oaken mantelpiece, and it occurred to Cranch that this expanse of wood might be improved by a little ornamentation. He picked up the poker, heated it red hot and began to sketch a bold design. The result pleased him so much that he elaborated his work and began to attempt other fire pictures on panels of wood. These met with a ready sale, and Cranch soon gave all his time to his new art. This was the beginning of what is now known as pyrography.—Exchange.

Very Brief.

A record of brevity in a holiday correspondence was established by a Frenchman in the eighteenth century. Voltaire and Piton, the epigrammatist, exchanged challenges to write the shortest possible letter. So when Voltaire was starting on a journey he wrote to Piton, "Eo rus," which is the complete Latin for "I am going to the country." Piton's answer was just "I" —complete Latin for "go."

In business correspondence the record is divided between Victor Hugo, who, anxious to know how his "Les Miserables" was going, wrote to the publisher, "?" and the publisher, who triumphantly replied "!"

IN YOUR KITCHEN.

Not Expensive Equipment, but Arrangement Counts.

STEPS IN GETTING MEALS.

An Expert Tells Us the Necessary Work In Preparing and Clearing Away Foods, While Cutting Out All Pottering That Takes Time and Energy.

Have you ever watched yourself preparing supper? What are all the steps you must take from the time you take the roast from the refrigerator until the last dish is washed and laid away on its shelf?

1. Remove foods from refrigerator, pantry or other storage.
2. Beat, cut or mix materials and put in cooking utensils.
3. Place on stove or cooking device.
4. Serve completed dish to dining table.

These four steps are taken in preparing any meal in any kitchen and are always done in this order, although we may not notice it. This is the reason why the equipment which corresponds to these steps or on which they are done must also be arranged in the same order—that is, the equipment which corresponds to step 1 is refrigerator or pantry, to step 2 the table or kitchen cabinet, to step 3 a stove or fireless cooker, to step 4 another table or working surface.

Because these same steps are taken in every kitchen the arrangement of this equipment can be exactly the same. In some homes a larger refrigerator may be required, or there may be an electric stove instead of a gas stove. But the placing or the arrangement of them will be the same in their respective kitchens. So you can arrange your particular equipment in the same right order, so that the refrigerator, table, stove and serving table are in one group on one side of the room. For clearing away meals—

1. Take soiled dishes from dining table and lay to right of sink.
2. Wash dishes.
3. Drain to left of sink.
4. Dry and lay away.

Therefore on the other side of the kitchen we arrange the equipment to correspond to these steps. In other words, the "clearing away" equipment of drainboards, sink and shelves are in another separate group from those of "preparing."

The basis of the labor saving kitchen is here: Keep the equipment of preparing the meal and clearing away the meal entirely separate. The reason some kitchens are difficult to work in is just because the sink is next the stove or the refrigerator is away from the kitchen table, or there is some other poor arrangement which makes it necessary for the worker to trot back and forth, taking useless steps. You will know how to arrange every single piece of equipment in your kitchen if you see that it is so placed that in working you move continuously in the same direction, making a "chain of steps." For instance, you know that it must be wrong to have a sink at the right of the stove because you never take the hot pots from the store and lay them into the sink! No! You need a table to the right of the stove, do you not? Similarly you want the shelves on which dishes are to be laid away near the sink to avoid carrying trays some distance.

WISHING AND GETTING.

An Old Man's Realized Day Dream and the Moral It Teaches.

They had started in the most primitive way, the man and his wife, back in the little log house, but they were dreaming of the day when they would own a farm of their own and not have to work so hard. After a time their hard toil was rewarded, and they owned a farm. Then it seemed desirable to add to this tract, and they worked a little harder. A new house seemed a necessary accompaniment to the large farm, so the work could not stop.

A son came to the age when he must be educated and have his chance in life, and they toiled on. All the time the old man dreamed of the days ahead when he could stop work and take life easy. Somehow the days did not come, or he did not recognize them when they came, for he kept on working until he had grown old and worn. Then his health failed, and he had to stop work.

The son for whom they had given precious years out of their lives now showed his gratitude by his gentle, unfailing love and care. It seemed to others that the goal had been reached—that the old man could now enjoy life, surrounded as he was by every comfort and attention. But he was quiet and sad, sitting with head bowed on his toil worn hands.

A neighbor, stopping in for a little visit, asked, "How are you getting along, grandpa?" Then the secret of all his sadness burst forth as he answered earnestly, "Oh, if I could only get out and work!"

What queer things our dreams are after all!

PRETTY ROUGH SPORT.

The Game of "the Bounding Brothers of the Bosporus."

Many extraordinary forms of amusement have been devised by army officers from the earliest times down to the present day, but none perhaps have more startling characteristics than the following new and original game, which Sir Robert Baden-Powel describes in "Memories of India:"

It was introduced into the mess by a brother of our colonel, who came to stay with him. We believed him to be a quiet, harmless planter from Behar, and so he seemed throughout the evening, both during and after dinner, when he remained watching us playing the fool in various ways for our own amusement. But evidently our ways did not strike him as original, and he therefore invited us to play the great game of the bounding brothers of the Bosporus, and when he had once shown us we joined most heartily in the sport.

The game had few rules, but a certain amount of etiquette. The apparatus consisted of all the furniture, which was piled in a heap near the center of the room, and a writing table, which was placed a couple of yards from it. You were expected then to clap your hands three times—that was the etiquette of the game—then run at the table and turn heels over head on it into the pile of furniture, shouting as you did so, "I am a bounding brother of the Bosporus!" That was all. It was quite simple, but how it hurt when you landed on the upturned legs of a chair or the side of a table!

Ada Rehan's Bandsman.

Miss Ada Rehan used to say that the finest appreciation of her acting she ever observed came from a bandsman in the orchestra of a Birmingham theater. When she played the angry Katharine she had one piece of superb fury—a swift march to the back of the stage, a right about turn and then a straight march down the stage, pulling up short and sharp at the footlights. One night she saw a bandsman sitting directly in her line of advance shrink back in his chair at the moment of the full stop at the footlights.

"Sure, he thought, I wasn't going to stop on the stage," Miss Rehan said. "I wonder if he is married to a Katharine."

The next day she sent him a box of cigars.—Manchester Guardian.

Home Ties.

A sedate banker of Hamilton, Canada, was sitting in his office one morning when his ten-year-old hopeful drifted in, bearing with him an expression of unutterable gloom.

"Anything gone wrong, boy?" interrogated the financier. "Why, at your age you ought to be cheerful all the time."

"I know it, Frank; I know it," responded the youngster. "I'm doin' the best I can; but, honest, I had a terrible time up at the house with your wife this morning."

The Parental Bulwark.

"I'm going to be a burglar when I grow up."

"Why, Johnny, that's very wicked, and, besides, burglars are sent to prison."

"Not me. My father's a lawyer."

"A diplomat is a man who can steal your hat and coat and explain it so nicely that you give him your watch and chain."—London Telegraph.

Dropped in on the Bears.

Some years back a visitor dropped in on the bears at the zoological gardens. A hat fell into the pit, and its owner at once jumped in after it. He alighted on a bear who was enjoying a doze in the sun. The bear made him welcome. It seized him by the shoulder and waltzed him round and round. Luckily the visitor kept his feet until a keeper opened a side door and pulled him into safety. But the hat was left behind. On the following day the man sent to the society a letter in which he claimed the cost of a new hat.—London Tatler.

He Had Some Conceit.

"How did you come out?" asked his friend. "Will she have you?"

"Her answer," replied the diplomatic attache, "is partially satisfactory; enough so to continue negotiations. She says if she ever does marry it will be a man of good looks, courage and ability."

"You know I told you a few days after I got my new job that the boss said he'd raise my wages in a month or so."

"Yes, and didn't he?"

"No, I misunderstood him. He meant he'd try and raise my first week's wages by that time. I haven't got it yet!"—Stray Stories.

Plenty Left.

When Oscar Hammerstein was building his London opera house a head carpenter came to him one day with the information that a mechanic had just had two fingers cut off by a circular saw.

"Don't bother me!" shouted Hammerstein. "Don't bother me! Hasn't he eight fingers left?"

Doing It Himself.

Terrific, tumultuous noises inside the room.

Outside, little Johnny listening spellbound.

Next scene, little Johnny asking his mother the meaning of the terrific, tumultuous noises.

"Hush, my small son," says mother. "Pa's trying to save the price of a shave."—London Telegraph.

Circular Boats.

Still used to a considerable extent, circular boats in the Tigris may be seen at Bagdad, just as they appeared 2,000 years ago, when Herodotus wrote: "The boats which come down the river to Babylon are circular and made of skins. The frames, which are of willow, are cut in the country of the Armenians above Assyria, and on these, which serve for hulls, a covering of skins is stretched outside, and thus the boats are made, without either stem or stern, quite round, like a shield. They are then entirely filled with straw, and their cargo is put on board, after which they are suffered to float down the stream. Their chief freight is wine, stored in casks made of the wood of the palm tree. They are managed by two men, who stand upright in them, each plying an oar, one pulling and the other pushing. The boats are of various sizes, some larger, some smaller. The biggest reach as high as 5,000 talents' burthen. Each vessel has a live ass on board. Those of larger size have more than one."

Tricks of the Trade.

When the little blond stenographer visited her friend, the tall brunette bookkeeper, the other day she found the latter busy with a lot of envelopes and some paste.

"Why don't you get good envelopes so they'll stick?" she asked.

"These did stick once," the brunette confided, "but I'm fixing them again."

"What's the idea?"

"Whenever people come into the office for my boss he likes to make them think he is rushed to death."

"Uh huh!"

"So you see I am fixing up these old letters. He will make a great fuss opening them when a customer calls. He does that so much we have a hard time keeping a supply of letters to stick up."—Exchange.

The Word Gaiters.

Episcopal gaiters cannot date from a very remote antiquity. The very word "gaiters" is almost a newcomer to the language. Johnson's Dictionary does not recognize its existence. It does not occur before 1700, and even in 1802 a military dictionary had to define it as "a sort of spatterdashes." "Guetre," however, the French original, goes back at least to the fifteenth century, and the origin of that is lost, though etymologists compare all sorts of words in all sorts of languages, including an old German word for a baby's christening cloth. The one certainty is that gaiters has nothing to do with gait in spite of the punning line in the "Rejected Addresses"—"Lax in their gaiters, laxer in their gait."—London Spectator.

Big and Little Bibles.

There are no fewer than 110 different editions of the Oxford Bible in English, varying from the magnificent folio edition for pulpit purposes to the "brilliant" Bible, the smallest edition of the Scriptures in the world. Of the revised version fourteen editions are published. More than a million copies of the revised New Testament had been ordered before the day of publication in May of 1881, and it is claimed that the workingmen of the establishment refused a bribe of some £4,000 to furnish a copy of the book before the day of issue. The largest folio Bible printed in Oxford measures 19 by 12 inches, and no erratum has as yet been found in it. The "Brilliant Text Bible" measures 3¾ by 2¼ inches and is three-quarters of an inch thick and bound weighs less than three ounces.—Exchange.

The Kick Subtle.

A man who lives in Savannah and owns a plantation in Chatham county, Ga., bought a mule with a reputation for owning a set of gifted and hair triggered hind legs and shipped her out to his place to be used in plowing for cotton.

A Sunday or so later he visited the plantation. The darky whose particular job it was to care for the working stock came limping up to him to report.

"Jim," asked the owner of the plantation, "does that new mule kick much?"

"Kick?" said Jim. "Boss, dat dar mule kin kick de sweetnen' right out of yore coffee!"

Portugal the Polite.

Portugal has been acclaimed as the politest country in the world. Were I asked, wrote the Earl of Carnarvon after visiting that country in 1827 what society had reached the most polished form I should say that of Portugal. Portuguese politeness is delightful because it is by no means purely artificial, but flows in a great measure from a natural kindliness of feeling and extends to all classes and affects all relationships.—London Standard.

Hops as a Vegetable.

Of hops for the brewing vat we hear a good deal, but what of hops as a vegetable? The Romans ate them, and the Germans, at least the Bavarians, do so, while our own old fashioned country folk can relish a dish of "hop tops." Here is the recipe: Take only the very young shoots, which boil. Serve either with melted butter and a little gravy or with the plain salad dressing composed of oil, vinegar, pepper and salt. There you have a wholesome dish such as was not disdained by the epicures of ancient Rome.—London Chronicle.

Bad Enough.

"I think that society editor is a mean, horrid old thing, so there!" exclaimed wife, looking up from the morning paper.

"What's the matter?" asked her husband, with a grin. "Did he take you at your word and leave your name out of the paper?"

"No," replied wife; "it isn't quite so bad as that, but he went and got the description of my gown all wrong."

Horseshoeing in Chile.

Methods of horseshoeing in Chile are still primitive, the tools used being simple and few, consisting usually of a hammer, a rasp, a pair of pinchers, a crude knife and an anvil. There is no need of fire, for the workman beats the shoe into shape cold.

Lawyers and Advice.

"Lawyers must be men of wonderful self control."

"Why so?"

"They can refrain from offering advice until somebody comes along who is willing to pay for it."

The Way It Goes.

"This is an odd way girls have of getting into society."

"How is it odd?"

"Why, to get in they first have to come out."

It is the appreciation, not of the indulgent, but of the exacting, that counts.

ERRONEOUS RUMORS

There have been rumors about the city of late regarding Signaller Ted Yeomans, who is in France, which are erroneous. They were to the effect that he had been wounded. To-day his mother received a letter which was dated July 11th, and which contained the welcome news that he had been continuously at the front and was enjoying the best of health. This will be welcome news to Ted's many friends in the city.

CRUSHED TO DEATH BY A WHEY BARREL

A fatal accident occurred on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. Geo. Elliott, of the 6th Concession of Asphodel, Peterboro', when Leonard Bongard, a youth of 16 years, who was employed on the Elliott farm, was killed by a whey barrel falling on him.

It is not known just how the accident happened. The boy was sent out to get a couple of pails of whey from the barrels, which were on a waggon, and where he was shortly afterwards discovered lying on the ground in a semi-conscious condition. It is supposed that in some way the lad tipped the barrel to make the whey run faster and it fell off the wagon on top of him. His face was badly cut and he also suffered serious internal injuries. He was carried to the house but expired a short time afterwards. Medical aid was hastily summoned, but nothing could be done to save his life.

The Baker's Story Of Jutland Fight

(From the New York Sun).)

What the civilian interested in the war has yearned for most is pictures capable of being flashed on the screen of his own mind; and he has had none too many of them. The officer entrusted with the task of giving out the publishable details of a great military or naval clash usually is thinking about the opinions of his colleagues, and he goes in for cold techinique. There have been exceptions, of course, such as General French's eye-witness. But both sets of officials fell pretty flat when it came to showing us what the Jutland battle looked like.

"The leading ships of the two fleets,' wrote the scribe of the British Admiralty, "carried on a vigorous fight.' That was not the picturesque or the unexpected.

"During the night," penned the German Admiralty, "there were engagements among cruisers and a number of torpedo attacks."

In spots these historians did better, but not much. For a finer visualization of the greatest naval battle of the war we prefer Blank, the baker of H.M.S. Blank, who wrote a piece about the fray in a letter to his old teacher in Bucks. He was not sent to sea to fight or to write, but to bake. His dough was rising in bake-house, on the upper deck. The dough, like the naval situation, was in a critical condition, and the baker would not leave it, any more than the boy would leave the burning deck. The commander of the ship was a wise fellow, who knew that bread was next to battle in the designs of that day, and he let the baker stay.

This is the way it looked to the baker while the dough was rising:

"The whole visible horizon, which was not more than four miles, was one long blaze of flame; the hulls of the enemy's ships were not visible to the naked eye, but could be seen dimly through the haze with the telescope, and the only means we had of knowing the enemy was there was by spurts of flame from the enemy's guns."

The baker went back to the bake-house, whence his staff had retired to lower and safer quarters. He put the loaves in the oven, but the fire party made him extinguish his fire. Trusting to luck, he left the bread in the stove and went below and read Marcus Aurelius. When he went back to the upperdeck the bread was baked "without any fire and turned out fairly creditably. I was anxious to save it, knowing full well we might be glad of it if anything happened."

Something happened every minute after that, though not to the bread. The gramaphone played, darkness set in, and the German torpedoes attacked. The baker thought well of the Germans' courage:

"But one must pay tribute to the enemy; they are brave men, and fought splendidly. Several instances were observed during the battle where their vessel was awash, and they blazed away with one gun. It is a pity their battle fleet did not show some of this spirit. The gun flashes, searchlights star shells (which the enemy use), and the explosions made a grand, but terrible, spectacle, for we realized hundreds of brave men were going to their doom."

Thereafter the baker set another batch of dough, and went to sleep, for a spell, on the lockers.

If the British Admiralty decide to use a good publicity man, we recommend the unnamed baker of the anonymous ship. He made us see that red haze off Jutland just as it must have looked.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months

Women Become Expert As Men in Handling Cars

"There is no reason in the world why women should not be just as expert in the handling of motor cars as the men," says one female enthusiast.

'And what a source of health and real pleasure the automobile has opened up for the women of the world," she continued. "Think of the change that has come about in a few years. Nowadays the woman steps into her car, places her foot on the starting button, drives away and goes anywhere without necessity of wearing the oil clothes of old and frequently getting out to get under the car to effect repairs or see what is the matter.

"In driving you see women not only on the city streets, but far afield, driving right along as independent as can be and without a man in the car to aid them. In olden days it was almost impossible for a woman to go alone as there was the cranking and the repair work, which required men for assistance frequently.

"Cars are reliable to-day and tires are good, and with demountable rims a woman may make a change of tire without looking as if she had rolled in the dirt of the roadway.

"The automobile has brought to the woman a form of emancipation and has provided a healthful opportunity to be found nowhere else. Women are taking their opportunity in rapidly increasing numbers and seldom is it that accidents are laid at the door of the fair sex.

"Women are careful, for they do not want to bring down maledictions upon their sex for careless driving. The self-starter, the demountable rim and the perfection of the automobile in every way have made possible the gasoline-driven car for women and given them a freedom never before known.

BILLION DOLLAR CROP EXPECTED

After a thorough canvas of various points throughout Western Canada, Dr. McGill of the Dominion Grain Commission, is quoted in Calgary as saying that Alberta would have a crop as good as last year, that the Dominion would have a billion dollar grain crop and that the grain crop of the three prairie Provinces would be little if any behind that of last year.

"The country as a whole never looked better than it does at present," said Dr. McGill. "The weather was made to order as you might say, and I am of the opinion that this year's harvest will be another wonderful one."

Those who contemplate going west will do well to remember that the most fertile districts in Western Canada are served by the Lines of the C. N. R, and that this season they can travel from their home districts to destination, Canadian Northern all the way.

Arrangements have been made whereby passengers may travel in comfort, Colonist and Lunch Counter being a feature.

The first of these excursions will be run in August, the date will be announced later.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

SPORTS FOR CAMP

All at once the bottom seems to have fallen out of the matter of sports for the camp. The committee which was organized some time ago are doing nothing for the men in the way of providing sports, and it looks as though it was up to the Y.M.C.A. to take hold of the work of providing sports and see to it that every evening there is some kind of program, with a good afternoon program every Saturday. The men in camp are entitled to recreation after drill and duty, and there seems little or no excuse for a failure to provide this. Officers like Lt.-Col. Thompson, G.S.O., have too many serious and exacting responsibilities to promote sports, and it is up to others who have much less to do to look after sporting programs. Col. Thompson is an ideal conductor of a sport program, and would no doubt give any undertaking his advice and support if promoted.

PAYING THEIR OWN EXPENSES

There has been much talk about the cost of the Government in allowing battalions to go to their mobilizing centres for the purpose of receiving their colors, and it may be of interest to many to know, that whenever a battalion leaves camp to receive colors in the place where it was organized, that not one dollar of the cost connected with the same is met by the Government. When the 93rd went to Peterboro to receive their colors they paid their own expenses. When the 155th goes to Belleville on Saturday to receive their colors, they will pay the entire bill of cost, as will the 156th when they go to Brockville a week later for the same purpose.

VISITORS TO 156TH

Quite a number of friends and relatives of men in the 156th Battalion, arrived on the excursion from Lancaster on Saturday morning and visited with friends in khaki. They were given a hearty welcome to the camp and made tours of inspection watching everything with interest.

NOTES

Capt. Dodds, chaplain of the 155th Battalion, spoke at the Crusaders' camp in the city Sunday night. Mrs. Dodds sang.

The band of the 155th Battalion played at the headquarters mess on Sunday evening.

Corp. Williams, Army Servicec Corps, is in the General Hospital with typhoid fever.

Rev. C. G. Smith, B.D., of Belleville conducted a Bible class at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at three o'clock and also delivered a very interesting address in the evening.

Lieut.-Col. M. K. Adams, commanding the 155th Battalion, has received word about his son, Lieut. E. A. Adams, who was recently reported wounded.

The trenches and bayonet fighting apparatus of the 155th Batt. is ready for use, and work will no doubt be commenced to-day.

Maj. Allen, of the 155th Battalion, has returned to camp after a few days' leave of absence.

H. T. Noonon, for the past sixteen years deputy collector of Inland revenue for the Perth district, has given up his position for the present in order to enlist for overseas service.

Ernest Ball, who was to be manager of the new Princess moving picture theatre, Smith's Falls, has enlisted in the 240th Batalion. He is the third of the Ball brothers to give his services to Canada and the Empire.

Mrs. Fish and two daughters of Rochester; Mrs. Putman, wife of Lt.-Col Putman; Mrs. Doyle, wife of Captain Doyle, Mrs. Hyman, wife of Lieut. Hyman of the 59th; Mrs. Sandford, wife of Lieut. Sandford; Mrs. Adams, wife of Lt.-Col. Adams, and Mrs. Dodds, wife of Captain Dodds, were guests of the officers of the 155th Battalion to dinner Sunday.

Following the dinner at the mess of the 155th Sunday an impromptu programme was given, in which Mrs. Dodds, and Captain Wrightmeyer sang; Dr. J. G. Evans recited; and officers and guests in general took part in several popular choruses.

Many of the staff of "Ongwanada" are sleeping in tents on the ground since the commencement of the real hot weather.

There are 23 patients in the field hospital, and all are cases of a minor character. The camp maintains its reputation for health, and no serious cases are being reported.

Queen's field ambulance will play the 74th Battery, C.F.A., a game of baseball on Wednesday evening.

A quoit game is being arranged between the men of Queen's field ambulance and the Dental Corps. It is said that the men of the dental corps are adepts in pitching quoits, being Scots, and having the natural knack of throwing the iron.

The officers commanding the 154th, 155th and 156th batatlions will each detail 2 subalterns, 2 sergeants, 2 corporals and 28 men to attend the bombing school class which commenced on Monday, the 24th inst.

Request For British Reply

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 25.—Special—The British Government.'s memorandum responding in part to the complaints of the United States over the detention of ocean mails will not be answered by this Government until a complete reply to the American representations have been received at the State Department. In making public the text of the memorandum to day the State Department let it be known that the only action of the department with respect to the memorandum was to instruct the American Ambassador in London to make another request that the British Government expedite the sending of its formal response to the American communication concerning mail seizure and detentions by the British authorities. This was the second call on Great Britain for an answer.

TENTH SON EXEMPTED

LIEUT. SKEAD A PRISONER

OTTAWA, July 25.—Word has been received in Ottawa by his father, Mr. E. Skead, that Lieut. Skead, of the 8th C.M.R., is a prisoner in Germany. Lieut. Skead, who played for the Ottawa Football Club and was a rider in many horse shows, is well known in Toronto and Montreal.

NEW GOVERNOR OF CEYLON

Sir John Anderson Has Held Many Proconsulships.

Sir John Anderson, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., has recently been appointed to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon and its dependencies.

Sir John Anderson, who is already well known at a Colonial administrator, is a Scotsman by birth. He was born in Gartly, in Aberdeenshire, in 1858, and is the eldest son of Mr. John Anderson, Superintendent of the Gordon Mission in Aberdeen. He was educated at Aberdeen University, and passed from there with a first-class degree in mathematics, and the gold medal for the most distinguished graduate of his year. He was appointed to the Colonial Office in 1879, and held the Bacon Scholarship at Gray's Inn in 1887, and an Inns of Court Scholarship the following year. As private secretary to the late Sir R. Meade, he was attached to the staff employed on the Behring Sea arbitration, and by 1897 had risen to be principal clerk at the Colonial Office. He was secretary to the Conference of Colonial Premiers in 1897 and 1902, and accompanied the Prince of Wales on his Colonial tour in the latter year. From 1904 to 1911 he was Governor of the Straits Settlements and High Commissioner to the Federated Malay States, and from 1906 to 1911 High Commissioner to the State of Brunei. Sir John was made a C.M.G. in 1898, K.C.M.G. in 1901, G.C.M.G. in 1909, and K.C.B. in 1913. He has been Permanent Under Secretary of State for the Colonies since 1911.

The appointment of so strong and prominent a man to the Governorship of the isle of tea and "Spicy breezes," shows that the British Government is not inclined to take any chances of being caught unawares, by any secret machinations of the enemy in any of the remote corners of the Empire. It is understood that there are special reasons for carefulness in filling the appointment in Ceylon not to be revealed just at present, "in the public interests."

M.P.'s Brilliant Son.

Lieut. Arthur Walsh, eldest son of Mr. Stephen Walsh, British Labor M. P. for the Ince Division of Lancashire, has been gazetted a temporary captain in the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment. Lieut. Walsh, who is only 23, had already taken his degree as Master of Arts when, on the outbreak of the war he enlisted as a private in the Territorial Force for general service. It was not long before he was drafted into the Officers' Training Corps, being afterwards gazetted second lieutenant in a Manchester City Battalion. Lieut. Walsh won his way unaided from the elementary school to the university by means of scholarships. He first won a scholarship which took him from the elementary day school to Wigan Grammar School, and there he was awarded the Powell Scholarship, which took him to Owen's College, Manchester, where he not only took his B. A. degree with honors but also carried off further scholarships, which enabled him to prosecute his studies at the Sorbonne, Paris. After two years at the Sorbonne with brilliant success, he was awarded the degree of Licentiate of Letters by the University of France, and later proceeded to his degree of Master of Arts. Just before the outbreak of war he was appointed assistant master in languages and literature and mathematics at the Nelson Municipal Secondary [illegible]

Inventor of Smokeless Powder.

A remarkable man in many respects is Mr. Walter F. Reid, whose recent remarks regarding cotton and explosives have created so much attention. Although the general public know little about him, Mr. Reid is a man whose position and attainments in the scientific world entitle his views to every respect and consideration.

It was he who invented smokeless powder, helped to found the Aeronautical Society, assisted the Aero Club as an expert, and has worked on committees for the Board of Trade. Incidentally, he has led an adventurous life in many lands. His invention of smokeless powder was a result of his experiences among the Red Indians, when he relied on his rifle for food.

On one occasion Mr. Reid was dying of thirst in the pampas of the Argentine. In his extremity he noticed his horse, during the night, licking the dew off the vegetation. Then he had an inspiration. He dragged his shirt over the grass until it was saturated, and then squeezed it out. He worked in this way for hours, and in the morning there was enough water to save the lives of both man and horse.

Novel Electric Signs.

Demonstrations with a new type of electric sign have been held in London, and have aroused considerable interest. It differs materially from the prevailing signs of this character which display words and phrases, for the reason that it can be made to show any desired message within the capacity of its letters virtually at a moment's notice; moreover, the message may be read either by day or by night. The elements are of special design, consisting of an array of white circular members, each of which is fitted with two metallic covers resembling eyelids. These are rotated by means of an electric motor in such a way as to uncover the discs.

Behind each of these is placed an electric light for illuminating purposes at night. In the sign with which the demonstrations were carried out there are nearly two thousand elements, and these are coupled to a single keyboard, which is selectively placed in relation with each monogram. By means of this keyboard the legend of the sign can be changed once a minute; consequently the idea is extremely useful for the flashing of news.

Mud Houses for English.

The possibility of using mud as a building material and so solving the urgent problem of providing cheap country cottages in the rural districts and housing accommodation in the areas where there has been a sudden influx of war workers, is being made the subject of an interesting experiment by the new Household and Social Science Department of King's College for Women, University of London.

Six mysterious looking walls have just been erected in the grounds at Camden Hill, each wall being composed of a different mixture of mud, with a view to testing which proves most suitable to the English climate.

"In each case the earth has been subjected to a different process of preparation. In one case waterglass has been added, in another soft soap and to the earth and soft soap in another case lime has been added. A 'grouting' of cement has been poured over the mud wall in yet another case, and there is one wall made of earth alone.

TAX RATE FOR 1916 PLACED AT 32 3-10 MILLS

Increase of Taxation Unavoidable Owing to Various Causes—Receipts Clipped and Expenses Added—Permanent Auditor Selected—Council Takes a Holiday

At an adjourned meeting of the City Council held last evening the estimates for the year 1916 were passed and the tax rate struck. It was generally anticipated that the rate this year would exceed previous years, owing to increased expenditures and diminished revenue. The rate will be 32 3-10th mills, which is some four mills in excess of the past few years. Two extra mills are required for patriotic purposes, one extra mill for the Fire Department improvements, owing to demands made by the Underwriters' Association, and one extra mill owing to prohibition coming into force. In the later case the city loses its share of the hotel licenses and also the business tax formerly imposed upon hotels. The general rate is 19 8-10th mills; for Public School purposes, 7 mills; High School purposes, 2 7-10th mills; patriotic purposes, 1 8-10th mills, and the Provincial war tax 1 mill, making a total of 32 3-10th mills.

The estimates as prepared and presented to the Council were passed without discussion.

The members present at the meeting were: Mayor Ketcheson, Aldermen Woodley, Deacon, Duckworth, St. Charles, Parks, Whalen and Earle.

On motion the Council went back to the second order of business, namely, consideration of communications, etc. The Council went into committee of the whole on accounts, etc., Alderman Parks in the chair. The following accounts were passed:—

R. McCoy	$50.00
S. A. Hyman	11.00
E. Bolyea	5.00

GRANT TO FAIR.

A recommendation prevailed that a grant of $200 be made to the Belleville Aricultural Society.

A motion prevailed that $5 as a membership fee for Chief Brown of the fire department as a member of the Fire Chief's Association be paid by the city.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

BY-LAWS.

Alderman Woodley introduced sixteen By-laws, which after being read by titles were referred to the committee of the whole on by-laws.

On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on by-laws, Alderman St. Charles in the chair.

The by-law re estimates and striking the tax rate was first taken up. The receipts and expenditures are are follows:—

BRITISH HOLD HIGHEST POINT

Overlooking Plateau on Which Lines Extend to the Eastward

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, July 26.—The capture of Pozieres reported to-day gives the British domination of the highest point overlooking the plateau on which the lines extend to eastward. Some of the most stubborn fighting during the present offensive has occurred in streets of the village, and every house had to be taken separately. Its possession is thought by the Germans so important that they brought reserves from before Verdun to asist in its retention.

Unionists Aghast at Catastrophe They Precipitated — Premier Asquith Holds Number of Unofficial Conferences

LONDON, July 26.—Special—There is no hope at Westminster of a resurrection of the Irish "settlement." Lloyd George is believed to be still making some advances to the various parties to see if they will confer again.

Some recalcitrant Unionists are rather disconcerted at the catastrophe they have precipitated and might be ready to lend an ear to any "snake charmer," but the position is that the supporters of the Irish Nationalists in Ireland are now out of hand.

Nationalist leaders say that if they took part in any more futile conferences they would be hounded out by their followers.

The Unionists, who have done the mischief, if they really wish to heal the breaks, would probably have to offer better terms than originally proposed by Lloyd George. This they will not do.

HUN THIRD LINE NEXT

Objective of Allied Forces Gradually Closing in—Feeling Out Third Line

LONDON, July 26.—Under cover of a strong artilery fire the French and British are engaged in feeling out the German third line in Picardy, which has been greatly reinforced and strengthened. A series of scattered but violent engagements, each in itself a battle of some proportions, marked the day. Especially heavy fighting took place before dawn this morning on many parts of the front, both north and south of the Somme.

The most extensive of these attacks was launched simultaneously by the British and French on the six-mile winding front from Pozieres to Maurepas. The German lines were found to be tremendously strong. Army Headquarters at Berlin, in an official statement, says that the German fire was effective in stopping this attack at certain points, while at others the allies were repulsed in sharp hand-to-hand fighting.

North of Pozieres, however, the British and Australian troops made further gains, as well as in the village itself, while south of Estrees the French straightened and strengthened their lines by seizing a group of strongly fortified houses. The French also had a local success north of Vermandovillers, on the southern tip of the Picardy battle front, occupying some German trenches.

PETROGRAD, July 26.—The Russians are continuing their successful drive in Southern Volhynia, pressing back the Teutonic forces near the Slonevka River, a branch of the Styr, which the Russians are crossing, the war office announced to-day. DRIVE ON LEMBERG SMASHES ENEMY DEFENCES

Russians Force Passage of Sloniovki River, Capturing 1,000 Prisoners, Four Cannon and Five Machine Guns — Fierce Struggle Raging Near Leshinoff; on Galician Border Berlin Admits Reverse West of the Lipa River

LONDON, July 26.—(Special.)—Important advances by the troops of Gen. Sakharoff in Volhynia are announced in to-day's official report from Petrograd.

In a heavy night attack Monday the Russians charged through wire entanglements the Austro-Germans had thrown up along the Sloniovki River. Yesterday the Russians forced a passage of the river, capturing 1,000 prisoners, four cannon and five machine guns. Heavy fighting is occurring near Leshinoff.

This is one of the three converging moves on Lemberg. Sakharoff's troops are approaching the Galician capital from the northeast and are following the Brody-Lemberg railroad.

Germans Admit Reverse.

Berlin announces the repulse of "weak Russian detachments" southeast of Riga and along the Dvina, where the Russians were reported yesterday as having torn open the German lines on a front of thirt ymiles for a twelve-mile gain. The official German statement admits the Russians have pierced the Austro-German first line trenches at Berestechk, west of the Lipa.

A despatch from Berlin by way of Amsterdam states that Turkish troops are to be sent to stiffen the Teuton line on the Galician front.

Fighting in the Carpathian, west of Kimpolung, in which cavalry played on important part, was reported in to-day's Petrograd communique. Three Austrian regiments were driven back.

To-day's Russain statement follows:

"On Monday night Gen. Sakharoff's troops operating in southern Volhynia near the Galician border broke through the enemy's wire entanglements at the River Sloniovki, an affluent of the Lipa. In the region of Leshinoff, a few miles within Galicia, and south of the River Cloniovki, a furious battle is proceeding.

"A later official communique adds that the crossing of the Sloniovki River by the troops of General Sakharoff is continuing, and that during the day's advance 1,000 prisoners, four cannon and five machine guns were immediately turned against the Austro-Germans.

LONDON, Ont., July 26.—Conductor Cuttings, of Bridgeburg, was instantly killed, and Brakeman Stone of the same place, probably fatally injured in a rear-end collision of two Grand Trunk freights early this morning west of here. Engineer Wrigley and Fireman Webb, both of Fort Erie, were painfully hurt, but will recover. A heavy mist prevailed at the time, and the accident is said to be due to the first train which had stopped, and having given out sufficient warning signals. The engine of the second freight struck the caboose of the standing train and knocked it into the ditch.

NEW YORK, July 25.—According to the Pittsburg correspondent of the Times, the great Russian car order is held in abeyance, although some car wheels and axles have been contracted for. Orders for 28,000 car axles and 56,000 car wheels have been placed. The Canadian continues to figure on taking the Russian contract. The question of delivery is holding up the award.

France has purchased 14,000 tons of rails from Steel Corporation mills. The Canadian Pacific has taken 30,000 tons of rails from its sidings for delivery in England, and is in the market for 30,000 tons of new rails to replace them. South African railways have inquiries out for 12,000 tons of rails. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company got the entire 80,000 tons of rails by the Southern Pacific Railroad. The allotment of the Cambria Steel Company of the Russian rail order aggregates 165,000 tons, and the Bethlehem Steel Company will roll 60,000 tons. Buying of railroad equipment by domestic railroads is very light.

Chinese Waiter Brutally Beaten

Assaulted and Robbed by Five Men Accompanied by Cabman

MONTREAL, July 25.—Serious consequences may follow the assault committed upon Fon Wong, a Chinese waiter, living at 15 East Lagauchetiere street, early yesterday morning, when he and another Chinaman were beaten and robbed in Clarke street by five men. Fon Wong, although suffering from half a dozen scalp wounds upon the head, was not at first thought to have been seriously injured, and was allowed to leave the hospital after treatment in the outdoor department. Later in the day he took a turn for the worse, and is now in a ward at the General Hospital in a serious condition, a fracture of the skull being feared. The story told to the other victim, was that they had been in a restaurant in Clarke street near Dorchester street at 4.30 a.m. when a cabman and five of his passengers entered. The new arrivals were intoxicated and proceeded to heap insults upon the Chinamen. The verbal attack ended when both the Chinamen were thrown bodily out of the place. Their tormentors followed them to the sidewalk and beat and robbed them. Wong thinks he was struck with the butt of a whip. After the six men left them lying dazed upon the sidewalk, and drove away, the two victims went to the General Hospital. Hong was not seriously injured, but Wong returned to the hospital at 11 o'clock and was admitted to a ward. Detectives are working, but no arrest has as yet been made.

STILL SEEKING DIVORCE

Count Boni de Castellane Submits New Evidence

ROME, July 25.—On behalf of Count Boni de Castellane, his attorney, in the suit before the Holy See for the annulment of his marriage with Anna Gould, has presented to the Pope new evidence which, according to the attorney, will prove that Miss Gould married Count de Castellane with the intention of divorcing him if later she because dissatisfied with the marriage bond. This according to canonical law, is sufficient to annual a Catholic marriage, the attorney says.

As matrmonial cases before the Holy See can always be resumed if fresh facts are brought forward, the Pope has decided to submit the case in its new aspects to the same commission of Cardinals that examined into it previously and decided against the annulment. The commission comprises Cardinals de Lai, Bisleti and Van Roseum.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM PAT BOLAND

Dear Mother:—

Just received a letter and a roll of papers from home, and as I have a few minutes to spare I had better answer. I have been getting quite a lot of mail from home lately. You will have to excuse me for not answering them all, for you see we are in the trenches nearly all the time, and when I get a couple of hours to myself I try and have a little sleep, that is if there not too many shells coming over our way.

What kind of a time did you all have on Dominion Day. I suppose you wondered what I was doing. Well, two other chaps and myself had a little home for ourselves in the second line. Its some dug-out,—four feet high, six by eight, made of sand bags. We have a sign, hanging in front bearing the name "Dominion Dugout." We are having lovely weather over here now, just like the summers you have in Canada. This has been a fine country at one time, but far from being that now. There is hardly a house left standing within two miles of the firing line.

I have just been down to Divisional Headquarters. We get the real news there. There has been some battle along the western front. I don't know how this war can last much longer. We may be all back home before many weeks.

I received a box yesterday, and certainly enjoyed the contents. When you send parcels don't forget the cake. Don't send much, but often. Jimmie Cashman is with the 4th Brigade Scouts. Will give him his parcel when I see him.

I think I will say good-bye for now, with love to all at home, and best regards to my friends.

Your son,

PAT BOLAND

FROM MELBURN SPRAGUE

The following card was received yesterday by Mrs. E. B. Sprague, 78 North Front street, this city:—

Dear Mother and Ida:—

I am in a hospital with some German and Canadian wounded. I am quite happy, so do not worry. We have good doctors and attendants, and are all treated alike. They have used me better than I ever expected. We went through hell on the 2nd to the 7th of June. I was seriously wounded, but am getting better, so please do not worry. I will be a long time in the hospital.

Your son.

In conformance with its ever Progressive Policy, The Canadian Northern Railway has inaugurated a low fare from all points east of Sudbury to Port Arthur, Ont., which makes the trip practically as inexpensive as the Boat Service on the Great Lakes, and being quicker, is bound to meet with considerable favor among busy men.

Those who have already made the trip by water will find a pleasant change, as this route is one of exceptional scenic charm, passing many beautiful Lakes and Streams, among the most notable being the Nipigon, famous to the world over for the wonderful trout fishing to be had in its waters.

Trains leave Belleville, Monday. Wednesday and Friday.

CALLED BY DEATH

MISS HATTIE G. FURNIVAL

Died in this city at an early hour this morning. She had been spending the past winter in California with her sister Mrs. Pringle, became ill in February of this year and returned to her home here about a month ago.

Miss Furnival whose father was one of the merchants of this city was born in Belleville sixty years ago, and has lived here all her life. She was of a generous and kindly disposition and throughout her whole life "went about doing good." She was always ready to alleviate the suffering of the sick, had a cup of cold water for the thirsty and food for the hungry. She will be long remembered for her many acts of kindness and her life was a practical illustration of the Master's injunction in this respect.

She has been a member of the Bridge Street Methodist Church for many years, and was a member of the Women's Missionary Society and other organizations of the church. She was a great sufferer and displayed Christian fortitude in her last illness.

She was the eldest daughter of Mrs. Martha Furnival, one of the founders and most efficient presidents of the Women's Christian Aossociation of this city, who died some years ago, and the deceased was the able associate of her mother in all this work.

She leaves her only sister, Mrs. Henry Pringle, of East Bridge street, who has been with her sister during the whole of her serious illness. Mrs. O'Flynn of Bridge street east, is a cousin of the deceased.

Two Thomasburg Men Injured

Wheel Leaves Buggy and Men are Thrown Out — One Expected to Die

THOMASBURG, July 26—Special—Two residents of this place, Mr. Laurison Ketcheson, live stock buyer, and his father-in-law, Mr. John Carter, were seriously injured by being thrown from a waggon while en route for Tweed yesterday. Mr. Carter's injuries are so great that it is expected he will die. They loaded up a large waggon with calves and sheep at Mr. Ketcheson's home, and were proceeding on their way to Tweed station, where the stock was to be shipped. They had reached Chapman when one of the front wheels of the waggon ran off, the stock rack shifted, and the two men were thrown heavily to the ground. Mr. Ketcheson sustained a compound fracture of the leg above the ankle and was otherwise badly shaken up. Mr. Carter was most seriously hurt; his collar bone was broken, and there were farctures of several of his ribs. The end of one of the broken ribs pierced the lung, causing considerable hemorrhage. Notwithstanding his broken limb, Mr. Ketcheson clung to the lines and prevented a runaway. Medical aid was sumoned from Tweed, but the injuries to Mr. Ketcheson's limb were so complicated that physicians determined to send him to Toronto, where surgeons could have the benefit of the X-rays. Owing to Mr. Carter's advanced age and the nature of his injuries ther are grave fears that he may not recover. He is in a critical condition.

Later—Mr. Carter has since passed away.

"For several years past the cost of print paper and the other essentials of newspaper-making have been steadily increasing, and during the eighteen months of the European war the costs finally soared beyond the horizon of precedents."

None So Deaf As Those Who Will Not Hear

"Not one word, if you please—not one word will I listen to against tea or coffee!"

That is the attitude of many good people, even after they have reason to suspect that tea or coffee hurts them.

True, some persons seem able for a time to use tea or coffee without apparent harm, but sooner or later it does interfere with the health and comfort of many users.

For a sure, easy test suppose you leave off both tea and coffee and use.

POSTUM

This famous food-drink is made of prime wheat, roasted with a bit of Wholesome Molasses. It has a rich color, fine aroma, and a delicious, snappy flavor, and is absolutely free from the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee, or any other harmful substance—free from all tea and coffee troubles.

Postum is delicious and comes in two forms. The original Postum Cereal must be boiled. Instant Postum is a soluble Powder—made in the cup by adding hot water. The flavour is the same and the cost about equal. Both kinds are good for young and old, and satisfy the craving for a hot, aromatic, mealtime beverage.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

A tax-payer compliments The Intelligencer on its advocating of a thorough system of permanent street construction and asks the very pertinent question: "Where would you suggest beginning, where there are so many streets and so much to do?" Anywhere, so long as a beginning is made. Why should not Campbell Street be made to present a respectable appearance? It is a short street, and should not be left in the unfinished state in which it is in to-day. Then Bridge Street should receive attention, and that, too, at once, and so on, until all the streets are made presentable and passable.

Let us ask why Coleman Street, through which a sewer has been constructed, has been left in the disgraceful state it now is and has been since the completion of the sewer construction? It was for a long time impassable, and at present little better.

Whose fault is it? Some say the contractor, others the Street Surveyor, while the Mayor, Chairman of Public Works and the Aldermen as a whole have to bear the blame. No matter where the fault lies, the grievance has existed for a long time, and still continues to exist, to the injury of the business industries situated in that section of the city, and to the travelling public. It is a question whether an action at law for damages does not exist, but no one wants that; what is wanted is that the street be made passable, and that, too, without further delay.

THE NEXT WAR LOAN.

Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, has announced that the next Dominion war loan will be issued in September. The fact that such an announcement has been made will prevent certain funds being invested in other securities in the meantime, such as, for instance, Anglo-French bonds. It will allow the citizen of Canada to arrange his finances so as to enable participation in the second war loan which will prove as great a success as the first. While the small investor purchased war bonds last November to a gratifying extent, still there were many hundreds who were deterred from investing in the war loan because it was being so rapidly subscribed. A war bond is an excellent investment and its purchase is helping to finance Canada's share of the war. The Government anticipates an excellent response to its war loan in September, which will be issued at attractive terms consistent with the money market conditions then prevailing.

The first war loan of $50,000,000 was one of 5 per cent, ten-year bonds issued at 97½. This gave a yield to the investor, according to the terms of issue, of about 5.48 per cent. The issue was exempt from taxes, including any income tax which may be imposed by the federal government. The coming issue is also likely to be exempt from taxes. Bonds of the November issue will be accepted at 97½ plus accrued interest as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to the issue which will be made in September next. No official announcement has been made as to the size of the September loan, but The Monetary Times thinks that it will be at least $75,000,000, and probably more, in view of the fact that the old war bonds will be accepted as cash equivalent.

PUTTING THE BAN ON ENEMY FIRMS.

With a view to extending patronage only to those of pro-Ally tendency, a Western newspaper proposes the blacklisting of all German firms in the United States, and suggests that the Dominion Government inaugurate a tour of investigation with a view to obtaining a line on those possessing a Fatherland feeling. The viewpoint of our Western contemporary is that Canadians do not desire to trade with enemy firms, no matter where they may be located.

At the present time the difficulty is to know which firms in the United States should be known as enemy concerns and which should not. There are some firms with German sounding names which could not by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as being of the enemy. There are others with apparently innocent names which are as much German as if they were located in Berlin and smuggled their goods across the Atlantic.

It is believed in Ottawa that the action of the Imperial authorities in forbidding trading with enemy firms in the United States will pave the way for similar procedure in Canada.

While it is to be hoped that purchasing concerns of the Dominion will keep in mind the "Made in Canada" products, and limit their patronage, where possible, to Canadian industries, it would be a convenience to have a blacklist at hand, enabling them to give practical effect to the prohibition when the extension of trade across the border becomes unavoidable.

Hamilton Herald: Regarding the exclusion of the Ulster counties, the Unionist members of the cabinet insist upon having their exclusion continue until a special bill is adopted placing the counties under the jurisdiction of the Irish legislature. Surely this arrangement is reasonable. The Nationalists demand that the exclusion of the Ulster counties be merely a temporary arrangement and that after the war they be compelled to submit to the authority of the Irish legislature. In short, Mr Redmond and his followers demand the coercion of Ulster. How much more reasonable and statesmanlike is the attitude of Sir Edward Carson! Addressing the Nationalists in parliament he said that the question whether Ulster should join with the rest of Ireland or remain directly under the jurisdiction of the Imperial parliament would depend upon the Nationalists themselves. "Give good government at Dublin," he said in effect, "and it will not be long before Ulster will join you." The leader of the Ulster Loyalists extended his hand to Mr Redmond, but Mr Redmond refused to grasp it.

Toronto News: Whatever part Portugal may play in the war henceforth, she has not been idle from the first. Not only has she despatched an army to Africa to co-operate with the Allied forces there, but she has furnished much material of war. Her ports everywhere have been open to the Entente fleets. She has often provisioned Ally war vessels, as she to-day provisions Gibraltar. She has made notable pecuniary sacrifices and her army is ready for whatever may be required of it. Portugal's long and unwavering alliance with Great Britain is due to the circumstance that the careers of both lie largely on the sea. It should be added that the Portuguese have imbibed liberal ideas of human freedom and government institutions from both the British and the French. The army of Portugal will be no negligible factor in the "big push."

Current Comment

The Kaiser thinks that only the Almighty keeps him away from the front trenches. The Kaiser must be worried lest he be forgotten for a minute or so some day and somebody bore a hole in him.—ttawa Free Press.

The statement Count Zeppelin is said to have made at Friedrickshaven that "the Kaiser has given his advisors a free hand regarding the use of airships and submarines," and that "vital blows will soon be struck," lends color to the belief that the dispute between those who want the Zeppelin and the submarine warfare resumed and those who do not is nearing a climax.

It is something for the present generation of Britishers, too, that Llyod George should declare that "great as the British infantry was in Wellington's and Napoleon's day, it never has been greater than now." History stands as proof that no soldiers ever surpassed, if any equalled, the men who fought under Wellington and against Napoleon. It means much that the Britishers who have changed from civilians to soldiers in a few months are as good soldiers as the men who formed the army of Wellingbore a hole in him.—Ottawa Free Press.

The Poets' Corner

THE SORROWS OF WAR

Strongholds, I have beheld,
Forces, more strong than war,
Germany, our species fight,
And we have come from over the sea,
The sorrows of our Britishers,
The sorrows of our men,
Clasping we fight no more,
For freedom or for right,
But for freedom.

Men, Canadians, banns,
Our souls together stand,
Our hearts for freedom and for right,
Our souls united stand,
Banns of friendship or of love,
Banns of sorrows, banns of grief,
More than married to us;
For we come none from Germany,
To tell of our relief;
For we are Canadians,
Fighting for liberty,
Fighting for freedom.

Canadians, we stand a unit to a man,
Canadians, we come to fight to defend
in Britain's rght,
To defend in England's cause,
Allies all;
For treatise have all been quashed,
German laws are much more harsh
To break,
A treaty, they, their God forsake,
And take up guns to speculate,
To deprive England, and Allies,
Of all true war;
For war will not.
For Kaiser Wilhelm will not scare,
More submarines and much more dare,
And Germany he may but share,
With England, culture, pride, and race,
And banns:
Such conduct we will put to sea,
Why Kaiser Wilhelm much disgraces,
Royalty our foes,
And we, Canadians phase;
For we a banns will break,
Our foes relent,
Our foes disgrace,
Because we may not speak,
To relate a war brought about by Germany,
And Belgium he would crush;
For he has banns none with her,
Whom he would kill;
Wouldn't we fight on,
And send our sons with fear,
Lest they be killed by tyrants,
Yes, and then, they ride above,
Aeroplanes, Zeppelins, and bombs,
And these are traced.

In the rank and file of Germany,
We found our maltreatment,
'Considering the lillies how they grow,
As they toil, so they spin,"
Profound grief in every land,
Brought on by one,
Considering himself man.

Diving in our seas,
Britain brought to war,
With Germany,
Conquest nation, nation, nation,
Conquest from sea to sea,
Arrange for none would dare,
To say what conquest what may be,
But understanding what has been,
Canadians just go to win.

For Eve no more may fight,
For Britain's cause alone;
For right, and might may be,
The sorrows of her Throne,
But we in Canada will give,
Our sons, our blood, our bone;
So Canadians may fight again,
Again, they stand for freedom and for God:
Canadians just go to win.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

A FATAL BARGAIN

OR

THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY

NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

"Yes, that might be," Fenno said thoughtfully. "By thunder, Mr. Carter, you are framing up a plausible theory, yet——"

"Yet one not easily proved?"

"Far from it."

"I'll admit that it's not easy to beat men like Todd, with barrels of money at their command."

"H'm!" Fenno grunted. "I'm not so sure about their having barrels of money, Mr. Carter, at this stage of the game. I've given their stock an awful rattling, you know, and I question how well they have stood it. The stock broke at twenty-eight to-day and closed only a fraction above that figure."

"If they are short of money, then, all the more reason for thinking they may have undertaken some desperate move."

"That's true, too."

"And if the favorable effect of this Packard decision could now be offset by some condition, one that would appear in a corresponding degree unfavorable to the company, Todd and his crowd would be as badly off as before, wouldn't they?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, that's just where I am going to put them, Fenno, in order to see what the effect upon them will be, and what they will next do—assuming they've done what I suspect," Nick forcibly declared. "I'm going to drive them to extremes, if possible, or to the wall. In a nutshell, Fenno, I'm going to help you down this United Transit merger, and down it forever!"

Fenno's eyes were sparkling now, and his nerves quivering like a thoroughbred under check. He seized Nick's hand in both of his, crying quietly, yet with an eagerness that nearly choked him:

"Can we do it? Can we do it? My God! Mr Carter, you don't know what his means to me. Not financially, however! I dont' care a snap for profits or losses. But I'd turn heaven and earth to kill this corporation and foil the blackleg financiers and crooked politicians who are back of it. That's why my confinement galls me, Mr. Carter—because my hands are tied and I am——"

"And must be untied," Nick interrupted. "Now, listen to me and then plan to follow my instructions."

"Yes."

"I'll have you out of here to-morrow."

"You will? Good heavens, Mr. Carter! Can you do it?"

"Yes, on bail," Nick confidently insisted. "You leave that to me. It will not be done until afternoon, however. I wish to see what United Transit will do in the morning market, as a result of the Packard decision, and while you are known to be confined here on a murder charge."

"I understand."

"The stock will soar, won't it?"

"Heavens, yes!" cried Fenno. "There'll be a flood of buying orders when the market opens. Shorts will rush to cover, and—— Oh, thunder! there's no telling where it will go. They may carry it to par."

"Are you short of the stock?"

"Yes, but not heavily. I have frequently covered on the bad breaks."

"Can you stand a terrific financial racket, Fenno, if sure you'll win out at the finish?"

"Yes," Fenno quickly declared, with lips twitching excitedly. "I can play this game without a limit, under such conditions."

"Good!" Nick said, more coolly, yet with ominous determination. "I will have you free at two o'clock to-morrow. Meantime, lay your plans to follow my instructions."

"Trust me. What are they?"

"At ten minutes before three, when the boom in the stock is in full swing, and the market very nearly closing, I want you to appear on the floor of the Stock Exchange—you're a member, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"I want you to appear on the floor and offer to sell any part of one hundred thousand shares at twenty points under the last quotation," Nick earnestly added. "In other words, Fenno, I want you to smash the market just before it closes. Can you do this?"

"Can I do it?" Fenne fercely asked, with clenched hands above his head. "Why, Mr. Carter, my appearansce on the floor at that moment will do it. Smash the price of United Transit? I'll smash it so its own mother won't know it. I'll make it shrink like a hair on a hot stove.'

"That suits me." Nick arose and grasped his hand. "If you do, Fenno, take my word—there'll be the devil to pay after it!"

In Deep Water

It was nine o'clock when Nick Carter left the Tombs.

Only a keen analyst of the evidence and circumstances of which he was informed, as already noted, could have deduced the nature and scope of his suspicions, or have seen with what designs he was now actuated.

None knew better than Nick what must be incurred in a conflict with men who were battling for millions, what chances must be taken, what difficulties overcome, what perils encountered. It must be a conflict against men of brains, of cunning, sagacity, and resources; against men who, in the fight for wealth and power, would not shrink from knavery and bloodshed—yet always shed with craft and caution designed to preclude anticipation, baffle detection, and defy incrimination.

"HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP."

Sarnia, Ont.—"About 27 years ago I was taken very bad, my blood, too, was in bad shape. I got so I had to go to bed and I was there for over three months I could not eat and suffered untold agony I had three of the best doctors I could get but it just seemed nothing was going to help me. I had almost given up. I thought I would never be any better and was willing to give up and die rather than suffer as I was. A neighbor of mine told me of Dr. Pierce's wonderful remedies and I decided to use them. My husband bought me six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I had not taken it long until I felt better. In less than six weeks I was out of bed, and in less than six months I was cured and have been well ever since. Do all my own work. I have raised three daughters, two are married and have children. They have used it and they are healthy, so are their children. I am sure it was all on account of my having them use the medicine.

"I keep all of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the house. Have 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Smart-Weed'—anything prepared by Dr. Pierce is good. I also have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which I have had 26 years; it has been very valuable to me."—MRS. J. WAY, 232 Ontario St., Sarnia, Ont.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

A most valuable book in any home is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A splendid 1008-page volume, with engravings and colored plates. A copy will be sent to anyone sending fifty cents in stamps, to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only, to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up nearly 50 years ago.

Nevertheless, the strong, clean-cut face of the famous detective looked hard and determined when he left the Tombs and started for home, a look more expressive than words. A crime had been committed, a brutal murder, and he saw only one course. For when the searchlight of his genius illumined the pathway of duty, Nick Carter never shrank nor deviated from it.

It was ten o'clock when he arrived home. He found both Chick and Patsy in the business office, the latter having just come in from his day's work.

"Anything doing?" Nick asked, removing his coat.

"Not yet," said Patsy, with a head-shake. I've visited a hundred shoe stores and cobbler shops since morning, but no boot with a whole heel gone has been left at any of them. I'll visit the others to-morrow. I'm only half through my list."

"Keep at it," said Nick. "I want that subway ruffian."

"I'll locate him, Mr. Carter, if the thing can be done," Patsy confidently declared.

"Unless I'm greatly mistaken—and I'll wager I'm not—he's an important factor in this rascally business."

Nick had already informed Chick of his doings that afternoon. To do as much for Patsy, and also tell both of his interview and plans with Fenno, required only a short time.

"Gee, the case is surely a corker!" Patsy commented, shaking his head gravely. "If you think Fenno is innocent, Mr. Carter, you're only one in a thousand. All the newspapers are out with extras about the murder, and the whole bunch size him up as the assassin."

"So much the better," Nick curtly said. "The real culprits, whoever they are, will feel all the more safe from suspicion. I'll jar them some, howevr, when I get after them."

"Whom do you suspeot?" Chick inquired.

"Of killing Judge Packard?"

"Yes."

"I haven't any idea. Before we can learn, some of the clews I have struck must be run down."

"You think Allen, the assistant district attorney, was the man you saw assaulted last night?"

"I have no doubt of it."

"And that his assailant is one of some gang interested in United Transit?"

"Yes."

"Yet Fenno, if he knew of the document and records intrusted to Allen, and that a decison favorable to United Transit hinged upon them, might have employed some one to steal them."

"That's the argument Todd put up," said Nick, taking a chair at the office table. There are too many circumstances pointing to a far bigger job than the mere theft of those papers and the abduction of the assistant district atotrney. There are close relations between that affair and the crime committed to-day, you can bet on that."

"That seems reasonable, I'll admit."

"Size up all the circumstances, Chick, and you'll be confronted with a lot of question not easily answered, Nick forcibly asserted. "To start with, Packard took a lot of important papers to the district attorney's office, the exact nature and significance of which, in their bearing upon the decision he rendered to-day, are open to conjecture. He not only took them there personally, but he also instructed Allen to take them home with him last night. In view of the fact that they were stolen from Allen on his way home, I don't like the looks of Packard's conduct."

"I see the point," Chick nodded. "But can he, a judge of the Court of Appeals, have been guilty of anything crooked?"

"The possibility exists and must not be ignored," Nick replied. "From whom, except from Packard himself, could it have been learned that Allen would take the papers home last night and at a late hour? Only Packard could have foreseen that the work imposed upon Allen would keep him at the district attorney's office until late in the evening. It's not reasonable to supose that Allen would have revealed anything that might lead to robbery, to say nothing of his own death, or abduction."

"Very logically put, Nick."

[illegible]ogressing.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Runciman is making satisfactory progress. He will not, however, resume his duties at the Board of Trade for some time. The sleeplessness from which he has been suffering has been rendered more acute by his gallant efforts to go on with his work, notwithstanding his illness.

For some time he tried the expedient of having his head massaged, but at last his medical advisers insisted upon rest as the only real cure. Before going for a holiday Mr. Runciman offered to resign. Very properly the proposal was scouted by the Prime Minister.

"BIGGEST SET OF COWARDS——"

Lance-Corporal Tells How a Big Bombardment Feels.

A vivid picture of trench warfare is drawn by a lance-corporal, who, in a letter to his home at Boston, Lincs., says: "No doubt you have read of the big success we had the other day. I was in that lot, and I am glad to say I came out without a scratch, but I had some very narrow escapes. I think it is only by God's mercy that I am alive now. I did not imagine there was such a thing on earth as the lot I went through.

"The bombardment started about four in the morning, and lasted until five o'clock next day, tea time. I thought that hell was let loose. The noise of the guns was awful. They nearly deafened me. There were Jack Johnsons, whizz-bangs, trench mortars, and coal-boxes dropping all round me. If it had not been for the steel helmet I was wearing I should have got killed a hundred times over. Such terrible sights I never saw in my life before. At another time I should have died at the sight of such things. Some longed to get at the Germans although they were wounded. To make matters worse, it was raining and snowing all the time.

When the time came for the charge things were awful. The Germans came out of their trenches waving white rags and any other things they could get, surrendering in hundreds. They are the biggest set of cowards I ever saw in my life. They cannot stand an English bayonet charge, but they make horrible work of our trenches with their guns. They levelled them down all over, but the German prisoners say their trenches were worse than ours. If they were, God help them. The German trenches were blocked with their dead and dying.

"I am writing this letter without any clothes on to speak of. I was in an awful mess coming out of the trenches—but still I am quite happy and cheerful."

Command of the Sea.

In his essay on "True Greatness of Kingdoms and Estates" Bacon speaks thus of command of the sea:

"To be master of the sea is an abridgement of monarchy. Cicero, writing to Atticus of Pompey's preparation against Caesar, saith: 'Consilium Pompeii plane Themistocleum est; putat enim, qui mari potitur, eum rerum potiri' ('Pompey's plan is clearly that of Themistocles; for he believes that whoever has command of the sea will attain the supreme power); and without doubt Pompey had tired out Caesar, if upon vain confidence he had not left that way. We see the great effect of battles by sea; the battle of Actium decided the empire of the world; the battle of Lepanto arrested the greatness of the Turk. There be many examples where sea-fights have been final to the war; but this is when princes or States have set up their rest upon the battles. But this much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will; whereas those that be strongest by land are many times, nevertheless, in great straits. Surely, at this day with us of Europe the vantage of strength at sea (which is one of the principal dowries of this kingdom of Great Britain) is great; both because most of the kingdoms of Europe are not merely inland, but girt with the sea most part of their compass; and because the wealth of both Indies seems in great part, but an accessary to the command of the seas."

A Willing Worker.

An amusing incident is told which took place in one of the occupied districts of Belgium where the German occupier doles out potatoes to such of the starving people as agree to work for him. One recipient presented himself before the German authorities and declared himself quite ready in return for a supply of potatoes to work for the Germans and only for them. He seemed quite decided and genuine in his offer of work.

"Then you are quite willing to sign the declaration?" asked the German officer.

"Yes, quite willing."

"And what is your trade?"

"I am a grave digger," replied the Belgian stolidly.

Revenge!

An interesting discovery was made a few days ago, when a resident in the Eastern Counties picked up in a meadow what appears to be a message dropped by one of the Zeppelins that took part in a recent raid. It was in the form of a piece of pasteboard, on one side of which were the words, written in pencil, "Vengeance for L19," with a signature underneath. On the reverse side were some words in German which were so indistinct as to be undecipherable.

BRITISH IN RUSSIA.

Tremendous Ovations for Unit of Armoured Cars.

Officers and men of the British unit in Russia have had conferred upon them by the Tsar the Order and Medal of St. Ann for "meritorious work." This unit consists of a large number of powerful armoured cars and a complete equipment with hundreds of officers and men. Many of its members have fought in Belgium, France, Gallipoli, and in German South-West Africa, and they represent South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Ireland, while a number come from the constituency (North Huntingdon) of Commander Locker-Lampson, M.P., who is in command. The unit left England in November last, but, the ice having formed in the White Sea, they were unable to proceed to Archangel, and thereupon steamed to Alevandrovsk, which remains an open port all the year round. The transports with the armored cars were anchored in the harbor of Alexandrovsk, while the officers and men landed and prepared to spend the winter in the Arctic. The winter months were very hard, with intense cold, the glass being nearly always below zero, and with but a couple of hours light daily, but the men, despite the hardships and frostbite, were cheery and in good spirits. The school buildings at Alexandrovsk—a centre of education in Lapland—were utilized as barracks, and here day by day the British were drilling and training in order to keep themselves fit for the work ahead of them. As soon as the ice melted all rejoined their ships and proceeded to Archangel, where they had a tremendous welcome and civic reception. The unit were feted all the way to Moscow, and had another enthusiastic reception there. They were cheered and pelted with flowers by thousands of people, and following a public luncheon, Commander Locker-Lampson and other members of the unit were presented with mementoes by the Grand Duchess Elizabeth. So they progressed to the battlefront, always through cheering crowds at the wayside stations, where flowers and cigarettes were thrown into the railway carriages.

Naval Facts.

In the British shipbuilding yards, when the present orders are completed, well over 1,000,000 tons of shipping will have been turned out during the war. A ship which used to take eighteen months is now executed in twelve, although extravagant acceleration rates have been abolished. In one yard, which has never yet failed to keep the appointed day for delivery, the rate of work in the last twelve months has been one destroyer every seven weeks. Three aeroplanes a week are also part of its product; and this in spite of the fact that skilled men have been taken from the shipyards for the army and there is a cry for more men. They are building ships so fast in one yard that only one side of certain vessels can be finished till the ship next to it has been launched on account of lack of space. Not a yard of ground, not a minute of time, is wasted. The heads of these wonderful yards are enthusiastic over their work and its efficiency. One of these men spent £25,000 on an experimental tank for models of ships, while another spent £32,000 on a similar experiment. The tools and machinery for these colossal shipbuilding operations are huge. At one of the yards on the Tyne there is a crane that could lift an express locomotive off the Tyne high-level bridge, while some of the tools for the boring and lining of large projectiles weigh twenty-four tons.

Long Time to Wait.

Here is a story concerning the late Mr. J. F. Warden and the veteran John L. Toole. The twain entered a hostelry which was a favorite resort in Belfast forty years ago, having arranged a plan of campaign before going in. J. F. ordered a bottle of champagne and asked the proprietor, who knew both gentlemen well, whether he would be satisfied to take payment when a bet which they had just made was decided. He assented readily, and the bottle was instantly uncorked, mine host cordially accepting the invitation to join in a glass. They chatted freely for a while, then prepared to depart. The proprietor hinted, before going, that he would like to know the result of the bet and what it was about.

"Oh," said Mr. Warden, "we have been examining the Albert Memorial, and my friend Mr. Toole has laid me a bet that when it falls it will be in the direction of Corporation street, and I have bet him that, instead, it will fall towards Victoria street."

Divorce by Candle.

If the Burmese husband and the Burmese wife come to the conclusion that they are not suited to each other, their procedure is simple and direct. The wife does not go to her solicitor, but to the tallow chandler. From him she obtains two little candles. These she brings home, and she and her husband sit down on the floor, placing the candles between them. One candle represents the husband, one the wife. They are lighted at the same moment, and the owner of the one that goes out first leaves the house, taking only his or her clothes, while the owner of the more enduring candle remains also the owner of the house and all that therein is.

He Knew.

The following is told by a young bride-elect who was ordering her trousseau in England before going out to New Zealand to be married. The dressmaker suggested only very warm clothes, and when the young lady demurred at this, asserting that the climate of New Zealand is a beautifully mild one, she was immediately informed:

"I assure you, madam, you are mistaken, for that, of course, is where the frozen meat comes from."

Making a Scrap Book.

Mankind may be divided into two classes, those who preserve fugitive clippings and those who don't. Among the former are many who for lack of classification become victims of their own belongings. They clip assiduously, they lay aside newspapers containing articles they wish to keep for reference, and they postpone the task of sorting and arrangement to the rainy day or the interval of leisure which never arrives. Presently they are dismayed to find themselves confronted by a pile of ephemeral literature mountain high, wherein it seems hopeless even to blaze a trail. That is where the person of meticulous, orderly habits shows his irritating superiority. With him day unto day has uttered wisdom; he has tabulated and pigeonholed his stores as they came to his hand. It does not prove that you are literary and learned to raise a vast rubbish heap around yourself or to live in a ruin that suggests the visit of a Zeppelin. Those who keep scrapbooks are likely to reckon them among the most precious items in their libraries.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Two Medical Men.

Some time ago during a performance Sir Herbert Tree had the misfortune to slip while going from his dressing room to the stage and injure his shoulder rather badly. He was in great pain, but pluckily determined to go through with his part, and just as he was about to make his entrance on the stage he whispered to some one in the wings:

"Send for a doctor!"

When the scene was over the doctor had not arrived, so Sir Herbert told one of the stage hands to go around to the front of the theater to see if he could find a medical man among the audience. Shortly afterward the stage hand returned, proudly and breathlessly, in company with two professional gentlemen.

"One of them," says Sir Herbert sadly when he tells the story, "was a vet and the other was a dentist!"

When Your Foot Is Asleep.

After being for a long time in a constrained attitude a peculiar numbness and pricking are often felt in the arm, leg or foot. This is caused by some interruption to the circulation and can usually be removed by rubbing or exercise. The reason of the sensation, which is decidedly uncomfortable while it lasts, is that pressure for a certain length of time deadens the sensibility of a nerve. When this pressure is suddenly removed, as straightening out the leg after sitting with it doubled underneath the body, sensibility gradually returns to the nerve, and as each nerve fiber composing the trunk regains its normal condition of sensibility a pricking sensation is felt, and these successive prickings from the successive awakenings of the numerous fibers have not inaptly been called "pins and needles."

He Would Never Know.

A well-known English novelist recently found himself in a train with two very gushing ladies. Having recognized him from his published portraits, they began to praise his novels in a manner which was unendurable to the sensitive author. Presently the train entered a tunnel, and in the darkness the novelist raised the back of his hand to his lips and kissed it soundly.

When light returned he found the two ladies regarding one another in icy silence. Addressing them with great suavity, he said: "Ah, ladies, the one regret of my life will be that I shall never know which of you it was that kissed me!" From latest accounts the ladies have not yet spoken to each other.

Meredith's Daughter-in-Law.

Mrs. Margaret Meredith, whose choral ode will be performed at the Kingsway Hall in aid of wounded soldiers, is a daughter-in-law of the great novelist, George Meredith, and daughter of John Maclean, the engineer associated with De Lesseps in the construction of the Suez Canal. Her son has won the Military Cross.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 24.—Wheat closed today 2⅝c higher for July and 3¼c higher for October and December. Oats were ⅛c lower for July and ⅝c up for October. Barley declined ½c, while flax gained ½c for July and October, and was unchanged for November. The market quickly changed today from a decidedly easy one to a strong bull market, shorts having sold at the top of the bulge and were caught. There was some legitimate buying, but most of it was speculative trade. Cash demand was fair.

NOT CANADIAN NICKEL.

Not a Pound of Metal Has Gone to Germany, Says Government.

If the German super-submarine Deutschland leaves the United States with a cargo of nickel, that nickel will not be Canadian.

A statement issued a few days ago by the Gvernment makes this point clear.

This statement repeats what has been said on former occasions, that the Canadian Government's measures taken early in the war to prevent the export of Canadian nickel to Germany has the full approval of the British Government, which regards those measures as sufficient. It will be remembered that these measures included an arrangement with the International Nickel Co., of New Jersey, which refines most of the Canadian ore, whereby the destination of the refined product has been checked continuously by an officer of the Canadian Government. The statement was made by the Solicitor-General recently that under this arrangement not a pound of Canadian nickel had gone to Germany.

It is pointed out now that the United States has at its disposal annually some hundreds of tons of nickel manufactured from ore obtained in that country and in New Caledonia.

The statement is as follows: "The attention of the Government has been directed to the statement that nickel, which, it is said, will be conveyed by a German submarine from Baltimore, to a German port, is from Canadian mines. This allegation is based upon the statement that no nickel is refined in the United States except what is derived from Canada. That this statement is entirely inaccurate is shown by the following report from Major Graham A. Bell, who, since the early months of the war, has had the duty of examining and supervising the destination and use of all nickel refined in the United States from Canadian ore. Major Bell's statement is as follows:

"There is a considerable quantity of nickel ore obtained through various copper mines in the United States, and this ore is refined principally by the American Smelting and Refining Company. There is also nickel ore obtained from New Caledonia, which is refined by the United States Nickel Co., of New Brunswick, N.J. The quantity, of course, does not compare with the tonnage manufactured from Canadian ores, but there are some hundreds of tons of refined nickel produced yearly from these sources.'

"Measures taken by the Government of Canada to control the destination and use of nickel refined from Canadian ores have the complete approval of the British Government. It should be added that the Canadian Government have always been prepared to take any further measures for this purpose, which the British Government might suggest, but the last-named Government is satisfied that the precautions taken are sufficient to prevent the enemy from receiving supplies from this source. As a matter of fact, the factories in the United States which are manufacturing guns, rifles, and munitions for the allied nations depend for their supply of nickel almost wholly, if not altogether, upon the Canadian production. The munitions plants in the British Isles and in other allied countries are also supplied from the Canadian output."

Great Future for Liquid Air.

Mr. Arthur L. Clark, professor of physics in Queen's University, Kingston, who went to Holland at the invitation of Prof. H. Kamerlingh-Onnes, the famous director of the marvelous Physics Laboratory at the University of Leiden, to go further into the question of liquefying air, and who has just returned home, states that his mission was successful. The object of Prof. Clark's going to Leiden was to determine more accurately the temperatures at which air liquefies and freezes. At the Leiden University he liquefied and froze air. The results of the joint experiments of Prof. Clark and Prof. Onnes are to be published in the proceedings of the Royal Academy of Amsterdam and also in the report of the International Commission of Cold, of which Prof. Clark is a member.

Prof. Clark states that Prof. Onnes is of the opinion that there will be a great commercial future for liquid air, and predicts that in a few years it will be extensively used in connection with the mechanical arts. Prof. Clark intends to install a liquid air machine at Queen's for the purpose of continuing his experiments.

Over 25 Per Cent. Return to Front.

The benefits derived by wounded soldiers from the treatment at the Granville Canadian Special Hospital, Ramsgate, under Lieut.-Colonel Watt of Winnipeg, were shown recently in a demonstration given before Surgeon-General Jones and other doctors, together with a large number of guests. Through it over 25 per cent. of the cases had been restored for active service and others fitted for light services who otherwise would have been discharged as unfit. Since opening in November, two buildings have been taken as an annex. The present number under treatment is 778, all Canadians. The luncheon and demonstration were attended by the local military and navy authorities, and the town was en fete.

More Cigarette Smoking.

The consumption of cigarettes in Canada has been increased during the war. In the last fiscal year the aggregate numbers entered for consumption at the Inland Revenue Department was 1,168,027,845, 86,936,545 being entered for "army and navy stores," 49,900 heavy cigarettes and 95,363 pounds of tobacco came under the same head.

A Master of Tact

IN the opinion of "Ex-Attache," whose acquaintance with public men in the Old Country is of long standing, and who contributes articles on European affairs to the Pittsburg Dispatch, Canada is to be congratulated upon the fact that the Duke of Devonshire is to be her next Governor-General. "Ex-Attache" says that Canadians will find in the Duke of Devonshire one of the most approachable and genial viceroys who was ever sent to Ottawa. It is admitted that it will be so easy task to succeed so heartily liked a Governor-General as the Duke of Connaught, who has endeared himself to the people of this country; but if anyone could succeed in the task it is likely to be the Duke of Devonshire, whose great position has been so long established that he has never felt the slightest need of asserting it in word or bearing.

Only a strong sense of duty could induce the Duke of Devonshire to accept the position of Governor-General of Canada, for he has nothing left in the way of elevation of rank to which he might aspire; and highly though the people of Ottawa may esteem the privilege of living in that city, it is not something that might fittingly crown the ambition of a Duke of Devonshire. His acceptance of the post means that he will have to break up his racing stable, close Devonshire House in Piccadilly and the famous Chatsworth mansion in Derbyshire, as well as Lismore Castle in Waterford to both of which country residences he and the Duchess are said to be deeply attached. Moreover, his active business career will have to be abandoned or at least interrupted for some years, and he has been one of the busiest men in the kingdom. He manages half a dozen great estates, and owns almost the whole of the prosperous seaside town of Eastbourne, of which he has been repeatedly elected Mayor. He is also Lord - Lieutenant of Derbyshire, Chancellor of the University of Leeds, chairman of a great shipbuilding company, and of several industrial and mining concerns, as well as being a M.F.H. and active president of at least a dozen charitable and philanthropic concerns.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of the Duke of Devonshire is his tact, which was so severely tested when he acted as Financial Secretary of the Treasury, in which capacity he was ex-officio the distributor of the Government patronage, and the chief whip of his party. His was the delicate duty of selecting the recipients of peerages, baronetcies, knighthoods, and other honors on the first of the year and on the King's birthday. That he was able to discharge these duties without making enemies or losing friends is sufficient testimonial to his tact, and it must be due largely to this quality that he is, with Lord Derby, the closest personal friend of King George. But it was in his relations with his late uncle, the eighth Duke, that this characteristic shone most brightly, and in especially trying circumstances.

By the will of his grandfather, the seventh Duke, Lord Victor Cavendish, as he then was, received all the property not entailed, family jewels, laces, and other valuable possessions; and it was generally understood that the seventh Duke was strongly opposed to leaving them to his own son, because it was well known that he was to marry the Duchess of Manchester. To this brilliant woman the old Duke had taken a prejudice, and when after his death his son and heir married her, as expected, relations between him and the nephew might well have been strained. That they remained the best of friends, and that the new Duchess of Devonshire left to the wife of the present Duke instead of to any of her own daughters her very finest diamonds are sufficient evidence of the kindliness and tact that had saved a situation that must have been awkward.

It has been noted that among the several names that had been mentioned as likely to succeed the Duke of Connaught, that of the Duke of Devonshire was never heard. War conditions made it injudicious to appoint the Duke of Teck, Queen Mary's brother, after he had been practically decided upon, Lord Curzon was named; and so were Lord Milner, Lord Derby, and Lewis Harcourt. Brilliant public men though they are, Lord Derby had more important war duties to perform at present than it is possible for a Canadian Governor-General to discharge, and Lord Curzon and Lord Milner are probably better adapted for Imperial service in other spheres. The office of Governor-General of Canada has been in the past used to achieve fine strokes of statesmanship, and history may repeat itself in this respect. What the Duke of Devonshire will make of it remains to be seen; that he will make no blunders and many friends his previous career renders a safe prediction.

Chilean Youths Enlist.

Guillermo Garcia Burr, twenty-four years old, and his brother, Horatio Garcia Burr, twenty-eight, sons of a Chilean millionaire planter, enlisted in Windsor a few days ago in the Canadian Army Medical Corps. The young men traveled direct from their home in Chile to Windsor, and told the recruiting officers they expected to pay their own expenses while serving with the Canadian forces. They were informed such an arrangement was against the regulations, and that they could not enlist unless they accepted the regular rate of pay for the arm of the service to which they were attached. Both were sent to London, and hope to be at the front within a month's time.

TRAP FOR ZEPPELINS.

New Device Is in the Hands of the British Government.

One of these days, perhaps, newspaper readers may learn of a Zeppelin caught in an aerial net "somewhere in England." Just as the submerged links of steel swept the seas and reduced the terrors of the German submarine to commonplace warfare, so has a weapon been found to render impotent the battleship of the sky. It is a simple device, the invention of Joseph A. Steinmetz of Philadelphia, and it is in the hands of the British Government.

The idea of netting and destroying Zeppelins is almost as unique in its simplicity as was the seining of submarines. It consists of releasing a great number of hydrogen balloons tied in pairs or sets by piano wire several thousand feet long.

A perfect network of wires carried upward at great speed, will drift against the Zeppelin. The balloons are swept into contact with the airship or will float about it. Automatic or earth-controlled triggers then release the bombs, which are of two varieties, high-explosive or inflammable. At or about this time things will begin to happen to the Zeppelin.

In war time things are done on a stupendous scale. Not 20 or 50, but a multitude of balloons carrying almost a screen of contact wires will be sent into the air, and they will cover such a great area that the airship will have considerable difficulty getting away from the net.

"It has been shown," said Mr. Steinmetz, "that the high-angle artillery fire has failed against the German sky cruiser, but, what is worse the falling fragments of shells and unexploded shells have seriously damaged the city of London. The Zeppelins, which have raided nearly a dozen times, had little difficulty in escaping unscathed, while London really bombarded herself."—Philadelphia North American.

Treating Seed for Smut.

Approximately twenty thousand farmers in Ontario treated their seed grain this spring as a protection against smut, largely as a result of the campaign waged by the Ontario Department of Agriculture during the fall and winter. Returns have just been compiled showing that Ontario druggists so far this year sold to farmers about 4,650 gallons of formalin for treating seed, compared with 1,175 gallons during the whole of 1915, and estimating the seed treated and the insurance given against a repetition of last year's smut damage, Ontario farmers will save a million dollars this season.

It is estimated that the damage to barley, wheat, and oats in Ontario last year from smut was about five million dollars. The serious nature of the loss led the Department of Agriculture last fall to inaugurate a movement to educate farmers to a realization of the importance of seed treatment. Advertisements giving directions for treating the seed were inserted in all the rural papers of the province, and thousands of handbills were distributed. The result is shown in the increase of four hundred per cent. in the amount of formalin used. The increase was general and particularly marked in Eastern Ontario, where the advantages of formalin treatment have not been so widely appreciated in the past.

The campaign will be continued this fall and winter. Recently a deputation from the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade waited upon Hon. James Duff, and strongly supported the department's decision, pointing out that much effective work could be done in encouraging farmers to treat winter wheat to be sown this fall.

Exports Increased.

A heavy increase in exports of manufactured articles during the months of April and May is the outstanding feature of the Canadian trade statement just issued. These exports amounted in May to $27,734,477, and in the two months of the fiscal year to $49,307,555, as compared with $16,121,149 in May last year and $29,342,807 in the two months' period.

Another feature of the statement is the substantial rise in imports of free goods, as well as in dutiable commodities. Dutiable imports in May amounted to $39,740,167, as against $19,851,612 in May last year, while imports of free goods increased from $14,539,196 in May last year to $29,857,645.

Imports of all classes inclusive of coin and bullion amounted last month to $70,230,181, compared with $35,046,944 in the same period last year. May, including bullion, amounted to $94,654,295, as against $42,080,486. The grand total of all Canadian trade for May was $176,873,466, and for the two months of the fiscal year $284,555,958. The total for May last year was $80,023,321, and for the two months $145,244,352.

Exports of agricultural products during the month just closed rose to $47,433,750, an increase of no less than $34,687,623. Other exports also show substantial increases.

Canada's Naval Ward.

A "Canada" ward is to be maintained at the Seaman's Hospital, Greenwich, as a permanent home for sick and suffering Canadian seamen. Announcement of this has been conveyed to the Government in a letter to Hon. J. D. Hazen from Lord Davenport, thanking the Government for the contribution of $5,000 made toward the maintenance of the hospital in response to a special appeal for assistance. The Canadian contribution has resulted in the establishment of the Canada ward.

LARGEST IN THE WORLD

CANADA'S BUFFALO HERD HAS STEADILY GROWN.

Have Fared Well in the New National Park at Wainwright—From Four Little Bison Calves Captured in 1873 the Herd Has Grown Until It Now Numbers 2,077.

THE Canadian Government is meeting with signal success in its efforts to preserve the buffalo from the swift extinction which threatened it a few years ago. This is shown in a report on the growth of the herd at Wainwright Buffalo Park, Alberta, just issued by J. B. Harkin, Dominion Parks Commissioner.

The report shows that in April, 1909, the herd numbered 402. Since then it has gradually increased at the rate of about 200 a year, until today it numbers 2,077.

The history of this herd, now the largest in the world, dates back to 1873, when a Pend o'Reille Indian captured four little bison calves—two bulls and two heifers—by cutting them out of a stampeded herd on the Flathead Reservation in Montana. In accordance with a peculiar characteristic, often noticed by old plainsmen, these young creatures obediently followed the horses of the hunters who had slain or driven off their mothers.

The Indian in question gave them to the Mission of St. Ignatius, where they were kept as pets and became as domesticated as ordinary cattle. When the heifers were four years old each had a calf. From that time on they gradually increased in number, until, in 1884, there were thirteen head, and finding the care of them too great a tax the mission decided to sell them. Ten head were bought for $250 apiece by C. C. A. Allard and Michel Pablo, who were ranching on the reservation, and were shrewd enough to see that specimens of what was even then almost an extinct animal would eventually become very valuable.

The herd increased under their careful supervision, and in a few years it became possible to sell specimens at high prices. Some idea of the average rate of increase may be deduced from the observed fact that half the cows give birth to calves every year, while twin calves are not uncommon. As a rule the bison calf is a very hardy creature. There are instances of the Pablo-Allard calves finding their feet in less than a minute after birth and showing fight within half an hour.

In 1906 the Hon. Frank Oliver, then Minister of the Interior, obtained for the Dominion Government an option on the 600 unsold head belonging to Pablo and Allard, and eventually they were all bought for $200,000. The "round-up" lasted two months, and was carried out by 75 cowboys, horsemen picked for their ability from Alberta, and was accomplished with a loss of less than one per cent.

Since it became the property of the Canadian Government this great herd has fared well in the new National Park at Wainwright. The park is becoming a favorite resort of the traveller. It has an area of 160 square miles and is securely enclosed with a high fence of wire.

Canada's Fire Loss.

"In war time, and while many interests are urging thrift and economy, the Canadian people are burning up their created resources at a much greater rate this year than last," is the statement which appears in a bulletin issued by the Conservative Commission recently.

"During the first five months of 1916 the fire loss in Canada has exceeded that of January to May, 1915, by approximately $3,000,000, or $600,000 per month," continues the bulletin. At this rate of increase our fire loss will exceed that of 1915 by $7,200,000.

"Canada has need of all her financial resources. She is borrowing money to carry on the war, and is paying 5 per cent. interest thereon. The additional fire loss of 1916 would therefore pay the interest charge on the recent war loan of $100,000,000, and would pay $2,200,000 of the principal. Canada's average annual fire loss, of over $23,000,000, would pay 5 per cent. interest on approximately half a billion dollars. Our fire loss is, however, some thing for which we are receiving no value, either financial or patriotic; it is simply a tax, due in great part to carelessness, which Canadians appear willing to pay, and which they, as a whole, are doing little to avert."

Kilts Order Modified.

The order with regard to the Canadian soldiers wearing kilts, as announced by the Militia Department a few days ago, has been somewhat modified. The change is that while the department will not put the country to the extra expense of providing kilts instead of trousers for the Highland battalions, if the units or private people are willing to make up the difference in cost, then the battalions may have kilts. However, in no case will the department provide kilts at the country's expense in the future. They cost considerably more than trousers. While a few units may make up the difference in cost to keep the kilts, it is expected that in the majority of Highland battalions the historic dress will be superseded.

Cunning of the Castor Oil Plant in Protecting Its Seeds.

Dressing them up to look like foul tasting bugs, this plant protects her children from hungry birds. If it were not for their disguises the children might be eaten and never have a chance to grow and become big plants. The wise mother plant realizes this, hence the masquerade. It's the castor oil plant.

To the average person anything relating to castor oil is not regarded as much of a delicacy. Birds, however, think otherwise. The seeds of the plant are like candy to them.

So the mother plant schemes to protect them. When she sends them out into the world she clothes them in variegated and fantastic dress until the seeds resemble coccinella beetles.

Now, if there is anything birds dislike more than anything else it is a coccinella beetle. As a result they make a wry face when they see the castor oil beans and pass them by.

These seeds are oval and about a half inch long. They grow in spiny capsules, three seeds in each capsule. To show that the castor oil plant is no newcomer on the earth, archaeologists write of finding seeds in tombs of ancient Egyptians.—Philadelphia North American.

FIRE BAGS AT SEA.

The Kind They Used in the Day of the Old Tinder Box.

Every whaler and sealer that sailed the seas in the days of wooden ships carried a fire bag. This was a tarpaulin bag about a foot long and six inches wide lined with waterproof material, with interlinings of oilcloth and thick flannel. Into this was placed the flint and tinder box for kindling fire, and the bag was then securely fastened with double flaps and tied to keep its contents dry.

It was the special duty of the second mate to look after the fire bag and in case of shipwreck to attach it at once to his person by means of stout straps provided for the purpose. Thus if officers and crew were cast away on some deserted shore in the desolate arctic circle the means of obtaining a fire to warm themselves by and to heat food and drink would not be wanting as long as the precious fire bag was safe.

The steam whalers and sealers of the present day still carry a fire bag stowed in the lifeboat with the bread and water, but now it is of rubber and contains half a dozen tin boxes of matches.

Double Eyed Fish.

There is a fish equipped with bifocal eyes, one-half of the lens for seeing above the surface of the water and the other for submarine use. This characteristic also gives the fish its popular name—double eyes.

The fish inhabits the shores of South America. Sometimes they swim with the eyes half out of water. Examination shows that each lens is divided into two parts by a dark band. The half above the band is out of water and the other half below the surface.

Naturalists tell us that the fish's eyes became "double" from its practice in swimming with them half submerged. Nature made the part of the eye above water adapted for seeing in the air, while the other part remained adapted for vision underwater.

The double eyes grow to about a foot in length and in Brazil are caught for food.

Military Salute's Origin.

The military salute had a curious origin if tradition is to be believed. It is said that it originated in the days of the tournament, at which a queen of beauty was chosen to preside. The knights and their esquires and all who took part in the tourney on presenting themselves before the queen lifted each one a hand level with the brows as though dazzled by the light of her presence. A nicely thought out compliment this, and, though its significance is now forgotten, the natural dignity of the gesture has preserved it as an everyday mark of recognition of a superior rank.—London Chronicle.

Recovered Eyesight in Hospital.

To have been wounded in the abdomen by a German bayonet and lain on a field until further wounded in the thigh by shrapnel shell and rendered unconscious for ten days, then to awake in a field hospital and find himself blind was the experience of Sergt. Harry Marks at the battle of Givenchy Woods.

Sergt. Marks' home was in the United States. He enlisted in Windsor, at the outbreak of the war, and was so impressed with the character and bravery of the Canadians that he decided to make his future home in Canada after being invalided from King George Hospital in London, where his eyesight was miraculously restored after being brought from France. Sergt. Marks returned on April 30th, went to Toronto, and was married, and arrived last week in St. Catharines, where he will remain, providing he is able to procure suitable employment.

Before being wounded at Givenchy Sergt. Marks was through the thick of the heavy fighting at Neuve Chapelle, Ypres, and Festubert, during which all the officers of his battalion were killed, including Col. Becher.

She Told Him.

Dillydally (a chronic procrastinator)—I dreamed last night that I—er—ah—proposed to you. I wonder what that is a sign of? Miss Lingerlong (desperately)—It is a sign that you have got more sense when you are asleep than when you are awake.

Wigs.

The fashion of wearing wigs was due to a skin disease which produced bald patches on the august head of Francis I. of France. He got a wig, and his courtiers followed suit, just as they all whispered when he had an attack of laryngitis.

At the Hospital.

"What's the matter with that glass eater?"

"He tries to lunch off a window yesterday and now he has a pane in his stomach."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Keep the Feet Dry.

Dr. Alvah H. Doty, formerly health officer of the port of New York, contributes some sound, common sense advice to the Medical Record on how not to catch cold. It is low resisting power, he says, that allows us to contract such infectious diseases as colds and grip, and those who escape such troubles are those whose organs are healthy and strong enough to resist the attacks of the germs that produce them.

"Nothing," writes Dr. Doty, "contributes more directly to predisposition to acute inflammatory conditions of the respiratory tract than wet feet. * * * Nine-tenths of the footgear worn by women offers no protection whatever against damp or wet streets. * * * Even the heavier shoes worn by men offer but little more protection. Besides, so called waterproof shoes exist chiefly in the imagination."

Dr. Doty insists that rubbers should always be worn in wet weather and says they will not draw or sweat the feet if removed immediately upon entering the house.

COOL CLOTHES

This is the time of the year when a Man wants to wear as little as possible. If you wear one of our Cool Two Piece Suits, it's certain you won't "Wear a Worried Look!"

But there are two considerations in a Two Piece Suit, which call for most competent Tailoring. In the first place, the Coat must be so tailored as to obviate the need of a Vest. In the second place, as the fabrics are extremely light in weight, the Tailoring must be done with the greatest skill.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

COBOURG BATTERY SEEKS

The Cobourg Heavy Battery, with headquarters at Cobourg, which is now recruiting its fifth overseas draft, has an enviable record, both past and present. Organized in 1866, its members have seen service in the Fenian Raid, North-West Rebellion, and South African war, and four times have won the Governor General's Cup for general efficiency in big gun competition at Halifax and Quebec.

When war was declared on August 4th, 1914, the Cobourg Heavy Battery was the first volunteer company in Canada to be ordered on active service. It left Cobourg on Thursday, August 6th, with a strength of four officers and 120 men, having been given twenty-four hours to get ready. Since then four overseas drafts to the heavy artillery have left Cobourg, and have done splendid work at the front. The fifth draft is now being formed.

SPECIAL SERVICE COMPANY.

A special service company under the command of Capt. Thorne has been organized at Barriefield, in accordance with an order from headquarters that physically unfit men are not to be discharged. These men now occupy a row of tents in the site vacated by the 109th Battalion. They will be drilling regularly and when possible take over guard duties through the camp, thus relieving medically fit men to carry on training for their work at the front.

The idea is a splendid one and it is expected that a full company of 250 men will be able to remain in uniform and continue to perform valuable service though unfit for work overseas. There will also be convalescents and others in this company, and from time to time as they recover sufficiently to pass the medical examination they can be taken on the strength of overseas units.

MANY BOYS UNDER EIGHTEEN.

Boys under eighteen years of age who enlist in the Expeditionary Force should be careful to receive their parents' consent or run the risk of bringing themselves into a lot of trouble. In their zeal to secure recruits during the winter many officers would take on lads under the age limit and neglect to secure the consent of the parents. This is now the source of great trouble to the officers in command of units at the camp, as the parents in some cases use this means to secure their boys' release from the army.

It is certainly a contemptible trick for a man to allow his son to enlist, draw pay for six or seven months, and then whine around until he is released. One particularly disgusting case arose recently in the lines of the 155th Battalion, when a citizen of the north country, while admitting that he knew his son was enlisting six months ago under age of eighteen, demanded that he be released immediately.

NOTES.

Lieut. H. A. Fish and Lieut. J. A. Davy, 155th Battalion, are attending the school of bombing this week.

The band of the 155th Battalion gave a concert last evening for the city Y.M.C.A. in the grounds of the Y.M.C.A. on the corner of Clergy and Johnston streets. Bandmaster Hinchey's boys are certainly in demand.

Rev. C. G. Smith, B.D., of Belleville, was the guest of the 155th officers at lunch Monday.

Lieut. Sandford, assistant adjutant of the 155th Battalion, is taking his first lessons in horseback riding.

Twelve of the sergeants taking the machine gun course at the camp school are attached to the 155th Battalion for rations.

The sergeants of the 155th Battalion have erected a marquee adjoining their mess tent for recreation purposes. There is some class to the senior noncoms. of the Belleville battalion, and they intend having every good thing that the camp can possibly afford.

A new camp detention compound will be built in a few days instead of the one north-west of the ranges, which is in the danger zone of the gallery rifle range. Camp Sergt.-Major Groom will have charge of the new detention and the handling of all prisoners.

Lieut. Young of the 155th Battalion is still on leave at his home in Picton. Since returning from the front Lieut. Young has not been in the best of health. The machine gun school is very anxious to secure his services as an instructor, and trusts that he will be able to return to perform this duty.

British Cruiser In Chesapeake Bay

Enters Three-Mile Limit and Steams Out Again—Legal Point Arises

NORFOLK, Va., July 26.—(Special.)—Pilotless, and without warning to United States officials, one of the British cruisers lying off Cape Henry awaiting the appearance of the German submersibles Deutschland and Bremen, steamed through the Virginia Capes early yesterday, proceeded to the vicinity of Fortress Monroe, cruised about for an hour or more, and then returned to a point just outside the three-mile limit.

The United States warship Louisiana and the collier Neptune were the only Government vessels which sighted the ship, and a detailed report of the incident was made to Washington tonight by naval officers. Upon being pressed for her identity the ship put out man-ofwar lights and signalled "British cruiser." Authorities here say they can see no violation of international law of navigation regulations.

The cruiser was a three-funneled vessel of the type of the Berwick. She was said to carry twenty-six guns, ranging from 3-inch to 6-pounders, and eighteen-inch torpedo tubes.

PRESENTATION OF COLORS

To 155th (Bay of Quinte) Battalion, C. E. F., at Belleville Armouries

This popular battalion under the command of Lt.-Col. Adams, will arrive in Belleville at 9.00 A.M. on Saturday, July 29th. Transportation has been arranged with the Canadian Northern Railway Co.

As this is a local battalion, the men having been recruited entirely from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, it is anticipated that there will be a large influx of people to Belleville.

The men are all in splendid condition, and are looking forward to this outing, which will be a pleasant change from the daily routine of duties at camp. An excellent opportunity will be afforded friends of members of the battalion, seeing the Hastings and Prince Edward soldiers on parade, and as the battalion will not be leaving Belleville until Sunday evening, ample time will be given the men to visit friends and relations.

The cost of transportation, etc., will be borne entirely by the officers and men themselves who are all anxious to show the general public what advantage they have taken of the hard trainig at Barriefield Camp.

Men who have homes or friends in Belleville, will be permitted to stay with their friends or relations over night.

The colors, which are very richly embroidered, are the gift of the Argyle Chapter, I.O.D.E. The presentation will take place on the Armouries' lawn at 2.30 P.M.

Colonel Hemming, D.O.C. 3rd Division, with the members of his staff, will also be present and as the railway companies have arranged special excursion rates, there is no doubt that Colonel Adams, his officers and men, will meet with a very hearty welcome, and all will endeavor to make the short stay a really enjoyable one.

The battalion will entrain at the C. N. R. station at 7.00 P.M. on Sunday for the return journey.

No special invitations are being sent out, but it is hoped that the friends of the battalion will all be present.

The Best Thing For Dyspepsia

WHY PEPSIN, PANCREATIN, ETC., SO FREQUENTALY FAIL.

An international specialist whose articles on stomach trouble have been printed in nearly every language, recently stated that to treat the average case of stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., by doctoring the stomach, killing the pain with opiates, or by the use of artificial aids to digestion such as pepsin and pancreatin, was just as foolish and useless as to attempt to put out a fire by throwing water on the smoke, instead of the fire. He claims, and facts seem to justify his claim, that nearly nine-tenths of all stomach trouble is due to acidity and food fermentation; and that the only way in which to secure permanent relief is to get rid of the cause i.e. to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation. For this purpose he strongly recommends the plan now generally adopted throughout Europe of taking a teaspoonful of ordinary bisurated magnesia after eating or whenever pain is felt. This immediately neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work in a normal manner and thus by removing the cause, enables nature to quickly restore the inflamed stomach lining to a perfectly healthy natural condition. For the convenience of travellers it may be noted that most druggists are now able to supply bisurated magnesia in 5 grain tablets, 2 or 3 of which will almost instantly relieve the most violent attacks of indigestion.

Never so Many Weddings as in England Since War Broke Out

There Is a Sadness to Most of These Nuptials, However, and Often the Joy of Married Life Soon Gives Way to Loneliness and Woe

LONDON, July 25.—"There's a war wedding most days now, to keep us busy," said the old verger, as he knocked out the ash from his pipe against a gravestone hard by.

"War wedding!" I exclaimed, "why, I thought everyone was too busy to get married these stirring times!"

"Don't you believe it," the old man chuckled, and his eyes twinkled. "The lads may be fighting, and the girls busy working for them, but it does not hinder the love-making."

And in corroboration of the truth of his words he showed me the church register, which bore witness to five weddings in that one little village during the preceding week.

Everybody's Doing It.

"In the old days," he continued, "a wedding made no end of a stir; but bless you," he added, "they're all doing it now.

"There was my young Tom who was married only yesterday," he continued. "Before the war the two were always quarelling, till they fell out. But young Tom, he come home six weeks ago with his head all bandaged up and his arm blown off. That did it," he added, "and yesterday they were made man and wife in this very church.'

"And you think it improbale that they'll quarrel now?" I said, with a smile.

"They may have their little differences now and again, of course," he agreed; "most folks do—but they've both of them learned a lesson which will teach 'em to bear and forbear."

And while he reiterated with a sad insistence that "the tower was built in Stephen's time," and that "poor old Jones hung himself in the belfry seven years come next Friday," I pondered over what he had said, and realized the truth of his convictions that war undoubtedly is proving a greath match-maker.

Hymen's Altar Busy.

The din of the battle is filling the air to-day, but above the martial din the sound of marriage bells peals gaily.

Never before have there been so many weddings. Many of them have been hurried little ceremonies, hastened by a brief respite from the trenches of the bridegroom. Others have heralded the "joining up" of some brave lad in the near future. And behind the scenes of both, grim spectre at the marriage feast, Tragedy, emphasized by the outward courage and bravery of the dry-eyed war bride, has lurked. All of us who have witnessed these solemn ceremonies must have understood the sad thoughts and fears that lie hidden in the heart of the bride, who recognizes that the grim and dreadful hand of warfare is hovering over her newly-made husband and may claim him.

Perhaps it is this truth which prompts and urges forward the wedding day, for every woman is proud of the man who is fighting, and feels that in sharing his name she shares his honor too. Certain it is that the clash of arms finds a quick response in the heart of woman.

Every Man a Hero

Every man, to the woman who loves him, is a hero. Resplendent in the uniform that proclaims him a soldier fighting for King and country, he is thrice hero. Every woman is proud of her own soldier.

The parting which seems so close to the uniting harmony of the war-wedding is robbed of much of its bitterness by the great pride that reigns in the woman's heart, and undoubtedly will prove a worthy and solid basis of marriage.

There is nothing like mutual suffering to bridge a gulf, and many a couple whom war has united might in peaceful times have drifted apart.

Some Wait Too Long.

Many a man might well hesitate in uncertainty until, suddenly faced with a parting that he knows full well may prove the final one, he finds new courage. And many a woman has realized only too poignantly the depth of her love, while the dreadful days of suspense drag heavily by as she waits for news of some dear one. These long vigils must have revealed to many a woman a love of which she herself was ignorant. War must have rent many a veil asunder.

Standing in that quiet churchyard it seemed incredible that so stern and fearful a havoc as war should be required to bring out this great truth in human nature. Yet time has proved that out of strife and conflict alone has great peace arisen; and out of bloodshed and sorrow a greater understanding has developed, a new and brighter era dawned.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

WHAT IS IT?

The following instructions regarding Infantile Paralysis are issued by the Provincial Board of Health:

Infantile Paralysis, also called Anterior Poliomyelitis, is a communicable disease chiefly of children between the age of two and fourteen years. Older children and adults may also be affected by the disease.

The disease is epidemic in some United States cities and in a least one town in Ontario.

It is believed that Infantile Paralysis is spread from one child to another by means of the secretions of the nose and mouth by direct transfer. It is possible also that it is spread by flies which have been in contace with intestinal discharges. It may become widespread in country as well as in crowded city districts, and persons who have been in contact with case of the disease may harbour the contagion and give it to others without contracting the disease themselves; that is they are "carriers."

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

(1) Every case must be quarantined for a period of six weeks.

(2) All children who have been in contact with a case must be quarantined and kept under observation for a period of two weeks.

(3) Adult members of the family who are wage earners may be allowed to go about their work subject to the regulations of the Provincial Board and on the discretion of the Medical Officer of Health.

(4) Where there is an outbreak, gatherings of children, such as picnices, picture shows, and playgrounds, should be prohibited.

(5) The source of origin of each case should be carefully enquired into in order that proper quarantine may be maintained.

(6) In houses where cases appear all doors and windows should be screened, the premises kept clean, and no accumulation of garbage or waste permitted.

(7) All cases should be at once notified to the Medical Officer of Health and by him to the Chief Officer of the Provincial Board.

(8) Mild cases, showing slight headache, rise of temperature and vomiting persisting for a few days, with slight muscular weakness and absence of paralysis, should be quarantined. These are probably one of the chief sources of contagion.

(9) As Infantile Paralysis is a most serious disease and in the present epidemic giving a high death-rate, the public is urged to second the efforts of the authorities in every way in order to prevent a severe outbreak in the Province.

(10) All materials such as cloths, eac., carrying secretions and discharges from patients should be burned, boiled or disinfected.

If the disease shows any tendency to spread, special quarantine measures may be necessary.

The New "Standard Hotel" Regulations To be Out Next Week

KINGSTON, July 26.—Regulations governing the "standard hotels" as they will be administered by the Ontario License Board following September 16th are to be issued next week, according to the announcement of Vice-Chairman Dingman, of the Board.

Stress will be laid upon cleanliness, comfort and convenience, according to Mr. Dingman, but the new regulations will not impose any hardship upon proprietors. They will be similar, in fact, to those of the present Liquor License Act, excepting that the "bars," will not have any time restrictions. It will be possible to buy a drink—of soda water—any time the proprietor likes to sell it.

The license fee of $1, it is understood, will relieve a poprietor from payment of whatever municipal fees for tobaccos or restaurant business may be levied in his locality.

WOUND PROVED FATAL

Canadian Osteopath Succumbs to Effects of Shot

BOSTON, July 26.—Dr Wilfrid E. Harris, President of the Massachusetts College of Osteophathy, who was shot by Dr Eldridge D. Atwood a week ago at the Hotel Westminster, died yesterday at the City Hospital. At the bedside of the dying man were his wife and other relatives.

For a week Dr Harris lingered between life and death. At one time his condition was such that much encouragement was given by the attending physicians. But he suddenly took a change for the worse, and a few hours later the victim in the so-called "triangle" tragedy passed away.

The police have announced that the death of Dr Harris will alter the charge against Dr Atwood to murder. Dr Harris came from Canada.

NO REST UNTIL BERLIN IS REACHED SAYS DERBY

Lord Derby Pays Great Tribute to British Troops—Confidence is Absolute—Great Britain Never More Hopeful or United, He Says—Advance Made on the Somme Well Worth the Losses Sustained

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.) — Lord Derby, Under-Secretary of War, who recently visited the British front, to-day gave his impression of the work being done there by the British army:

"I never saw such absolute confidence, not only among the officers, but all the grades, from the Generals down. Men who fifteen months ago were in counting-houses are to-day the finest soldiers imaginable.

"After all, you cannot beat a volunteer army, where such spirit and confidence exists, for remember I should say at least ninety-three per cent. of the army are volunteers, while the remainder really only wanted their minds made up for them.

"Great Britain is not tiring of the war. On the contrary, the country has never been more hopeful and united," said Lord Derby.

Advance Worth the Losses.

Lord Derby was asked whether the ground gained in the recent British advance was worth the losses in men.

Lord Derby said: "There is no question about it."

He paid tribute to the Prussians, who, he said, were fighting like "tigers," but their confident spirit was incomparable with the British.

Regarding the length of the war, Lord Derby said that anyone who named a specific time could only be described as a fool, but that the next two weeks ought to see that things accomplished.

Make Kaiser Harmless.

"What will you do with the Kaiser if you get him?" Lord Derby was asked.

"I cannot say, but I promise he won't be able to do any more harm," replied the Under-Secretary, adding: "But we've got to get him first."

"When you get to Bapaume will you rest there before beginning a new offensive?" he was asked.

"We won't rest until we get to Berlin," came the reply.

Baby's Body Found Buried In Henhouse

Is Supposed to Have Been Three Days Old at Time of Its Death

PETERBOROUGH, July 26—County Crown Attorney Kerr of Northumberland County, has had his hands full of trouble at Hastings during the past few weeks owing to developments caused by the investigations of Proburial of babies prematurely born and otherwise without a burial or birth certificate.

Reeve Fowlds of Hastings made a complaint to the Attorney General's Department about a baby being deserted and left on the doorstep of a Hastings residence and asked that an investigation be made. Inspector Miller was detailed to look the matter up and paid a visit to the village on the Trent.

Inquiries led to a series of investigations and as a result the body of a healthy infant was unearthed in a hen house on a farm adjoining the village and an inquest was held at Hastings on Monday in which the jury viewed the body of a baby. The doctors who had made an examination of the body stated that the baby had been three days old at the time of its death. The man who admitted burying the body stated that the child was still-born. A woman connected with the case made the same statement.

The jury found that they could not come to any conclusion as to the cause of death and left an open verdict.

The concealment of birth and the secret burial were all points against both parties and may be prosecuted further.

The baby that was deserted has since been made a ward of the Children's Aid Society.

A Hun Major Gave The Tip

He Walked Right Across to The Canadian Lines at St. Eloi — Warned Then of Attack

LONDON, July 26.—Though with all the furious fighting in which the Canadians have been engaged since, St. Eloi is more or less ancient history now, one circumstance which preceded the battle does not seem to be very widely known.

On the day before the big attack by the Germans, stated an officer of one of the Winnipeg battalions, the attention of our sentries was attracted by the strange sight of a single man climbing over the German parapet and walking towards our trenches. On came this Hun across No Man's Land right for our lines in the broad light of day. As soon as he got close enough our sentries covered him and ordered him to come and surrender or they would shoot.

Presently, with considerable astonishment, the Westeners saw that the man was a major in the German army. He climbed over the Canadian sand-bags and surrendered. Taken before the officers, the German told them that he was sick of the war and wanted to get out of it. He knew that the Allies were going to win and considered that it was merely waste of time and lives for the Teutons to prolong the conflict. Further, he warned his captors that the Germans were going to make a desperate assault that night in mass formation. The Caandians immediately acted upon this advice and got ready.

Strangely enough not a shot was fired by the Huns at their surrendering major. He had evidently given out that he was attemptng some very bold reconnaissance.

Accident to Pte. D. T. Watson, 155th Battalion, Who Was Taken to the General Hospital

KINGSTON, July 26.—Several days ago Pte. D. T. Watson of the 155th Batalion, Barriefield Camp, was allowed to go to his home in Bancroft to spend a few days' vacation. On Monday afternoon he brought out a shotgun to clean. While he was handling it, it exploded and the bullet entered his left foot. Medical aid was secured and it was found that the second toe on the left foot was badly crushed. The toe was temporarily bandaged and the man was brought to the city. He was met by a motor ambulance of Queen's Medical Corps and was taken to the Kingston General Hospital, where a careful examination of his injuries was conducted. It was decided by the attending physicains that an operation was necessary and the injured toe was amputated.

As soon as the military authorities learned of the accident a board of enquiry was appointed and also a medical board.

Inquiries were made as to whether he would be unfit for military service after he has completely recovered from the accident. The surgeon who atended him at the hospital stated that he would be medically fit for service anywhere. Amputations of toes have many times been performed in order that men with some slight defect in their feet migh be allowed to proceed to the front.

Fire Originated in a Stable and Flames Caught in Roof Of Methodist Edifice

COBOCONK, July 26.—Yesterday the village lost its largest and best church building in a fire, which for a time threatened the buildings of half the population. The fire originated in a stable belonging to Mr. Foster. From there it spread to the joining buildings on both sides. A store-house owned by Wm. The Methodist church across the street from the first fire caught on the roof and burned before help could do anything to stay the fiery demon.

The losses are partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known.

GUNS OF BRITISH ARE LAUDED BY GERMANS

"Better Than Anything I Have Seen," Says an Officer — Gunners Also Praised —"They Came Like Charioteers in a Roman Circus at Full Gallop"—Field Observers Are Audacious Men

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 27.—Special—A German army officer, who brought reinforcements from Verdun to the British front and is now a prisoner, said:

"Your artillery is better than anything that I have seen before, even at Verdun, and worse than anything I had suffered."

All German officers with whom I have spoken are surprised that an army of amateurs, as they call the British should produce such scientific artillery work in so short a time. They also pay tribute to the daring of the field gunners.

"They came up," said one, speaking of the Mametz Wood attack, "like charioteers in a Roman circus at full gallop. Many of their horses were killed, but the men, reckless of danger, placed batteries in the open as though at manoeuvres."

The field observing officers are audacious almost to the point of foolhardiness. Before the ground of attack is cleared of Germans they walk calmly, sit down on the crest of a knoll commanding the field of observation, and send back messages to a battery a mile or so behind.

When the territory round Contalmaison still was swarming with Germans one of the British officers made himself at home on the top of a German dugout, getting excellent information. He went back to the battery for an hour or two and when he returned to the chosen spot he found it occupied by Germans. They wanted to round him up, but he fired a few revolver shots and retired with dignity to choose another place not so crowded with the enemy.

600-POUND SHARK CAUGHT IN FISH NET

Too Big For Boat, Captain Benson Lassoes Fish and Tows it Home

HOLMESVILLE, N.J., July 26.—When Captain Jack Benson's crew of pound-net men came in to the station of the Ship Bottom Fishery, on Lonf Beach, five miles above Beach Haven, this morning, they towed behind their motor boat a 600-pound shark, ten feet eight inches in length, the largest captured since the maneaters from Southern waters began their raids on the New Jersey coast. In the boat were four other sharks, two of them five footers and two four footers. All o fthem had been taken in the morning draw of the nets.

The Ship Bottom fishermen had an exciting battle with their ferocious game. The big shark tore around at a great rate when drawn to the side of the boat. Captain Benson pounded in on the head with a heavy iron bar, finally dazing it enough to allow one of the hands to lasso its tail. Then the line was made fast and the shark was towed to shore tail first.

All of the five sharks were of one variety, blue with large spots, entirely strange to the Jersey coast. They have four rows of large teeth. The big fellow had an eighteen-inch spread of mouth and was thirty inches in diameter at the thickest part of his body. He was shipped to Asbury Park for exhibition.

DESERONTO BOY SHOT

A sad and fatal accident occurred at the home of Mr. Joseph Hill, at The Pines, about six miles west of Deseronto, when Chapple Hill accidently shot his younger brother, Jay, who died later in the evening. It appears that the older boy had been out shooting crows with a shot gun and having bagged one and set it up on a pole to frighten away its fellows, proceeded to take out a loaded shell. In some manner the gun went off and the charge of shot entered his brother's face and chest and proved fatal.

DEUTSCHLAND IN READINESS TO START FOR HOME AT ONCE

BALTIMORE, Md., July 27.—Special—With right hand raised, Captain Paul Koenig swore this afternoon to the manifest of the submarine Deutschland, and so far as the port of Baltimore is concerned, "the diving Deutschland" can leave for the Capes at any time. The hour for her flight past the allied patrol is still kept secret.

At the same time word comes from Washington that the battleship North Carolina and three destroyers have been sent to Cape Henry "to preserve neutrality." This is probably due to the presence yesterday of a British cruiser in Lynhaven Bay. Customs officials in Baltimore are doing all they can to aid the Deutschland. The manifest of the submarine will not be made public at present.

"The time of my departure is indefinite," said Captain Koenig, in reply to a question asked by customs officials for the benefit of the Pilot Association. Collector Ryan, with the approval of the Treasury Department, granted the request of the commander that the submarine's manifest be withheld from publication "for a reasonable time." Carl A. Luederitz, German Consul here, said last night that the Deutschland would not leave for a week.

Nickel Refinery For Ontario

Work on Plan to be Started in September, and Refining in May

TORONTO, July 27.—Special—It is now generally understood that the Canadian nickel refining plant of the International Nickel Company of New Jersey will be located in Ontario, the province that has the supply of raw material. Letters of incorporation of the new company have been prepared, and the capital will be about $5,000,000. Work on the new plant will be started by September and refining by May. The capacity of the plant will be about 15,000,000 pounds per year, or sufficient to supply the needs of the British Empire in conjunction with the production of the Mond plant in Great Britain.

A big delegation from North Bay and surrounding municipalities, headed by Mayor McIlvenna of North Bay, will wait upon Hon. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, in his office at Queen's Park at 10 this morning for the purpose of discussing the location of the proposed provincial nickel refinery in New Ontario.

French Capture Estrees Houses

Sudden Attack Masters Strongly Organized Group of Buildings Bring in War Supplies

PARIS, July 27.—Special—In a sudden attack the French captured a strongly fortified group of houses about 166 yards to the southeast of Estrees yesterday. The enemy had been keeping up a constant sniping and his presence there was a thorn in the side of the French. He was taken completely by surprise by the suddeness of the French action. Some of the garrison were taken prisoner. It is annouced that five four-inch cannon were captured south of Estrees on Monday. A total of 117 prisoners was taken in this action. Six other pieces of artillery in addition to the five four-inch guns were taken and added to the list of trophies.

Italians Make Good Progress

Operations Conducted in Upper San Pellegrino With Considerable Success

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.) —A despatch from Milan says:

"Since July 20 operations have been conducted by the Italians in the Upper San Pellegrino Valley with considerable success. One detachment captured the strong position of Calvallazza, a key to the two passes of Rollo and Col. Bricon. The Austrians, though they held well-defended points, were completely demoralized by the sudden attack, and after a short resistance nearly the entire garrison surrendered. Four hundred prisoners, two guns, several machine guns and considerable material were captured.

"The Italians have since pushed their advantage still farther, and have occupied Cima Stradone, thus forming a serious menace to the Austrian position on the Dolomite road. The points of advantage gained by the Italians give them command of the San Pellegrino and Travignolo Valleys.

Giant and Dwarf Honeybees.

In some of the East Indian islands and on the mainland of Hindustan are to be found the smallest species of honeybees in the world. These dwarf honey collectors are known to entomologists as Apis florea. Their honeycombs are no larger than a child's hand, and the cells are about the size of a small pinhead. This honey is excellent, as is the wax. The little creatures build the comb in the branch of a low tree, and as they have not to provide for winter, they work all the year through, raising broods like themselves.

In the same land there is a species of giant bees, Apis dorsata, as large as a field cricket. These monsters of the bee world build honeycombs that are from six to seven feet in length, four or more in width and weigh from 300 to 400 pounds each.

Black Chapter Sends Cable To Ireland

Maintenance of Rights of Ulster Protestants Urged—Home Rule Discussed

TORONTO, July 26.—The home rule situation was up for discussion at the second day's session of the Supreme Grand Black Chapter of British America in Victoria Hall yesterday. The upshot of the debate was the passing of a resolution on the subject and the sending of a cable message to Sir Edward Carson, expressing sympathy with him in his effort to maintain the rights of the Ulser Protestants.

The resolution reads: "Resolved, that the Grand Chapter records its keen sympathy with the position of the loyal Protestants on the question of home rule for Ireland. It views with alarm any action that would jeopardize religious liberties and close union with the Crown. It appreciates the patriotic services of the Ulster Protestants, the Orange Order and leaders such as Sir Edward Carson, Marquis of Lansdowne and Right Hon. Walter Long. It follows the anxious course of events with the earnest prayer that all may be overruled to the glory of God and the spread of the Gospel among the nations of the earth."

Remember The Red Cross

Save Your Waste Paper For the Red Cross — How to Collect Material

The conservation of waste is proving a valuable source of revenue for the Red Cross, which in view of the great necessities of our wounded, can not have too large an income. Many towns have tried the scheme and there has been no case of a failure to make it profitable. In the working out of details, a few hints given by Mr. K. J. Dunstan the President of the Toronto Red Cross Society, are worth bearing in mind.

In general, the scheme is to collect by voluntary effort, all forms of saleable waste such as rags, old rubber, tinfoil, lead and other metals, in addition to paper. Material should be accumulated until shipment can be made by car lots. To save cartage it is economical to store at or near a railway. It is also wise to communicate with a reputable dealer at the nearest large centre and to obtain prices and shipping instructions.

All over the country much valuable material annually goes to waste. To turn it into cash for the Red Cross is not only an act of charity and humanity. It is also patriotism in the truest sense, for it encourages national thrift.

THE NOVA SCOTIA RED CROSS SUMMARY OF YEARS WORK

The annual official report of the Nova Scotia Red Cross provides ample evidence of the generosity with which the Maritime Province has contributed to the cause of the wounded. The total cash contributions during the year amounted to $34,170, of which $7,226 was contributed by Halifax. The sum of $11,804 was turned over to the Head Office as a contribution to the general funds of the Canadian Society. Throughout the Province there are 55 branches and subsidiary branches with over 3000 members paying annual fees. The Halifax Society has 971 members, there are 177 in Windsor, 79 in Wolfville, 85 in Truro, and 100 in Sydney.

A large quantity of supplies has been made up and sent to the front. The grand total amounts to 416,902 knitted, sewed and manufactured articles, such as mouth wipes, soaps, chocolates, tobacco etc. The total number of surgical articles was 304,000.

This is an exceedingly creditable record for Nova Scotia. The province has admirably discharged its Red Cross duty.

Soldier Drowns While Swimming

Suddenly Disappears When Bathing in Canal—Was Member of 156th Overseas Battalion

CARDINAL, July 26—Cramps taken while bathing in the canal here are believed to have caused the death last night of Sergt. Roy Kingston, of Spencerville, of the 156th Overseas Battalion, who was on leave from Barriefield Camp on a visit to his brother. In company, with a number of friends Sergt. Kingston went to the canal at six o'clock last night for a swim. He is said to have been an expert in the water, but he had not been in the canal long before his companions saw him go under. It was thought at the time that he had made a dive, but not reappearing on the surface his fellow bathers became frightened and gave the alarm. Others in the party began to dive for him and half an hour later his body was recovered and taken to the home of his brother, from whence it will be taken to his parents' home in Spencerville.

Sergt. Kingston belonged to a family resident at Spencerville which has given a number of its members to the army. Four months ago Sergt. Kingston enlisted in the 156th and through good work won rapid promotion. A few days ago he obtained leave and came to this place to visit his brother. One brother, Pte. James E. Kingston, served with the 2nd Battalion at the front and was invalided home last year suffering from wounds received at St. Julien.

Capt. John Kingston, of the 156th Battalion, is another brother.

Golf Fun For The One-Arms

Scotch Game is Great Boon For War Victims—One Player Drives 300 Yards

Henry Leach, the eminent English authority on golf, writing in the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News of London, heads his article, "The Problem of the Single Arm," and takes up the question seriously, for in it he sees a boon for those men who have lost a limb in the great war.

"Of all diversions," says Leach, golf is the great one for these heroes; the only one that can give men the full measure of satisfaction in the future, and help them, for the time being, at all events to some forgetfulness of the loss they have suffered."

The English writer then goes on to recall the exploits of one Ypres Botcazon, the professional at Versailles, France, who has frequently gone around that stiff course under 80, and who played in the open championship at Prestwick just before the beginning of the war. With only one arm, Botcazou drives a fine ball, and has wonderful command of his club. In fact, according to Leach, the Frenchman actually seems to do better with one hand than if he had two.

After reading "The Problem of the Single Arm," one feels almost ready to call in a surgeon and ask him to amputate the left arm, as a superfluous bit of the human makeup. What would you think of a golfer with two good arms who could drive a ball a distance of 200 yards? A marvel, you say; but what, then, of the feat of D. R. Anderson, a one-armed man, who sent a ball that many yards under ordinary conditions.

AMERICAN AIRMAN WINGS THIRD AIRSHIP

Rockwell downed his third German aeroplane over the German lines north of Verdun on Friday afternoon. Scouting with Bert Hall, another American aviator, in Nieuport machines, Rockwell, who was leading, saw a two-seated aviatik, which the result that the German machine fell headlong. Swoopto make sure that the German aviator had crashed to the ground, Rockwell was attacked from above by two Fokkers, and Hall, coming to the rescue, by two more. Badly placed for an offensive, Rockwell plunged into a cloud and succeeded in escaping. Hall speedily rejoined him. Both returned safely, although their machines were riddled with bullets.

Both Rockwell and Hall are members of the Franco-American Fying Corps, which has greatly distinguished itself at Verdun. Victor Chapman, another membear of the squadron, was killed only recently in a fight with German machines. Rockwell, who comes from Atlanta, Ga., was made a sergeant and decorated with the military Medal for his daring work at the front.

THIS IS THE 646TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE AMERICAN BLACKLIST.

It is quite probable that the United States Government, at the instigation of President Wilson, will cause a formal protest to be forwarded to Great Britain in regard to the blacklisting of certain American trade firms—a protest which will express quite clearly the views of the Administration as to the action of Great Britain in the premises

Quite naturally the head of the American Republic resent the attitude of the British Government in holding up trade with firms resting under suspicion, in that the results would amount to a worldwide boycott.

While the programme to be followed out by the United States is not yet fully outlined, it is generally understood that "the preliminary action of the State Department will be a protest based on the ground that the blacklist is a violation of moral right and not to be tolerated by this Government. For the present the Government is not likely to go into an argument that the legal rights of American citizens have been infringed. The legal aspects of the issue involved will be taken up later."

If our friends over the way are imbued with the idea that Britain will permit a dictatory attitude as to where she and her Allies shall place their remunerative orders or extend their influence, it were well that they come to their senses and consider what would be the result of a censure. The "violation of moral right" does not rest with American concerns. It rests completely with Great Britain and her Allies—the right to dictate into whose coffers their money shall flow in return for contracted supplies.

But whether it is the United States Government collectively, or President Wilson individually, that is incensed over Britain's stand, is not clear. In either case, that the affair is resting heavily upon the President's mind is aparent, as he has admitted to interviewers that the British blacklist "had got on his nerves," which meant that he was irritated over the British attitude and disposed to let Great Britain understand that he thought she had gone too far.

On the other hand, Senator Hoke Smith, who has discussed the incident with high authority, expresses the thought that the matter would be adjusted soon by the withdrawal or the modification of the blacklist. This optimistic view of the Georgia Senator does not coincide with that of some officials. Generally in official circles surprise is expressed that the British Government published its blacklist of American firms at this time, when causes of irritation between Great Britain and the United States had been overcome. The differences between the two Governments over the interference with American trade through the enforcement of the British blockade were in process of amicable negotiation and other questions that at various periods had assumed an embarrassing aspect were in a state of quiescence. In addition, there was a prospect of a renewal of German submarine activity, and that circumstance alone, in the opinion of observers in the United States, should have deterred Great Britain from taking action that would be bound to cause irritation against Great Britain in the United States.

Unofficially the British Government has been made aware of the surprise and irritation of the Wilson Administration over the publication of the blacklist. The unofficial negotiations begun last week have had to do nominally with the effort of the American Government to induce Great Britain to remove from the blacklist the names of American firms which have presented evidence that they were unjustly accused of dealing with Germany. But incidentally the British Government has been apprised of the feeling in Washington that a diplomatic blunder has been committed by the British authorities in directing the publication of the blacklist at this time.

Nothing has come to light to indicate that the British Government has been impressed by these unofficial representations, and the United States Administration is proceeding on the theory that it might as well make a formal protest that will cause Great Britain to realize that the blacklist situation is not viewed lightly by the United States.

◆

Toronto Mail and Empire: No doubt the German Government would never admit the desperate straits Germany is getting into unless Allied shells were falling on German territory. But the events of the war speak for themselves. The Kaiser's addresses to the German troops reveal the intense anxiety felt in Germany over the progress of operations. The Germans are far too much concerned over the immediate threat to their own fronts to give particular heed to what the Hungarian Government says. They will get little comfort from Mr Lloyd George's assurance that British intelligence and British resources will bring victory, perhaps within a few months. Britain is the chief supplier of the munitions with which Russia is breaking her way into Hungary. Britain is the original source of the Hungarian Government's discomfort. If the Russian drive continues with the same energy it has hitherto shown, in the near future there will be louder squeals from the erstwhile boasters, and "allies of the Almighty." That it will continue is assured by the Russian supplies of trained troops and the British output of munitions.

Hamilton Spectator: The nomination of ex-Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, by the Prohibition national convention at St. Paul gives the third party a standard-bearer in this year's Presidential contest, but nothing more. Those Progressives who stand out against Hughes refused to be lured into the Prohibition fold. The Prohibition party will, therefore, have not much more than its usual figure—about a quarter of a million in a total vote of nearly ten millions. What amazes us is that ex-Governor Sulzer, of New York, was in the running at all. He received 181 votes, against 440 for Hanly. The Prohibition party originally set out to be a party of much higher moral character than either the Republican or the Democratic. To nominate Sulzer would have been to accept as a leader a man cast out from the Democratic camp of New York, not only as a demagogue whose one great blunder was his break with Tammany, but as a man hounded by a woman with whom he lived for years, though never married as he avers, yet who claims to have been his wife. Has the party whose proudest boast is its superiority of the "party of great moral ideas" fallen to such a depth? Its part in the coming campaign will be watched only with languid curiosity.

It is still asserted that Kyte made no charges. Well, that much may be admitted — that they were blank charges.

Last Saturday the chief of police saw Burke's truck travelling through Burlington without a light. This was a flagrant breach of the by-law, so the Hamilton Company was served with a summons to appear in the Court Thursday morning.—Hamilton Herald.

A nation that has allowed a year and a quarter to go by without a settlement of the Lusitania horror, involving the murder of its citizens, would be sure to promptly decide that the submarine Deutschland was a peaceful German trader.

The death record of the canoe is growing rapidly. Canoeing, like tight-rope walking, is safe for people properly skilled. Others should avoid it. The laziness that is substituting the canoe for the skiff is bringing its penalties.—Toronto Globe.

The pity of it all is that in the midst of a great war in which Irish Nationalists have made many sacrifices it is in the power of a small minority, representing the rump of British feudalism, to throw the Irish question once again into the melting-pot.

The Kaiser, seeing inevitable defeat where, until recently, he saw nothing but overwhelming victory, begins to make excuses, to declare that Germany is the victim of a British plot and is fighting not to conquer her neighbor's territory, but to guard herself against invasion and dismemberment.—Toronto Globe. But the world is alert to her double-dyed treachery.

Canadians who could not go to the front are unanimous in the conclusion that those who did should be treated generously. They have fought and are fighting for our liberties, and for all the rest of their lives many of them will bear in their bodies and nervous system the marks of their struggle in our behalf.—Toronto News.

It should be understood that the present Anglo-French offensive has not been undertaken with any expectation of obtaining a speedy decision on the western front—of breaking through the enemy's defence works soon and compelling him to fight in the open. The German defences along the Somme are comparable to the French fortifications at Verdun.

"IT CAN'T BE DONE."

How did the world get started, son?
Why, someone said, "It can't be done."

That settled it. The troglodyte
Came out of darkness into light.

"It can't be done!" somebody said,
And lo! the green fields gave us bread.

With that taunt ringing in his ears
Has man gone upward through the years.

You should have seen the mill wheels run
When some one said, "It can't be done!"

"It can't be done!" they said before
A sail put out to sea from shore.

Since world's remote and dismal dawn
Those magic words have spurred us on.

It drove Columbus where the sun
Went redly down, "It can't be done!"

"It can't be done!" the weaklings said,
And lo! the Wrights flew overhead.

"It can't be done." was what they cried
When Fulton offered them a ride.

They said it, and Marconi sent
His message through the firmament.

That is the way it happened, son,
Praise God for this, "It can't be done!"

BILLION DOLLAR CROP EXPECTED

After a thorough canvas of various points throughout Western Canada, Dr. McGill of the Dominion Grain Commission, is quoted in Calgary as saying that Alberta would have a crop as good as last year, that the Dominion would have a billion dollar grain crop and that the grain crop of the three prairie Provinces would be little if any behind that of last year.

"The country as a whole never looked better than it does at present," said Dr. McGill. "The weather was made to order as you might say, and I am of the opinion that this year's harvest will be another wonderful one."

Those who contemplate going west will do well to remember that the most fertile districts in Western Canada are served by the Lines of the C. N. R., and that this season they can travel from their home districts to destination, Canadian Northern all the way.

Arrangements have been made whereby passengers may travel in comfort, Colonist and Lunch Counter being a feature.

The first of these excursions will be run in August, the date will be announced later.

PRETTY ROUGH SPORT.

The Game of "the Bounding Brothers of the Bosporus."

Many extraordinary forms of amusement have been devised by army officers from the earliest times down to the present day, but none perhaps have more startling characteristics than the following new and original game, which Sir Robert Baden-Powel describes in "Memories of India:"

It was introduced into the mess by a brother of our colonel, who came to stay with him. We believed him to be a quiet, harmless planter from Behar, and so he seemed throughout the evening, both during and after dinner, when he remained watching us playing the fool in various ways for our own amusement. But evidently our ways did not strike him as original, and he therefore invited us to play the great game of the bounding brothers of the Bosporus, and when he had once shown us we joined most heartily in the sport.

The game had few rules, but a certain amount of etiquette. The apparatus consisted of all the furniture, which was piled in a heap near the center of the room, and a writing table, which was placed a couple of yards from it. You were expected then to clap your hands three times—that was the etiquette of the game—then run at the table and turn heels over head on it into the pile of furniture, shouting as you did so, "I am a bounding brother of the Bosporus!" That was all. It was quite simple, but how it hurt when you landed on the upturned legs of a chair or the side of a table!

Ada Rehan's Bandsman.

Miss Ada Rehan used to say that the finest appreciation of her acting she ever observed came from a bandsman in the orchestra of a Birmingham theater. When she played the angry Katharine she had one piece of superb fury—a swift march to the back of the stage, a right about turn and then a straight march down the stage, pulling up short and sharp at the footlights. One night she saw a bandsman sitting directly in her line of advance shrink back in his chair at the moment of the full stop at the footlights.

"Sure, he thought, I wasn't going to stop on the stage," Miss Rehan said. "I wonder if he is married to a Katharine."

The next day she sent him a box of cigars.—Manchester Guardian.

Home Ties.

A sedate banker of Hamilton, Canada, was sitting in his office one morning when his ten-year-old hopeful drifted in, bearing with him an expression of unutterable gloom.

"Anything gone wrong, boy?" interrogated the financier. "Why, at your age you ought to be cheerful all the time."

"I know it, Frank; I know it," responded the youngster. "I'm doin' the best I can; but, honest, I had a terrible time up at the house with your wife this morning."

The Parental Bulwark.

"I'm going to be a burglar when I grow up."

"Why, Johnny, that's very wicked, and, besides, burglars are sent to prison."

"Not me. My father's a lawyer."

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

Coming and Going.

One afternoon a cast down hobo timidly knocked on the door of a suburban home, and when the owner of the house appeared he meekfully asked for bread.

"I see," responded the proprietor, critically sizing up the tramp, "that the knees of your trousers are badly worn."

"Yes, sir," answered the hobo, in a subdued voice. "I wore them through kneeling in prayer."

A few minutes later the tramp was handed his fodder, and with many thanks he turned and started toward the gate.

"Just a moment," exclaimed the proprietor. "I notice that your trousers are also pretty badly worn in the back."

"Yes, sir," responded the tramp, steering for the gate. "I did that backsliding."

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"Allen was held up, the bag of documents stolen, and the man himself—whether dead or alive is a question—quickly removed by the occupants of a hack that appeared upon the scene at just the right moment. I am convinced of that, Chick; also that two bullets were fired at me by some one in the hack, probably to prevent my securing Allen's assailant. All this can have resulted only from a carefully laid plot—one planned by persons able to anticipate Allen's movements last night. From whom, then, did they get their information?"

"From Packard," cried Patsy impulsively; "sure thing.'

'Well, as I have said, that possibility exists," replied Nick. "Here's another point: Who was the gray-haired man who engaged a room in the Hotel Royal yesterday afternoon? The name registered was Jason Page, with no home residence. The key was given to him, yet the room was not occupied last night. He paid in advance, stating that he had no luggage. Yet I saw a gray-haired man with a black leather bag go through the hotel office at precisely half-past four this afternoon, and Packard was found murdered in that room fifteen minutes later. Now, these circumstances give rise to several important questions."

"I should say so, Nick—very important."

"Was Packard the man who registered yesterday, in disguise and under an assumed name? If so, why did he engage the room yesterday, yet not occupy it until to-day, only to be murdered there within a quarter of an hour?"

"A question not easily answered."

"I have learned that he was in court until two o'clock to-day, and that he does not usually carry a cane," Nick went on. "The gray-haired man I saw, however, carried an ebony cane, and I noticed that it looked like a new one. I examined the hat and overcoat found in the room, presumably belonging to Packard, and they look very like these worn by the gray-haired man I saw pass through the office. A single gray hair, which I found in the hat, however, and which I have examined under a microscope, presents nothing to show whether it came from a wig or from a man's scalp. You see, Chick, the evidence is somewhat conflicting."

"I believe your story," Chick dryly admitted. "We are sure only that the gray-haired man was the one who registered as Jason Page."

"Exactly. But that name, probably being an alias, does not establish the man's identity."

"That's true."

"If it was Packard, where did he get the cane and bag, after leaving the courthouse? Why did he bring them to that room? I found on the bed indentures indicating that a heavy article, apparently about the size of such a bag, had been placed there, also soiled spots on the spread, as if the bottom of the bag was somewhat defaced with dust or dirt from having been set down. If I am right in my estimates of this particular bit of evidence, and the bag and cane were brought there by Packard, what became of them after the crime? That question admits of only one answer—they were taken away by the murderer and may have been incentives to the crime."

'Very likely, Nick."

"What became, moreover, of the gray wig and beard worn by Packard, if he was the man? Apparently, since a man of this description was seen going out with a cane and bag just before the crime was discovered, the disguise must also have been worn by the assassin when he departed."

"That's right, surely."

"It's right, Chick, only assuming that the other premises are correct," Nick quickly corrected him. "But here another question comes up: Isn't it possible that the gray-haired man I saw going through the office was the murderer, and that Packard met him in that room for some purpose, keeping an appointment previously made?'

"But who was the man in the corridor, the one who stopped the waiter and then took in the drink?"

"He was the assassin, beyond any reasonable doubt," Nick replied. "But he may have removed the disguise while in the room with Packard, before the crime, and put on a black wig in which to intercept the waiter, not wanting him to see Packard in the room, and also aiming to preclude his own identification later."

"That would have been possible," Chick thoughtfully admitted. "The circumstances are, indeed, open to numerous interpretations.

"If Packard met a man there in disguise, or was in disguise himself, he must have been up to some crooked business," put in Patsy.

"I suspect that he was,' said Nick. "Now, here's something else to be conidered: Two young ladies entered the hotel directly after the gray-haired man and stood earnestly talking in the office for several minutes. One of them then hurried away. The other went to the clerk and asked where Mrs. Selkirk's apartments are located, and she was seen acting suspiciously in the corridor adjoining them only a short time before the crime was discovered. After it was discovered, she quickly appeared on scene and looked into the room, when she fainted dead away, and upon reviving hurried out of the house."

"By Jove, Nick! Her conduct certainly warrants suspicion," said Chick.

"I did not then suspect her, or I'd have taken steps to prevent her departure," Nick rejoined. "Recalling her agitation in the hotel office, however, and the circumstances learned later, I am now sure she is a factor in the case. Who she is and how she figures in it must be learned. It may be that she knew that such a crime was to be committed, or feared it, and came there to prevent it, if possible."

"That may have been her motive."

"Yet the girl asked about Mrs. Selkirk's rooms, not that in which Packard was murdered, but which adjoined them," Nick explained. "Why did she do that? What interest could she have had in Mrs. Selkirk's apartments? Did Mrs. Selkirk also know that this crime was contemplated and likely to be committed? Was it for that reason, upon finding that the deed had been done, that she appeared at the door of Packard's room and with a look checked Fenno from saying something he, I feel sure, intended to say?"

"One thing appears certain," Chick declared: "that Mrs. Selkirk figures in the case in some way."

"Yes, undoubtedly."

"Gee then it strikes me that Fenno cannot be an outsider," Patsy again interposed. "Why was he there in disguise? Why can't he tell a straight story of the whole business?"

"It may be," suggested Chick, "that Mrs. Selkirk's sudden appearance at the door of the room, together with the look she gave Fenno, warned him that the disclosure he was about to make would be disastrous to her, or possibly to his own interest. What do you think about it, Nick?"

"Until we have learned more definitely the relations existing between these several persons. I think we waste time and mental energy in speculating upon their motives in this affair," Nick dryly answered. "Instead of thinking, it's up to us to be doing."

"I guess that's right." Chick quickly assented.

'And we'll get at it to-morrow morning," Nick added. "As for Patsy, he knows pretty nearly what is expected of him."

"You bet!" Patsy exclaimed, with a nod. "It's that subway rat for mine."

"I have only a few additional instructions to give you, which I will impart before you go out in the morning."

"I'll not leave without them, Mr. Carter."

"As for you, Chick, there are several matters to be investigated," said Nick, turning to his chief assistant. "To begin with, try in a quiet way to learn what relations exist between Fenno and Mrs. Pat Selkirk. He admitted that they have been friends for a long time. I wish to know, however, their precise relations, past and present.'

"I'll unearth all that can reasonably be expected."

"Try to trace the girl in navy blue, also, and establish her identity, as well as that of the companion with whom I saw her enter the hotel. If you succed, find out what you can about them."

"Trust me for that, Nick."

"The fate of Henry Allen also must be learned, and the stolen papers recovered if possible. But that work will devolve upon any of us who may strike a clew," said Nick. "Pick up any thread that looks promising, and be governed by circumstances. If it seems best to act without further instruction, you will do so."

"What have you in view, Nick, for yourself?" asked Chick.

Nick's grave face took on again the look it had worn when he left the Tombs that evening.

"What I do, Chick will depend upon circumstances and what others do," he replied, with ominous deliberation. "Until we learn more than we now know, we are sounding in deep water. Our lead does not show me a safe course. My observations of Fenno, however, convince me that he is honest, that his heart is in the work that he has been doing—fighting against odds that would stagger most men—and I'm going to stick to the promise I made him last night and lend him a hand."

"Good for you" declared Chick. "I'm with you in that."

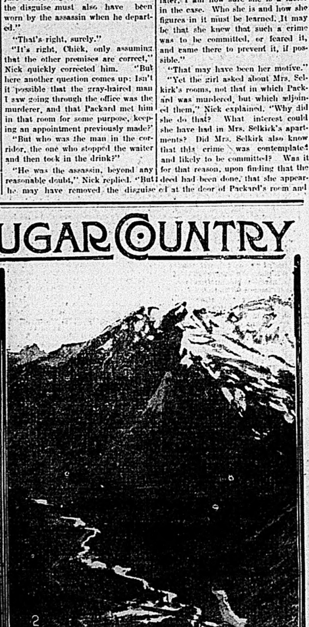
WONDERFUL COUGAR COUNTRY



(1) Look-off Point, Cougar Valley, Glacier, B.C. (2) Illecillewaet Valley, Glacier, B.C. (3) Entrance to Caves of Nakimu.

HAVE you ever heard of the wonderful Cougar country? Wonderful it is in a score of ways, and few there be I imagine that have yet discovered the delectable region. The best way to find out about it is to go there, which we will proceed to do. Step off at Glacier station of the C.P.R. in the Selkirks, arrange with the Outfitter and his ponies to guide and carry you over the ten-mile trail to the Cougar, and there you are in the very heart of an alpine garden, enclosed with giant peaks, glittering ice caps and snow fields, the extraordinary Nakimu caverns, and rivers and streams and waterfalls unnumbered. There's a programme for you to feast your eyes upon and revel in!

The trail trip thereto is in itself an unique one, ever rising in grade until the eye can see a long sweep of the Illecillewaet valley, where an express train looks like a child's toy, while Mt. Sir Donald looms higher and higher above his satellites. Across the beautiful valley at our feet rise the four summits of the Cougar mountain range, each one loftier than its mate. I only crave for you the experience of traversing that quartette of summits, as I did, until the panorama was limited only by the power of the eye. On every hand great ice deposits cling to the mountain sides or slope in acutest angle toward the Cougar river, racing through the valley bed. Hanging glaciers and titanic cornices of snow clothe the rugged rocks in their mantles of white, with tiny lakelets and alpine meadows marking the lower levels.

But there is yet another sight. Yonder is a cabin with a guide in charge who will conduct you through Canada's cavern world, only discovered within recent years. Here one may ramble and scramble through wierd underground streets, where the Cougar river has chiselled out its mysterious channels and where the imprisoned river is still at its task of cave-making as it has been for a trifle of forty thousand years. Ladders enable one to descend into the nether depths, amid stygian darkness except for the light one carries. The roar of the imprisoned stream, ever leaping from boulder to boulder, is awesomely deafening, for the mountain holds within its honeycombed arteries a series of Niagaras in cavern rooms of large dimensions and small.

You may walk down the Steeps of Time, visit the Witches Dancing Hall and the Brocken, gaze upon the Bridal Chamber, shrink back from the Inferno and feel small in the Judgment Hall. Walls of limestone look like the shifting scenes of a theatre, gothic arches and windows pierce the upper walls, fluted columns and exquisite draperies mark nature's imitations. In this vast chamber of eternal night one may hear the sepulchral notes of far away deeper torrents—or, later, stand on their brink—with a sound that drowns the loudest effort of the human voice.

A glint of daylight through a cave roof told us we were near the outer crust of mother earth, and a last scramble over a mass of boulders brought us out of the black world into the sunlit one, which looked more beautiful than ever. F. Y.

COST OF LIVING SOARS

CONSUMER GRUMBLES BUT STILL HAS TO PAY.

Table Expense One of the Staple Topics of Conversation—A Sovereign Before War is Now Worth Only Eleven Shillings Two-pence—Government Steps in Where Exorbitant Rates Prevail.

IN the long run, the cost of a war narrows down in the public mind largely to a matter of dollars and cents, and more especially to the trend of food prices. After twenty-one months of war even loss of life is accepted with surprising calmness as a necessary concomitant for which only unavoidable conditions are to blame. But when the Englishman sits down to bread at so much a loaf more than before the war he begins to count the cost, says Lacey Amy in The Toronto Globe.

Glibly enough, any housewife in London will quote you the increase in the table expense, for it has become one of the staple topics of conversation, displacing the servant problem since servants entered the list of prohibited articles. Butter, twenty-six cents at this time before the war, is now forty; tea has advanced from forty-four to sixty, sugar from four and five to twelve, bread from five to nine, milk from eight to twelve, sirloin beef from twenty-two to thirty-two, salt from two to five, and potatoes from a cent and a half to three cents a pound. It is figured by the Board of Trade that a sovereign before the war is worth now only eleven shillings two-pence, that the cost of living has advanced forty-nine per cent.

Naturally everything else except human life has gone up in sympathy. Household soap is twenty cents a bar instead of fifteen, and coal is fifty per cent. higher, although on Saturday it reached on the Newcastle market the astonishing price of $15 a ton. Matches, one of the most discussed commodities coming under the recent Government tax, are more than double what they were two years ago. A butcher, leaning on a fence overlooking a flock of sheep, figured gleefully that the wool would bring him about thirty-six cents a pound, compared with sixteen before the war. Petrol is sixty-eight cents a gallon and still mounting, and an automobile costing in the United States about $625 is extensively advertised here at $1,100.

Roughly considered the advance seems not unnatural in a time of war, and merchants and manufacturers find little difficulty in thus shifting the responsibility. The consumer grumbles, but pays up a part of his war burden. And yet statistics have a way of being disconcertingly unanswerable, and statistics available in official reports place the blame for the present level of prices in England not on the war itself, but on schemers willing to take advantage of the war to add to the suffering. For instance, during the year ending last September the receipts of wheat on the English market were only one and a half per cent. below those of the previous year, and this year it is expected the deficiency will be more than made up, since the first nine months have exceeded the same period of last year by seven per cent. The supply of meat reaching Smithfield for civil purposes in 1915 was only fifteen per cent. less than in 1914, which should be sufficient to feed the decreased population owing to the war. For the moment figures are not available, but it is a fact that butchers in London are not infrequently without a pound of meat for sale. Is it possible that the same methods of maintaining prices are being used with regard to meat as exist in diamonds? During the month of March the raw cocoa received is three times the figures of last March, and unrefined sugar from Cuba seven times, with an additional million hundredweight from the United States, which supplied none last year. Of tea, three million pounds more was imported, and the stocks in bond are thirty-one millions more than they were a year ago.

Students of conditions recognize that the existing prices are the result of manipulation, either by the distributors or by the shipping companies. It is affirmed that shipping clerks who took a chance with their savings at the beginning of the war by investing in bottoms have more than doubled their money each year since, and boats to-day are worth, per ton, almost twice what they were in 1914.

It is a strain of credence that freight rates are taking from shippers, in some cases, fourteen hundred times what dare be asked two years ago; that is more per hundredweight than it used to be per ton. An example that enables one to realize the strange relations of carriage to commodity is maise. Worth $1.65 per hundredweight at the port of embarcation, it costs $1.30 to bring it to Britain, where the farmers are finding it cheaper to feed wheat to their stock. Before the war the freight was fourteen cents. It is more than hinted that ship-owners have delayed construction in order that the present level may be maintained.

But the Government is stepping in where the exorbitant rates interfere directly with the prosecution of the war. France's protests at cost of coal forming a serious handicap in the manufacture of munitions have been recognized by a proposal to fix the price and the freight rate.

Apart from the patriotic argument that wartime is not the time for excess profit simply because it can be obtained, the condition of Britain is not due to the disproportion of supply and demand. There is no shortage in the wares mentioned, but there is a desire to crowd into the country all the stock available in order to take advantage of the prices prevailing.

The dog population in Germany decreased by 215,000 during the last war. The dogs of war are still raving there, though.

ELIE METCHNIKOFF DEAD.

Famous Bacteriologist Did Much to Enrich Human Knowledge.

Professor Elie Metchnikoff, famous bacteriologist, chief of the Pasteur institue in Paris, is dead of heart disease. He was seventy-one years old, but displayed remarkable vitality, rallying often when he seemed at the point of dissolution.

Like Louis Pasteur, whose disciple he was, Metchnikoff was very cautious in making announcements or putting out claims. But he was most confident and resolute in maintaining what he believed to be true. Much nonsense has been written about him—even that he asserted that he had discovered the "elixir of life" and that no man need die younger than 180 years.

In truth, he claimed to have found two methods to prolong life, to combat the ills which are the most dangerous foes to longevity. One is known popularly—one is tempted to say, vulgarly—as the "sour milk cure."

Metchnikoff believed that the principal agent in senile decay is the continuous auto-intoxication of the human body through the putrefaction of undigested food in the large intestine and that the bacteria which cause such putrefaction could be effectively combated by preparations of milk treated with cultures of selected lactic acid bacilli. Later Prof. Metchnikoff went so far as to declare that "the large intestine is as useless in the human body as is the appendix, and prophesied that the day will come when it will be a common operation to remove it.

Metchnikoff discovered in the intestines of dogs a new microbe, which he called the "glycobacteria." In a paper before the French Academy of Sciences he announced his belief that inoculating the large intestine in human beings with this germ would go still further than the sour milk treatment toward the prevention of senile decay. The glycobacteria, he explained, are sugar bacilli, of which the large intestine stands in need, because the sugar that is ordinarily taken into the body has already been digested and absorbed by the blood before it reaches the large intestinal tract.

Sarah Bernhardt has ascribed her perennial youth to the employment of Metchnikoff's "cure."

In his studies, Prof. Metchnikoff experimented upon himself, and it is said he inoculated himself with glycobacteria. His theory as to the sour milk treatment may be traced in part to the environment of his youth. He was a Russian, born at Kharkoff May 15, 1845. In that region, and particularly in neighboring Bulgaria, a surprisingly large part of the inhabitants live to be centenarians, and Metchnikoff believed their longevity was due largely to the fact that their diet includes the bacilli of sour milk.

Following his education at Kharkoff, Metchnikoff studied at Giessen and Munich, and in 1870 was appointed professor of zoology at Odessa. He held this post until 1882, when he resigned to devote himself to private researches into the anatomy of invertebrates. It was while working at lowly organized forms of life that he first made the observations which constituted the basis of all his subsequent work.

By 1888 he had attracted the attention of Pasteur, who discovered the preventive treatment of rabies and for its cure if the treatment is not too long delayed. Pasteur invited Mecshnikoff to be one of his associates, and in 1895 Metchnikoff succeeded as chief of the Pasteur Institute.

Educating the Berlin "Kiddies."

The Berlin Vorwarts severely censures the latest song which Berlin school children are obliged to sing. It quotes from the Turmer, a journal connected with educational interests, that the School Council of Berlin have authorized a two-voice song dealing with the children's food, and of which the opening lines are "Mamma, mamma, we do not want fat, do not worry about it." The Turmer objects to the use of the word "Mamma" as of foreign origin, and would like to see the word "Mother" used instead; but, as Vorwarts points out, it does not object to these butterless bairns being taught this silly and lying ditty. The children do want butter, and the teachers know they want butter, and so does the School Council, but they are stuffing these unfortunate children with false and mawkish sentiment which has no justification. Better were the children taught to sing "Mamma, we do want fat, but in the interests of the Fatherland we are determined not to worry about it."

Spy on British Craft.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf publishes a report from Bruges concerning the recent capture of the British steamship Brussels, which was taken into Zeebrugge by German torpedo boats. This newspaper says that according to the general belief at Bruges the capture was brought about by a passenger who said he was an American, but is believed to be a German. This man remained on deck throughout the voyage, and is said to have made signals with lights, with the result that German warships steamed up and halted the ship.

According to this account, the passenger was treated with the greatest consideration by the Germans, and was given full freedom of movement when he landed at Zeebru

PARALYSIS IS STILL UNABATED

Epidemic Among Infants Dreaded by Doctors.

GERM IS TOO SMALL TO SEE

Dr. Simon Flexner, Who Is an Expert on the Disease, Does Not Believe That Scientists Have Yet Seen the Bacillus Which Causes the Paralysis—Disfigures Victims.

IT is earnestly to be hoped that the epidemic of infantile paralysis which is raging in New York and has spread to several other States will not gain a foothold in Canada. There are a few cases in Montreal, but otherwise the Dominion appears to be clear of it, and there is no reason to believe that the Montreal outbreak is to be traced to the cases in the United States. There have been no real epidemics of poliomyelitis in Canada, though there were several cases in Toronto and vicinity a few years ago, and in scores of homes there are children who will never run or walk again as a result of this visitation. There is no more dreadful disease known to medical science, and perhaps the most terrible thing about it is the fact that it usually selects children as its victims, although no age is exempt from it. Complete recoveries are extremely rare. Almost invariably infantile paralysis leaves some dreadful mark behind it, and so far medical science has been unable either to provide a cure or even to understand the nature of the deadly organism.

DR. SIMON FLEXNER.

That it is indeed an organism, a germ, was learned only a few years ago, the discovery being made almost simultaneously in the United States and France, where epidemics had drawn some of the best medical experts in the two countries to study the disease. Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute, who is a noted authority on the disease, says that it is extremely doubtful if the virus has been seen. Certainly the germ is exceedingly minute. The closest observers have been able only to observe under the most powerful microscope little points, circular or slightly oval in form, and these, possibly, though not certainly, represent the parasite. Another feature of the virus is its resistance to external agencies. It withstands glycerination for months, and drying over caustic potash for weeks without any marked reduction of potency.

In these respects it is even more robust than the virus of rabies. Moreover, it shows no diminution in virulence after having passed through several bodies. Experiments made with monkeys showed that the germs after having passed through 25 separate series of monkeys, were more powerful if anything than before. It is this fact that drove investigators to the conclusion that the virus is a living organism, but, as stated, it is so minute that it cannot be said with certainty that the germ has ever been seen. It passes with great readiness and little or no loss in potency through the densest and finest porcelain filters, when in aqueous suspension, and on this, as on other accounts, is extremely difficult to deal with in laboratory experiments.

Dr. Flexner says:

"The infectious agent enters the body chiefly, if not exclusively, through the mucous membranes of the nose and throat. The virus exists in the secretions of the nose and throat and in the intestines. Hence the mode of spread may be by kissing, coughing, and sneezing, which carry the secretions of the nose and throat from one person who may be infected to other persons. Since the disease attacks by preference young children and infants whose nasal and mouth secretions are wiped away by mother or nurse, the fingers of these persons readily become contaminated. The care of other children by persons with contaminated fingers may therefore lead to the conveying of the infectious micro-organism indirectly from the sick to the healthy. This danger also exists in connection with vendors of food which is eaten uncooked. The existence of cases of infantile paralysis in the homes of vendors of food is therefore a perpetual source of danger. Dissemination can be made by means of house flies."

Napoleon I. was satisfied with four and a half hours' sleep at a time.

Almost as sad as to read of men killed at the front is to meet a lot of fellows walking around who are dead at the top.

Praise for the British

JUST a few days before the beginning of the offensive upon the Somme, correspondents appear to have been provided with unusual opportunities of visiting the British front, the real front, and of making the closest inspection of the army. Apparently what they wrote then was not closely censored, especially what they were mailing home, the authorities knowing that before anything could appear in print that might affect the British plans the great offensive would have been launched. Among the correspondents was Henry Suydam, who has seen every army in Europe. He pays a warm tribute to the British army; he says it has been less understood in the United States than the army of any other belligerent; it has been unjustly criticized; and has been the butt of such stupid songs as "Everybody's Fighting but the British."

Speaking of the morale of the army, Mr. Suydam says that it is possible for a civilian to come to a correct judgment on this point as well as a military authority. He says: "You do not need to be a military expert to recognize the broad signs of inefficiency. These things are the first to show themselves; you may decide by a quick expedition along the front whether an army is fit or unfit; whether it expects to win or merely hopes not to be defeated. The British Army expects to win; such is the essence of British spirit. It is a spirit which has persisted despite tremendous initial difficulties in forming a barrier, by free and voluntary methods of enlistment, to that always-threatening German line in France and Flanders." On the British front he found everything ready, the men, the leaders, the guns, and mechanical supplies. Everywhere there was a feeling of quiet confidence in the result, coupled with an acknowledgment of the fact that the victory would have to be paid for in many lives.

Mr. Suydam dwells particularly upon the fact that Great Britain has accomplished in two years what Germany had forty years to achieve. He speaks of the absolute unpreparedness of the British Empire for war. Facing the greatest military machine that had ever been built up she had only 160,000 men, that immortal "contemptible little army" to which the Kaiser made reference. But in two years Great Britain has become one of the most formidable military powers of the world. Mr. Suydam believes that such an achievement as that of Great Britain, the making of an army of 5,000,000 men in two years, is something that no race in the world but the Anglo-Saxons could have attained. It is a glorious makeshift; it displays the particular British gift of performing wonders with the material at hand. He hopes and believes that the United States, fronted with such a crisis, might rise to the situation as the British have done, but he thinks that no other people in the world could do what stands to the everlasting credit of the British.

Mr. Suydam says:

"A big offensive is less nerve-wracking than monotony of trench warfare. Whole sectors of the line know that a 'push' is coming; the soldier visualizes the British army advancing over a wide frontage; he is animated by a sense of corps spirit which is sometimes necessarily lacking in the isolated mining and sniping and counter-attacking of a single trench. And because these offensives have been few (like chapter-headings in the chronicle of the war), American public opinion has failed to understand the terrific strain to which the British armies have been subjected. There is not an officer or man in the British forces in France who would not rather undertake one big offensive every six weeks than spend a fortnight in trench fighting. Great Britain has been fighting hard since August, 1914, when 160,000 regular soldiers took the field and were promptly overwhelmed by the fury of the first German advance; the self-depreciation and detached unconcern which is manifested in London is quite lacking at the front, where each man is keen, in spirit and deed, to end the war as quickly as possible by a British victory.

"While every army in Europe was provided in August, 1914, with a certain formal reserve of heavy guns, main dependence was placed upon small field guns of 3.5-inch or 4-inch calibre, firing either shrapnel or high explosive. The British army (according to authoritative statements published in The London Times) took the field in 1914 with 76 pieces of artillery, of which 54 were 18-pounders (3.3-inch). The German armies invaded Belgium with a general superiority of artillery (except for the famous French 75-millimetre gun).

"The Krupp works, at Essen, with years of experience in supplying European wars with guns and ammunition, stood ready to invent new gunnery devices or to duplicate inexhaustibly those already proven. The British army was provided with neither adequate reserves of material nor with adequate agencies for following Neuve Chapelle, and ultimately leading to the establishment of the British munitions industry under the tutelage of Mr. Lloyd-George, producing them.

"The British army, with the supply of guns, ammunition, and aeroplanes which constituted its equipment on August 4, 1914, might have been fairly matched with Turkey or Roumania or Greece; the wildest enthusiast would have laughed ironically at the prospect of the British army opposing the deadly perfection of the German system."

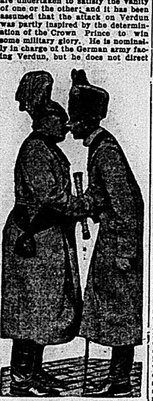
KAISER AND SON PLAY AT SOLDIERS

They Are Not Taken Seriously by German Generals.

ARE ALWAYS STAGING SHOWS

When a Big Move Is to Be Made the Kaiser Rushes to the Spot, and Then After It Begins He Leaves and Gets the Popular Credit for Having Ordered Advance.

A GERMAN-BORN American whose father was a Prussian major and who served for some years in a German military school, has been diverting readers of The New York Tribune by a series of articles upon the German military caste; and a new article was suggested the other day when it was announced that the Kaiser was hastening to the western front to encourage his men opposing the Allied offensive. This writer says it is simply ridiculous to suppose that either the Kaiser or the Crown Prince is permitted to have anything to say about military operations. It may be true that certain operations are undertaken to satisfy the vanity of one or the other; and it has been assumed that the attack on Verdun was partly inspired by the determination of the Crown Prince to win some military glory. He is nominally in charge of the German army facing Verdun, but he does not direct that army. That is being done by generals under him, who if the attacks succeed will be given some distinction, and if they fail will be disgraced. If there is a German victory at Verdun the credit will go to the Crown Prince; if there is a failure it will be explained that the stupid general failed to carry out the orders of the Prince.



A SALUTE FOR SHOW PURPOSES.

As a matter of fact, says the writer in The Tribune, the military capacities of the Hohenzollerns petered out with Frederick the Great. The Kaiser himself is said to be a laughing-stock with his officers for his ignorance of military affairs and for his absurd pretensions. He says that on one occasion he saw the Kaiser give an order to charge at a sham battle, which had it occurred in a real combat would have resulted in the wiping out of the charging battalions. Nevertheless, the judges awarded the decision to the Kaiser, and he was overwhelmed with praise by the more sycophantic of the military experts who explained the operations in the press. It was after some such exhibition that Graf Haeseler addressed the troops and said: "My officers, you have obeyed his Majesty's commands splendidly; only in real war-time do the opposite. Then you may win."

The movements of the Kaiser from one battle front to the other are designed to make an impression upon the German civilian population, which is just now causing the Kaiser as much anxiety as is the fate of his armies. He appears at a battle front after he has been informed that a great German move is to be made; is photographed with the generals in command and then disappears. The next day Berlin hears of a German advance, and the inference is that it was arranged by the Kaiser, instead of for him. It may be, although the ex-Prussian does not seem to credit it, that the Kaiser's presence does have some inspiring effect upon his troops. With them as with the civilian population there is likely to be a notion that he is a great general; and what troops would not fight better, knowing that their king was watching them?

Moreover, the generals do not dare to let the Kaiser into the military secret that he is an ignoramus. They must pretend to have a high opinion of his sagacity as a military adviser, and when his advice is to be disregarded tact is necessary. Either they hurry to do what they believe is right and what they have reason to believe he would oppose; or if they disobey his instructions they pretend that there was a misunderstanding.

It's all right to return good for evil, but good luck seldom comes from bad habits.

OUR MOUNTAIN SHEEP.

Their Home is Picturesque and Their Food Dainty.

The mountain sheep of Canada are the proudest and handsomest of our wild animals. They are the most perfect combination of strength, hardihood, endurance, agility, beauty, and grace. They are the most delicate in their tastes, and the most artistic in temperament. Their home is the most picturesque, and their food the daintiest. They are extremely timid in the presence of their enemies, but courageous in battling with the many forbidding elements to which their lives in the high mountains are exposed.

They range through the greatest depth of latitude of any family of the ruminants on the continent, and are instinctively wild. No wild animals are further removed from domestication; they find the most congenial home in the pure air of the wildest mountain countries, and so far, all efforts to transplant and domesticate them have been failures.

According to Indian tradition they once lived in the low lands when the earth was yet in darkness, but when the earth was lighted and the rays of the sun burst suddenly upon them, they were seriously frightened and fled to the mountains, where they have ever since remained.

Indians are not our most reliable source of knowledge in tracing the early history of our animal life, but their story is not entirely improbable, for we have records of much greater changes having taken place in the habits of many of our wild animals.

Many names have been given to the first species of mountain sheep discovered in America, and it has required careful investigation to trace the priority between canadensis and cervina. They were described by Desmarest as Ovis cervina in 1804, but it is now generally admitted that Shaw described them as Ovis canadensis in 1803, and there is but little doubt that canadensis will be recognized in scientific circles as the name they are fully entitled to bear, and it is now pronounced by many of our best informed zoologists as of unquestionable priority.

The habits of the sheep are very regular and very interesting. In winter all ages mingle in large bands of various numbers, according as they are plentiful in any given locality. They will paw the snow from the grass where it is only a few inches deep, but they usually keep to high table-lands where the winds keep the snow blown off. The character of their coat is such as to give them great protection against cold and storm, and it is rare that the northern herds seek any more protection from the elements than what they find among the cliffs of rock. The canadensis are more accustomed to being in timber and often seek the higher belts of timber during storm, and sometimes come down to the very bottom of the canyons.

The other varieties, the dalli, the stonei, and the funanni simply defy the elements throughout the long Arctic and sub-Arctic winters. Like most animals they do not feed much during severe storms, and will huddle closely, the little fellows crouching alongside the older ones for warmth and protection, while many of the adult males and stronger animals get restless, and prowl about, walk the highest ridges, and nibble indifferently at the single spears of grass found peeping through the snow here and there. When the storm breaks they will at once set out to some feeding ground of which they have a most perfect knowledge. They know their own home, and always know where to look for food, even when it would seem that every foot of their country was buried deep in snow. It not infrequently happens, however, that during storms they remain in some small rocky cave and the winds drift the snow across their only avenue of escape so deeply that they find their way out with difficulty. The old males are always the first to break their way out and their superior strength is often put to a severe test, but the road made by them is of great advantage to the weaker and younger animals. During the winter season the older males always lead the way from one feeding ground to another.—All Out Doors.

One Man's Adventures.

A remarkable story of how a gunner was first punished and then decorated was published recently in a London newspaper. The gunner was one of the naval reservists who were called up on the outbreak of the war, and one day while on duty he saw the periscope of a submarine appear. Without an instant's hesitation he turned to his gun and opened fire, and for this act of disobedience he was placed under arrest. Subsequently the real facts came to light, and he was awarded the D.S.M. Unfortunately he lost his life when the Alcantara went down after her fight with the Grief.

Willing to Be the Goat.

"Why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" quoted the impassioned orator.

Then he paused a moment to let it take effect.

"Well," spoke up a half inebriated man in the audience, "I'll be the goat. Why should it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Quite the Contrary.

"What! A general jail delivery?"

"Oh, no; an epidemic of measles!"

BUILDING BIG STADIUM.

Camp Borden Is Being Finely Equipped for Athletics.

Work in preparation for the construction of a monster stadium and athletic field for the troops at Camp Borden has been begun. Fatigue parties totaling nearly a thousand men started in clearing up stumps and dead wood from an open space at the eastern end of the main street of the camp a few days ago. Captain Tom Flanagan, director of military sports, with Lieut.-Col. Dick Greer, of the Sportsmen's Battalion, were both on hand superintending the work, and now a start is being made on the stadium and race-track, the former, which is to be a simple arrangement of seats on the level with a raised stage or ring, being designed to seat from 15,000 to 20,000 men, while the race-track will have a circumference of a third of a mile. The entire field is to be enclosed by a nine-foot wall, and it is intended to have a small charge made for admission to go towards the funds of the Divisional Athletic Association. The athletic grounds are to be made use of every night for recreation purposes, outdoor movies to be shown, and various athletic exhibitions to be put on each night.

In addition to the large field, the battalions are to be allowed to make use of their training grounds for purposes of athletics after drill hours, so that 20 small fields will be provided during recreation hours for battalion sports and matches. There will be combined athletic field days held, as heretofore, every Saturday, and as an encouragement to the men to take part all who engage in sports will be dismissed from further drill at noon on Saturdays.

Landmarks Association.

The annual report of the Historic Landmarks Association of Canada has just been published. It is a neat little pamphlet, carefully gotten up and including, as well as the annual reports of the officers, a Guide to Historic Landmarks in Canada, which is of great value to an antiquarian or a tourist; and the reading of which has a welcome tendency to pleasantly freshen one's recollections of Canadian history.

The president, Mr. Pemberton Smith, of Montreal, reports a steadily growing membership. The reports of the secretaries and treasurer are highly satisfactory, the latter stating that he has an increased balance of cash on hand.

Townshend's Island Prison.

The island of Prinkipo, which is to be the temporary abode of Gen. Townshend, has been a favorite holiday resort of Constantinople diplomats. Many of them preferred it to Therapia and Buyukdereh on the Bosphorus, the one serious drawback being the abominable service of steamers. Mr. William Miller tells how a deputation of European ladies, anxious for their husbands' safety, threatened to interview Abdul Hamid on the matter, which so alarmed him that he instantly promised to buy two new boats in England. Visiting Prinkipo himself on St. George's Day, the principal Greek festival of the island, Mr. Miller had to travel on an old tub crowded with hundreds of trippers, until the deck was almost level with the water.

Pound Cake.

Take one pound two ounces of sugar, a pound of butter, a pound of flour, ten eggs, vanilla to taste. Cream the sugar and eggs together and the flour and butter. Mix both of these together, add vanilla and beat until light and creamy. It is best to use one's hand, as it makes the cake much lighter. Bake in moderate oven one hour. This makes four pounds.

Way of Woman With an Old Shirt.

Men's shirts are usually made of such good materials that it seems a shame to discard them because the fronts and cuffs are worn. One woman makes good looking aprons of them by using the back of the shirt for the front of the apron, finishing with a bias and cut from the worn fronts and getting strings from the sleeves.

Apricot Tapioca.

Simmer three tablespoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a teaspoonful of almond extract. Cool, add a cupful of whipped cream and pour over crushed macaroons soaked in apricot sirup. Serve chilled with whipped cream and apricots.

ANZACS IN FRANCE.

They Like It Better Here Than in Gallipoli.

The Australians and New Zealanders know something of the best and the worst of this war on the Western front, apart from great offensives, so that they are not ignorant of the actual conditions when they say, as most of them do, that after Gallipoli, trench life in France is "not so bad." They would rather be here even than in Egypt.

A young Australian captain told me the reason for this preference:

"Here, for instance, we are cold—coming straight from the Egyptian sun. By Jove! It's cold to the very marrow-bones when the wind blows down the trench at night! But on the Peninsula the endless glare, day after day, was hateful, and much harder to bear. Then we were parched for water, and thirst is the most agonizing thing.

"Here there's too much water, and the wet trenches are devilish uncomfortable—how it rains in this part of the world!—but it's a thousand times better to have too much than too little.

"The shell fire here is more intense than anything we had to endure from the old Turk—and not pleasant, you bet—but at least one can get away from it here for a spell when the battalion is relieved, which was never so in the other place."

It was in such a wood that Shakespeare would have loved, because of the shimmer among the beech leaves and the long vistas of tall straight trunks, that some of the Australians came across a party of French woodcutters—soldiers of the Territorial class, and very crafty with the axe.

The Australians looked on while a tree was polled, and then one of them put a friendly challenge to the biggest and brawniest Frenchman.

"I guess I can beat you at that game, old son."

The "poilu" laughed understanding the signs if not the speech, of the tall brown lad in the slouch hat. He laughed with self-confidence, for he had a reputation as a wood-cutter not disputed by his comrades.

"Essayez donc, mon vieux! Il faut couper trois, vous savez."

Each man was to cut down three trees, and the quickest would win.

The Australian took off his tunic and rolled up his shirt-sleeves, showing the muscles of his big brown arms, so that the French soldiers whistled with admiration. He cut with clean, strong strokes, and so skilfully that the French champion looked anxious. "Nom d'un pipe, d'un pipe! but this boy is formidable!"

But one of the trees fell across another, and there was a shout of delight from the Frenchmen. That was not allowed. It was not good style. The Frenchman would now show his own way with an axe.

"Regardez! Il est fort, le bonhomme, la."

The French giant, for he was a big fellow, with the neck and shoulders of a Roman gladiator, swung his long-handled axe so that it was like a flash of lightning among the trees. And he won with four minutes to spare, and with superb style—which was very helpful to the entente cordiale.

History of Sugar.

Sugar, which we are being asked to economize, bears something of its history in its name, which is believed to derive, through various modifications—the French sucre, Spanish azucar, and Arabic sakkar—from the Sanskrit, Sharkara. It was in India, apparently, that cane sugar in the dry granulated state was first prepared. The date of the introduction of sugar to England is uncertain, but large quantities of Egyptian sugar were imported via Venice in the Middle Ages. In very early times the use of sugar appears to have been unknown. The sweet sap of the Indian weed seems to have been first cultivated in the country extending from Cochin-China to Bengal. Thence it was imported to Europe under the name of saccharum, and used in medicine. It was in the seventh century that the art of sugar-boiling was carried to China from India, but Egyptians taught the Chinese sugar refining.—Tit-Bits.

Many Cantabs at Front.

Austin Fabb, the printer of The Cambridge Review, has been collecting statistics since the war began to show the part taken by Cambridge men, past and present, in the great war. He has just issued his sixth list of the men on active service. Trinity has sent 2,670 men into the forces, while Pembroke can number 1,164 and Caius 1,147. Of the other colleges half a dozen have at least 600 on their war list, these being Clare with 815 names, Emmanuel 720, Trinity Hall 641, Christ's 627, King's 602, and Jesus 600. The grand total for the university amounts to 11,834.

The casualty list grows daily, and already 2,000 Cambridge men have been reported as killed, wounded, or missing. Most of these were officers.

Premier Hughes' Advice.

The Hon. W. M. Hughes, Australia's Prime Minister, recently visited the Burdett-Coutts Schools at Westminster, where he was scholar, choir-boy, bell-ringer, and pupil teacher. "Live a simple, honest, straightforward life," he told the boys, "telling as few lies as possible, no lies that are mean and petty, and doing no mean or petty thing. When you have found out what you want in life hold on to it—stick to it with all your soul and all your strength, and it will be yours."

A Pensioner's Record.

A unique record has been achieved by an Army pensioner, of Bramley, Yorkshire. He is sixty-seven years o age, has served twenty-two years in the Army, and has reared thirty-one children, including twelve daughters. Sixteen of his sons are serving in the fighting forces.

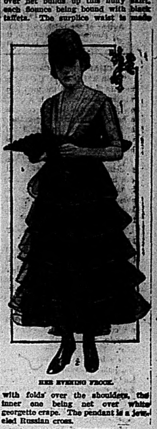
MODEL FROM LONDON.

A Frilly Gown Like Those Englishwomen Are Wearing.

Black ninon ruffled into five flounces over net builds up this fluffy skirt, each flounce being bound with black taffeta. The surplice waist is made with folds over the shoulders, the inner one being net over white georgette crape. The pendant is a jeweled Russian cross.



HER EVENING FROCK.

A Unique Ring.

Lady Dorothy Walpole, who was recently married in London to Captain Hobart Mills, had her wedding ring set, by her own special desire, with a portion of the shrapnel with which her husband was so dangerously wounded in France.

He at present holds a high position in the Censor's office, and is the author of one of the most brilliant books of impressions of the war. Lady Dorothy has always been the close companion of her father, Lord Orford.

Immigration Fell Off.

Canadian immigration in the last fiscal year dropped by almost two-thirds. The total of newcomers in the year was 48,537, compared with 144,789. By far the largest proportion of immigration is shown in the number of arrivals from the United States. Of these there were 36,937, while there were 8,664 immigrants from Great Britain and 2,936 from other countries. The British immigration included 5,857 English, 102 Welsh, 1,887 Scotch, and 818 Irish.

Ontario got the largest share of the new population, a total of 14,743, the rest being distributed as follows: Maritime Provinces, 5,981; Quebec, 8,274; Manitoba, 3,487; Saskatchewan, 6,001; Alberta, 7,215; British Columbia, 2,836.

The miscellaneous immigration included 27 Germans, 15 Austrians, 65 Hebrews, 179 Russians, 388 Italians, 180 French, 88 Chinese, 401 Japanese, and 591 Scandinavians. The Chinese paid $19,389 in head tax. Immigration officials during the year turned back 163 undesirables out of a total of 325 held for examination. Of the British immigrants 18 per cent. took up homesteads in the West, while 30 per cent. of the American and 28 per cent. of the immigrants from other countries also took up land. The statement issued a few days ago does not give the number who took up farming without making homestead entries, nor the number of Canadians who took up homestead lands during the year.

WIRELESS LEAKS LOCATED.

Operator at Barriefield Discovers How Germans Get Allies' Orders

An important discovery was made at Barriefield recently, and by it, it is believed, the secret of how Germans have been able to get the contents of messages sent from the Allies' Headquarters to the front line has been found. Working at his instrument at Barrie one day Sergt. Hycks heard a message which he knew could not be sent from any wireless station within his receiving limits. It was in the Morse code. He came to the conclusion that it must be from the buzzer that was working in another tent ninety feet away. The electricity, which was passing over the buzzer wire, was being absorbed, and became active over the wireless apparatus. This is undoubtedly what the Germans have long known, and used in many cases to gain advantage against the Allies. An order to advance would become known to them instantly, as well as many other things they should not know. Great importance is attached to the discovery in official circles.

COOL CLOTHES

This is the time of the year when a Man wants to wear as little as possible. If you wear one of our Cool Two Piece Suits, it's certain you won't "Wear a Worried Look!"

But there are two considerations in a Two Piece Suit, which call for most competent Tailoring. In the first place, the Coat must be so tailored as to obviate the need of a Vest. In the second place, as the fabrics are extremely light in weight, the Tailoring must be done with the greatest skill.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

NEW CANADIAN PAY BOOK

A new pay book for the use of the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force will shortly be issued to the soldiers at Barriefield Camp, and it promises to be one of the most useful ever devised. It will not only serve as a memorandum of all financial matters for the soldiers, but will furnish him a complete record of every item that he wishes to know. The identification value of the book will also be great as such a book found on a soldier would be a complete identification of him and answer all questions about the man that the record office or his friends might wish to know.

The blanks are filled in with such information as the name of the unit and part of that unit such as squadron, company or battery that the man is in. The man's regimental number, rank and full name with the date of attestation and his religious persuasion are also placed after blanks left for the purpose.

Some information in the book is also of interest. It reads as follows:

"The Canadian Pay and Record Affice, Westmister House, 7 Millbank, London, S.W., is a central information bureau which links up the officer and men of the Canadian contingents with their relatives in all parts of the world; consequently to enable that office to be in a position at all times to furnish the latest information to relatives and friends it is essential that the unit in the field sent accurate information to the D.A.G.'s. office at the base (D.A.A.G., Canadian section) concerning any casualties affecting officers and men immediately they occur. Each individual officer and men can assist the work of the Canadian Pay and Record Office if he carries out the following regulations:"

These regulations deal with changes of address of the next of kin, the need of sending a post-card to the Record Office when wounded or taken prisoner, etc.

A blank form for the willing of personal estate is on a perforated page at the back of the book.

NOTES

A Tommy at the front writes home that life in the trenches wouldn't be so bad if it wasn't for the people opposite.

A new branch of training for the soldier at Barriefield will go on the syllabus as "Engineer work," it being a short course in what the engineers have to do at the front and what will be required of the men in the ranks.

The barometer and thermometer at the Infantry School cannot be used for the control of the weather. It points to "very dry" at all times, which is correct around the school, but the temperature of 104 degrees seems to be an exaggeration.

Capt. Wotherspoon, G. G. F. G., who qualified at the Infantry School, is taking a course as paymaster at the headquarters pay office, and will likely be appointed to the Canals Patrol Guard as soon as his course is completed. He is a brother of Capt. H. C. Wotherspoon, adjutant of the L.S.I.

Lieut.-Col. M. K. Adams, officer commanding the 155th Battalion, on Tuesday morning received a cable from his son, Lieut. E. A. Adams, to the effect that he was soon coming home on two months' leave. Lieut. Adams was recently wounded in action. He went overseas with the 39th Battalion of Belleville, but was later transferred to the 14th Montreal Rifles.

The 155th battalion have a part of their parade grounds laid off to represent the place where they will receive their colors in Belleville on Saturday. The battalon is getting good practice, and will carry out the ceremonial in good style on Saturday.

The 155th will go to Belleville on Saturday morning, 900 strong. The trip is entirely voluntary, and each man is paying his own expenses.

Many graduates of Ottawa University and athletes from the Capital are interested in the awarding of the military cross to Rev. Father Fortier, who was director of athletics at the Ottawa University when the famous Father Stanton was manager.

Capt. MacGregor and Capt. Munro, Army Medical Corps, are conducting a medical examination of the men of the 154th Battalion. Reports show that the physical fitness of these men is of an exceptionally high standard.

Rev. C. G. Smith, B.D., of Belleville, who has been at the camp "Y" for a week, left today for his home. Dr. Smith has spent a delightful and profitable week among the men of Barriefield camp, and has gone home full of good opinions of the manner in which the camp is conducted. Mr. Smith delivered some very helpful talks to the boys in khaki.

Major Ponton is back on duty again after a few days' sick leave. The Major's wounded knee is again commencing to give him some trouble, and it is with difficulty he manages to carry out his duties.

200 "Y" Men in Canadian Camps

While forty men have been sent overseas already by the Y.M.C.A. to serve Canadian soldiers in Flanders and in England, the heavy demands of the camps in Canada are being met. At Borden Camp, while the equipment is not yet complete, fifty men are on hand looking after the welfare of 30,000 men in camp. There are two canteen tents, each 50 by 150 feet; four correspondence tents, 40 by 80 feet, where writing paper and ink are supplied free of charge.

At Valcartier there are 32 on the staff and the equipment includes a canteen, 40 by 80 feet; two writing tents 30 by 60 feet, and a concert hall 54 by 100 feet. Plans for a branch in the Valcartier camp are also under way.

At Niagara there are 25 men engaged, and a large number of ladies form Toronto, who give their services free in looking after the canteen. The refreshment tent is 50 by 100 feet; an auditorium, 50 by 100 feet, two writing tents, 40 by 80 feet, in which 500 soldiers have been sending letters at one time, and a similar tent, 30 by 50 feet, where there are located a watch repair shop, barber shop, stocks of toilet articles, puttees, etc.

At Barriefield, Petawawa and London a number are at work, bringing the total to nearly 200 "Y" men, specially set apart to give their whole time to the soldiers in training.

Belleville Lawn Bowlers Play At Kingston

Three rinks of Bowlers journeyed to Kingston yesterday and played a friendly tournament at the spacious grounds of Queens University. Two games were played of 15 ends each and the scores were very even and the games closely contested throughout. The Kingston rinks won out with 5 shots to the good in the afternoon and 5 shots in the evening, a total of 10 shots for the day's playing.

Considering the fact of a very keen lawn, strange grounds and the splendid teams of the Kingston players, the local trundlers did remarkably well and were heartily congratulated by the Kingston players for their fine showing. The Kingston club gave the Belleville players an auto ride about the city upon the arrival of the 1.38 train at Kingston Junction. They also entertained them to dinner at the Hotel Randolph. The hospitality and goodfellowship of the Kingston club was beyond all praise, and was greatly appreciated by their guests from Belleville. The following is the scores by rinks:—

SABIN'S VIEW HOPEFUL

Prosperity Will Continue in U. S. Long After War

HOUGHTON, Mich., July 26.—Chas. H. Sabin, president of the Guaranty Trust Company, New York, here with other financiers inspecting the Calumet & Hecla property, says to the Boston News Bureau:

"I can see no reason for expecting any material falling off in business in the United States if the European war should end tomorrow or six months hence. There will continue to be an unusual demand for all the United States can produce, particularly from Europe, for a long time after the war. Reconstruction of Europe will follow peace, and will keep our industries busy. In the meantime, domestic business is picking up.

"With reference to the future price of copper, it is well to remember there is always a large demand for that metal in times of great industrial activity. Further, Germany, which was a big consumer for copper from the United States previous to the war, will be in the market for enormous tonnages when the war is over, regardless of terms upon which peace is concluded."

William E. Corey, president of the Midvale Steel Company, says:

"The end of the European war is not yet in sight. Moreover, continuous demand for munitions from the United States puts it quite out of range of possibility to say when it will end."

Last Week of July Sale!

TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE

The extreme heat the past few weeks has compelled the Waterworks System to pump an enormous amount of water, an amount sufficient for a city of 25,000 population. This drain on the pumping plant is having its effect, and the Waterworks Dept. request the co-operation of its customers to refrain from unnecessarily wasting the water. Many taps and lawn services are left running all night and all day, and this must be stopped. It is against the rules and in order for all to have sufficient water, we cannot allow any water to be wasted.

The time allowed for watering lawns in the City of Belleville is much longer than in most cities, and if this waste continues, we will have to shorten the hours for lawn watering. Some action will be taken against those who are wasting and are using the water contrary to the regulations.

We also request those using lawn services this extreme hot weather, to kindly cut down the amount of water used as much as possible, as the excessive heat is seriously affecting our motor-driven pump, and this overloading is very disastrous to the life of the motor.

REDMOND TEMPORARILY SAVED FROM DIFFICULTY

Prospects of Nationalists at Election for an Irish Parliament Would Not Have Been Encouraging.

LONDON, July 26.—The suspicion which recently has been active in many minds that the death of the Irish settlement proposals brings little sorrow to Mr. Redmond and his followers, is given expression by The Times' Parliamentary correspondent to-day, who writes of the atmosphere at Westminster after the failure of the agreement. "It would almost seem as if the Nationalists were not sorry in the end to have a chance of cutting themselves loose from a responsibility which no practical politician envied them, under existing conditions," he says.

Those existing conditions, as understood by a press writer, are that in Nationalist Ireland today where the Sinn Fein undoubtedly enjoys much popularity, the Nationalists at the elections for an Irish Parliament would have anything but rosy prospects. Mr. Redmond undoubtedly has lost ground. An irreconcilable element today sees little to choose between his party and a continuation of Dublin Castle rule. Defeat of the settlement proposals undoubtedly gets him temporarily out of a difficult position.

Sir Edward Carson is to-day the great figure in Irish affairs. In the settlement negotiations he secured for Ulster better terms than he had ever been able to before, and established a precedent which it is safe to prophecy will never be broken. He conducted the negotiations throughout in a spirit of conciliation and statesmanship.

In British affairs much attention is directed towards the future policy of the Nationalists. Mr. Redmond and his follows now hold themselves free to criticize the Government and will probably go into permanent opposition. The country is waiting upon the Government for the next step in Irish affairs. Resignations from the Cabinet are not anticipated. The country at large is more impressed with the nature of the Government's settlement porposals and more critical of the Nationalists refusal to accept what undoubtedly was a reasonable solution of a vexed problem.

The coalition by delay in introducing the Irish Bill has suffered in prestige but public opinion concurs in its refusal to coerce Ulster or to consent to continued representation of Irish members on the present basis in the British Commons after the establishment of an Irish Parliament.

Chas. S. Clapp

One thing about a conscience is that it isn't apt to trouble you unless you trouble it.

You can't sneer at the world and expect it to be for you.

Revenge is sweet, but it's also sickening.

Won by a Bluff.

When the armies of Napoleon were overrunning Europe, General Massena, with 18,000 men, suddenly appeared before the Austrian town of Feldkirch and demanded its surrender. Instead of complying, the burgomaster issued orders that the church bells were to be set ringing and that the burghers, their wives and daughters, clad in holiday attire, were to assemble in the market square and there make merry.

The result was exactly what he had hoped for. Massena heard the sounds of rejoicing, watched from the heights overlooking the town the gathering throngs in the streets and came to the conclusion that the townsfolk must have received intelligence that the Austrian army, which was believed to be somewhere in the vicinity, was advancing to their relief.

As to give battle there and then formed no part of Napoleon's general plan of action, Massena ordered a retreat. Feldkirch was saved, and by a bluff, for as a matter of fact no relieving force was anywhere near at the time.

Suitable.

"Can't you give me a position in your bank, Mr. Jiggs?"

"I don't know but what you might qualify as teller, Miss Gossip," retorted the brute.

Somber Reflection.

"Biggins insists on being the life of the party."

"Yes," commented Miss Cayenne, "and life is sometimes such a sad thing."

The Origin of Pyrograpny.

About a century ago an artist named Cranch was standing one day in front of a fire in his home at Axminster. Over the fireplace was an oaken mantelpiece, and it occurred to Cranch that this expanse of wood might be improved by a little ornamentation. He picked up the poker, heated it red hot and began to sketch a bold design. The result pleased him so much that he elaborated his work and began to attempt other fire pictures on panels of wood. These met with a ready sale, and Cranch soon gave all his time to his new art. This was the beginning of what is now known as pyrography.—Exchange.

Very Brief.

A record of brevity in a holiday correspondence was established by a Frenchman in the eighteenth century. Voltaire and Piton, the epigrammatist, exchanged challenges to write the shortest possible letter. So when Voltaire was starting on a journey he wrote to Piton, "Eo rus," which is the complete Latin for "I am going to the country." Piton's answer was just "I" —complete Latin for "go."

In business correspondence the record is divided between Victor Hugo, who, anxious to know how his "Les Miserables" was going, wrote to the publisher, "?" and the publisher, who triumphantly replied "!"

THE DAILY TUB.

To Say Nothing of Hygiene, Beauty Demands a Good Scrubbing.

It would be wrong to prescribe hot water baths for all the world of women, for there are undoubtedly conditions when they would be harmful. But daily tubbing in water of some temperature or other is required for looks and health, and if the heart is in good condition the benefits of the hot tub are undeniable. So the long dead beauties of ancient Greece and Rome kept themselves fair, and so the beauty of to-day builds up her looks when she finds they are beginning to wane with time of a fevered life. Every weak woman anxious for her looks crowds the Turkish bath, boiling and steaming away complexion hurts, rejuvenating muscles, lightening her body of its superfluous flesh, soothing the nerves. And if women are used to such baths, or to some other preferred kind, they feel as fit as race horses for a week afterward.

Some medical facts concerning the usual effects of the hot or cold bath give this illuminating information: The hot bath facilitates and stimulates the natural combustion processes of the body. The cold bath, to produce the same results, lavishes just four times the same amount of energy. The cold bath is not sufficiently cleansing for the health of the skin, and when there is a predisposition to skin troubles the chilly water tends to increase them. The process called "hardening," which consists in submitting one's system to the shock of cold plunges, is thought, too, the worst thing in the world for any but the most vigorous constitutions.

Waists Are Large.

Waists are comfortably large, occasionally fitted with snugness, but not really compressed. Collars offer wide variety. They are high all around, high in the back and of any one of a half dozen low cuts in front, semi-low all around.

A good many fichu arrangements appear, but they are the becoming and very skillfully draped fichus that are not so trying as the demure surplice fichu of earlier days.

A Painter and His Pet.

Rembrandt, the famous painter, had a monkey he loved very much. The monkey took sick and died as Rembrandt was painting the picture of a noble family. He was told at once, and he commenced to cry, and then he started to draw the picture he was making. Nothing would stop him from doing this, although every one tried to do so. When the man he was painting the picture for saw the picture he refused to take it, for Rembrandt told him the picture was of the monkey and not of his family.

Cream Salad Dressing.

Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, two and one-half tablespoonfuls melted butter, one level teaspoonful flour, a shake of pepper and two egg yolks together until smooth. Add three-fourths cupful of thin cream. (You may take the top of the milk in the bottle and have the rest of the milk to use for something else.) Then add slowly one-fourth cupful vinegar or lemon juice, stirring as you add it. Cook over hot water until thickened. If too thick after standing to cool, thin with cream or milk.

The leg was badly lacerated and burned, and a large artery was severed. In spite of efforts to stop the bleeding pending the arrival of an ambulance, the workman nearly bled to death before his arrival at the Western Hospital. WASHINGTON, D. C. July 27.—The Britsih embassy announced today that new restrictions imposed on the entrance of missionaries into India require any person who is not a British subject to obtain permission from Indian authorities first. LACHINE CANAL NOW IN FULL SWING

MONTREAL, July 27.—Navigation is in full swing again on the Lachine Canal. Milwaukee Free Press Will Cost 2 Cents After Aug.7.

MILWAUKEE, July 27.—The Milwaukee Free Press, a morning newspaper here, to-day announced an advance from 1 to 2 cents in the price of the paper for street sales.

It attributes the advance to the greatly increased cost of print paper. The changed price will be effective August 7.

STRUGGLE STILL CONTINUES MORE GAINS FOR BRITISH

Three Distinct Battles Rage Along a Five-Mile Front—Teutons Are Driven From East and Northeast Sections of Hard-Fought Delville Wood, and Haig's Troops Advance in Northern Part of Longueval

LONDON, July 28.— Special— A terrific battle raged all day yesterday along the five-mile front from Pozières to Longueval, the British registering further gains. Three separate battles were fought on this small front, according to news from the battlefield last night, forming a strong operation against the German third line.

At the northern tip of to-day's battle front, north-east of Pozieres, the British operated beyond the foremost fortifications of the German third system, meeting resistance of the strongest kind. Towards the south, however, they made considerable progress, driving the Teutons from the eastern and north-eastern sections of the hard-fought Delville Wood, and gaining in then north part of Longueval. Street fighting is now proceeding in the village, the operation being a repetition of the action which resulted in the capture of Pozieres.

The bitterest fighting of the day took place on a small etrip of 200 yards north-east of Pozieres, where the British sought to strengthen their line by the consolidation of a trench in which German detachements had held out for weeks. This trench interposes across the highroad to Bapaume and stands on high ground(giving command of the battlefield. It also is on the most direct route to the dominating Heights of Martinjuich, about two miles away.

By a strong night attack the British succeeded in seizing the whole trench, but early this morning the Germans directed tn artillery drum fire against it and sent forward great masses of troops, determined to win the position back at all hazards. The counter-attack was successful, the Teutons regaining all the ground lost. Gen. Haig then brought up new formations and sent them against the shattered ditch before the ground could be consolidated. The British, under heavy fire, succeeded in entering the northern part of the trench, and are holding their ground and fighting to extend their grip upon it.

The capture of the village of Pozieres from the Germans, military officers say, means that the British are in complete possession of the German second line in the Somme region.

The fight for Pozieres lasted eleven days—from July 14 to July 25. The place was defended by 200 machine guns, of which all but 30 were destroyed or put out of action by the British artillery.

A species of fort in the centre of the village was defended by a company of Bavarian infantry. These troops resisted for twelve hours, and at the end of that time only four men were found alive. In a dugout close by a heap of sixty bodies remained unburied. The last defenders of the village were the men of a Bavarian battalion, who were decimated as they crossed the 300 yards between the village and a cemetery where they made their last but unsuccessful stand.

AMERICA CABLES BLACKLIST PROTEST

States Terms British Action "Invasion of Neutral Rights"

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A note to Great Britain objecting to the blacklisting of American business firms as an "invasion of neutral rights" was cabled to London late last night by the State Department.

Acting Secretary Polk, announcing to-day that the communication had been despatched, declined to discuss it further than to say that it contained "representations." He said it would be given out for publication Monday.

ENEMY STRUGGLING TO RECAPTURE POZIERES, BUT WITHOUT SUCCESS

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, July 28.—The British statement says in full: After severe fighting we have driven the Fifth Brandenburg division from their remaining position in Delville Wood, capturing three officers and 158 men. The whole wood now is in our hands and two German counter-attacks have been beaten off with heavy loss to the enemy.

We made further progress in Longueval village and near Pozieres, and in the latter area we captured forty-eight wounded Germans.

Last night enemy gnns were active against our new positions, and there were heavy artillery duels in various sectors of the battle areas near Neuve Chapelle. Small parties of Germans succeeded in entering our front trenches at two points, but at once were driven out by counter-attacks, leaving a few wounded in our hands.

North-east of Souchez and at several other places our artillery shelled the enemy's front line and communication trenches.

Nova Scotia Temperance Act Before Minister

License Holder Claims Act is Arbitrary and Illegal in its Application

OTTAWA, July 27.—The Hon. C. J. Doherty, minister of justice, to-day heard legal argument on behalf of these who are anxious to have the Nova Scotia prohibition act disallowed. The Nova Scotia Act is similar to the Manitoba Act, although Nova Scotia was in the dry list, with the exception of Halifax, before the act came into force. The Nova Scotia Act is peculiar in that it was introduced by an Opposition member and was not a Government measure. There were only three votes against it, however, and these were from Halifax.

It is claimed by the holders of Halifax licenses, granted in February last, and for which thirty thousand dollars were paid, that the act is inequitable and unjust. The licenses in question were abolished without compensation of any kind and it is claimed that this is an interference with vested rights. It is also contended that some one hundred retailers and wholesalers have been deprived of their business, that 150 employees lost their positions and that $350,000 worth of liquor has not been disposed of. It is contended that while this province has a right to pass the act it has no right to legalize the retention of the moves involved in the licenses.

The representatives of the Nova Scotia Temperance Alliance defended the act to-day, declaring that the legislation was within the jurisdiction of the province, and declaring further that the Manitoba Act which s similar, has been upheld by the Urivy Council. They were in favor of returning the license money, but declared that was a mtter that should be settled between the license-holders and the city, but the province turned it down. The provincial government was not represented. The license-holders were represented by Mr. Eugene Lafleur, K.C., Halifax, while Messrs. R. H. Murray and Rev. H. R. Grant appeared for the Temperance Alliance.

The Minister of Justice reserved judgment until a later date.

"It comes so near to what the people want they come annually," is Hon. James Duff's brief description of the Canadian National Exhibition.

NO FOUNDATION FOR STORY

Statement That a Super-Submarine Had Been Captured in Halifax Waters Not True

Canadian Press Special.

OTTAWA, July 28.—The Naval Department denies that there is any foundation for the story published in New York this morning that the German super-submarine Bremen had been captured and taken into Halifax.

THREE RAILWAYMEN INJURED AT WEYMOUTH

WEYMOUTH, N.S., July 27.—A serious accident occurred yesterday on the Dominion Atlantic Railway, on the west end of the Weymouth Bridge, about 4 o'clock.

The eastbound Yarmouth-Middleton accommodation train, in charge of Conductor Geo. Williams and Driver Charles Churchill, had just taken water at the tank, and as it got under way for the Weymouth station, a car loaded with lumber left the rails, going over an embankment many feet below. Conductor Williams and Driver Churchill escaped being hurt. Fireman Pittman, of Yarmouth, jumped from the locomotive and is seriously injured. Brakeman Stanley Burrell, of Brazil Lake, was also quite badly hurt, but will recover. Baggagemaster Melvin Woodman, of Cambridge, was rushed by special train to Halifax Hospital, accompanied by Mr McDonald, of Meteghan. His chances for recovery are slight.

CROSSING KEEPER DIED FROM HEAT

Was Flagman at The Foot of Yonge Street For Many Years

TORONTO, July 27.—The death of Mr Hugh Gallagher, the flagman at the foot of Yonge Street, from the heat, removes a well-known character from the Toronto streets. Deceased was 55 years old, lived at 23 Strange street, and has been on the Yonge Street crossing for sixteen years. He became a brakeman on the Grand Trunk when he was eighteen years of age and the following year lost his left arm, which was pinched off at the elbow when it was caught by a coupling while he was stringing together some box cars at Port Hope. Prior to coming to Toronto he was a flagman in the Port Hope yards for thirteen years. Since taking up his position at the foot of Yonge Street not a single accident has occurred on the crossing.

ADVISE KING TO FIRE HUNS OUT

LONDON, July 27.—The expected decision of the government to deprive the Duke of Cumberland, the Duke of Albany and Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein of their British titles and orders was made known to-day.

They are the three remaining Germans who hold British titles of nobility, the Duke of Albany and the Duke of Cumberland being remotely in the line of succession to the British throne.

King George has been advised, Premier Asquith said in the House of Commons at to-day's session, to take the necessary steps to meet the wishes of the House in this respect.

CANADA GETS FISH TRADE

Third of North Pacific Catch Shipped on G. T. R.

OTTAWA, July 27.—The Government has been informed of the failure of the attempt of certain fishing interests of the far western states to stop the diversion to Canada of the North Pacific halibut trade. Since the establishment of Prince Rupert as the western terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway fully a third of the huge halibut catch has passed through Canada in bond to the middle and eastern states. Seattle fishing interests formerly controlling this trade sought to recover it by means of legislation at Washington prohibiting bonding except from one American point to another. The bill has been rejected by Congress.

THOUSANDS SWALLOWED IN WESTERN CONFLICT

Real Significance of The Battle of Somme as Viewed by German Correspondents — "The Strong, Tough, Widly Courageous Soldiers of Britain Are Certainly Able to Stand up to Their Opponents"

BERLIN, July 28.—(Special.) —The Vossische Zeitung prints the following despatch from its correspondent, Max Osborne, from Cambrai, France:

"The fearful battle which has now raged three weeks signifies more than the fact that it is the greatest attempt yet undertaken by the western enemies, with unprecedented force, to push back the German army from the occupied provinces of Northern France.

"In a historical sense it embodies the measuring by the army leaders of the countries of all their forces in a decisive land battle.

"For the first time at the end of two years of the war appears the real significance of the great world struggle—namely, England and Germany engaged in a tremendous duel. Everything that has taken place hitherto between the two peoples appear now a mere prologue. The duel has bebun, and day by day it swallows the lives of tens of thousands.

"I saw a number of English prisoners, and these men understand what it means for our regiments to hold out against a storm of attacks by such They are strong, tough, wildly courageous and stern fellows ,certainly able to stand up to their opponents."

Orange Grand Lodge Takes up Bilingualism

Considers Issue a National One — Blames British Government for Irish Rebellion—6,742 Toronto Orangemen With The Colors

TORONTO, July 28.—Special—Bilingualism is not to be handled timorously by the Orangemen of Canada now in conference at Victoria Hall. Grand Master D. D. Ellis, M. D., of Fleming, Saskatchewan, made plain the attitude of the Grand Orange Lodge upon the subject in the course of his address at the opening of the convention yesterday.

Grand Secretary William Lee presented his annual report, which showed that forty-one new Primary Lodges, two District Lodges, twelve Royal Scarlet Chapters, eighteen lodges of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association and two Orange Young Briton lodges have been organized since last report. Four lodges have taken out incorporation warrants, and seven warrants that have either been lost, burned or defaced were removed, and the warrants of eight lodges reported dormant for a period exceeding three monhts, were dissolved by the M. W. Grand Master in accordance with clause 97 of the constitution.

Returns from various Provinces give the following figures:

Recapitulation—Initiated, 8, 8,812; joined by certificates, 2,738; reinstated, 1,979; died, 1,107; value of real estate, $1,587,989; value of other lodge property, $319,612.40; insurance, $747,470.

Toronto lodges have contributed a fighting force of 6,742 men to the Canadian overseas army, out of a membership of ten thousand. This number would provide almost the full strength of six infantry battalions.

At the annual luncheon of the Legislation Committee in the Queen's Hotel yesterday there were thirty-one members, every one of whom had sons or near relatives in khaki. The oldest member at the table was Sir Mackenzie Bowell, aged ninety-four years, and the youngest was Captain Kidd of Brockville, who has been twice at the front and is returning in a few days after recovering from wounds.

The Grand Treasurer's report showed satisfactory financial conditions with a surplus of revenue over expenditure of $5,983.49.

After a discussion on the Orange Britons' Association the convention decided to take steps to bring this young peoples' organization under direct control of the Grand Lodge. The O. B. A. has made rapid progress recently under the Grand Mastership of Captain Kidd.

During the afternoon the delegates were taken on an auto tour of the city. In the evening many of the delegates and their wives and lady friends spent a pleasant time at Scarborough Beach.

The convention will continue in session to-day, when the Grand Master's address will be discussed and certain important resolutions will be submitted dealing with vital questions raised.

Music hath charms, but it isn't the song birds that make the best potpies.

ENEMY AIRSHIP BROUGHT DOWN

Bombs Dropped on Railway Lines, and on The Station at Chauny—Attacks Repulsed

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, July 28.—(Afternoon statement.)—To the north of Chaulnes the enemy attempt on the trench near Lipons was repulsed by riflefire. In Auberive region in the Champagne a Russian reconnaince penetrated a hostile trench, which was cleared with grenades, the Russians bringing back some prisoners. On the right bank of the Meuse, (Verdun front), a German attack which was about to debouch upon our position were of Thiaumont work, was completely stopped by artillery fire. The night was calm on the rest of the front.

At various points on the front, four enemy eroplanes were brought down. On Wednesday night,our air squadrons dropped heavy bombs on railway lines north of Tergnier, on the station of Chauny, and on convoys in the neighborhood of Coucy. Aerial bombardments were also carried out on military establishments at Menne, Tavannes and Caurel.

CAPT. FRYATT SHOT BY HUNS

Head Officer of Steamer Brussels Court Martialed and Sentenced to Death

Canadian Press Special

BERLIN, July 28.—(By wireless.)—Captain Charles Fryatt, of the British channel steamer Brussels, which was captured and taken into Zeebrugge on June 24th, was court-martialled and shot at Bruges yesterday for "A Franc Fireur crime against Armed German sea forces."

Testimony showed that on March 28, 1915, Capt. Fryatt, when summoned by submarine U-33 to stop, instead of doing so turned at high speed and attempted to ram her.

Capt. Fryatt and first officer and first engineer of the Brussels were mentioned in the House of Commons and received gold watches for bravery. An official statement of the court-martial says Capt. Fryatt admitted he had followed instructions of the British Admiralty.

EAST AFRICAN CONDITIONS FAVORABLE TO BRITISH FORCES

LONDON, July 28.—(Special.) —The following official statement on the progress of the British campaign in German East Africa, was given out last night:

"Brig.-Gen. Northey reports that on July 24 he drove the main German southern detachment of the enemy from strongly organized positions astride the Neu Langenburg-Irangi-road at Malangali. After counter-attacks the enemy retired hurriedly in the direction of Irangi, abandoning a 4.1-inch howitzer and two machine guns.

"Among a number of German Europeans captured previously was Dr. Stir, late governor of the Neu Langenburg district. Dr. Stir has since died of wounds. A majority of the survivors of the crew of the German cruiser Koenigsberg form a part of the German forces in this area."

British Stop Her Yacht

Mrs. Stoker Finds Close Watch Kept For Deutschland

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., July 27.—Held up three times by British war craft awaiting the return dash of the German submarine Deutschland, the California, the palatial steam yacht owned by Mrs. Clara Baldwin Stocker, daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin, finished an eventful journey from the Pacific Coast here last night. She was guided safely over the treacherous inlet shoals by a tiny lifeboat which several times was nearly capsized by the heavy seas.

The yacht made the passage from San Francisco by way of the Panama Canal and lay over once in the Gulf of Mexico because of a dangerous fire, which threatened to cut the entire ship. She was overhauled thrice down the coast by allied warships lying outside the three-mile limit awaiting the sea dash of the German submersible. Each time the Captain on the California was able to satisfy the boarding parties of his nationality and was permitted to continue.

PUBLIC WON'T SEE EXECUTION OF CASEMENT

LONDON, July 28.—The London News Agency says that a public execution of Roger Casement is highly improbable and that, failing special instructions from the Government, arrangements to hold it in privacy at the Pentonville Prison August 3 will be proceeded with.

In any case, the news agency says, a public execution would probably mean that reporters only would be admitted as representing the general public.

According to some authorities, executions for crimes except those of murder must be public.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK THEN COMES THE TUG OF WAR

Two interesting cases nave just been disposed of by His Honor Judge Deroche at the County Judges Criminal Court. The facts were as follows:—On or about the 1st of February of this year, one Nicholas Lemper, a Greek, who had been working for Bill Coros, a Greek of Peterborough, and a cousin of his, for five years, was induced to buy the cafe on the east side of Front Street, Belleville, called the Boston Cafe for $1440.00, Coros representing he had been offered $1700.00 for the cafe. Mr. Lemper had a claim against Coros for $600.00 wages, and Coros sold him the business, taking credit for the $600.00, and took a chattel mortgage back on it for $840 with a covenant in the mortgage that he was to keep the chattels up to the value of $840.00. Besides the plant, furniture, etc., there were certain groceries and food used in connection with the business for which Lemper paid Coros $33.20. Lemper started the 1st of Feb., and continued business until the 4th of May, doing a good lucrative business as the 80th Battalion was then quartered in the city. Lemper claimed as an inducement to get him to buy the business, Coros represented he would not open the candy store he had on the same street on Sunday and serve meals; and after Lemper had purchased the Ideal Cafe, he claimed that Douros, a cousin of Coros, who was manager of the candy store for Bill Coros, opened up the candy store for meals on Sundays, and cut in on his trade. Mr. Lemper had paid $70.00 additional cash on the purchase price without ever having had access to them, and when the dispute arose over the giving of meals at the other cafe, he wished a copy of the paeprs and agreement, so he could submit them to some one who could read them, as he could not read English, and had not had possession of nor had anyone read over the bill of sale or the chattel mortgage to him. He instructed his solicitors, Messrs. O'Flynn, Diamond & O'Flynn, to write to Mr. Gordon of Peterborough, who was the solicitor who prepared the papers for the documents, and complaining they were opening the other cafe contrary to their arrangemen. While the parties were corresponding about it Coros issued a warrant, seized the property and took possession of the same, putting Lemper out of business. Prior to the transaction set forth, one Nicholas Gavas had been working for Douros in the Ideal Cafe, afterwards called the Boston Cafe, and had been discharged, and Nicholas Gavas had been instructed that Coros was slandering him. He caused a letter to be written to Coros and Douros, asking for an apology and discontinuance of the slander in which he claimed Douros had called Gavas a thief, and accused him of stealing, whereupon Coros and Douros issued a warrant against each of the two men, accusing Lemper of stealing goods from the store which he owned, and upon which ther was a chattel mortgage, and accusing Gavas of receiving the goods. The parties were arrested on Saturday evening at a time when they were the busiest in their occupation, and when it would be most difficult to get bail; locked up, but obtained bail, although strangers, and the prosecution was held over their heads since the 13th of May, although efforts were made to bring the matter to trial it was not completed until Tuesday the 25th of July. The case against Nicholas Lemper was tried before the court, witnesses carefully eamined, and the action dismissed, as there was no evidence whatever of Nicholas Lemper having committed the act complaned of. The action against Gavas was also dismissed, as no evidence was offered connecting him with the matter. Both of these men who are Greek, hove carried on a successful business in the city, have been careful and painstaking in their efforts, and have felt keenly the annoyance and injury they have sustained by the action of the complainants. It was learned from the evidence at the trial that since seizure of the cafe in question, Douros, agent for Coros, had sold it for $1000.00, although the balance due Coros was only $770.00 with some interest. It was also shown at the trial that when Lemper took possession there was only $33.00 worth of groceries and food supplies on hand, and when he left there was $54.80 worth on hand. It was shown that all of the fixtures there, were still on hand, and that Mr. Lemper had expended $61.20 additional for an electric fan, repairs, meat machine and other improvements. There was some dispute about the knives and forks, that some were missing, but this was not in any way connected with Mr. Lemper, and may have been the usual shortage by losses in a cafe, and the total amount of such shortage was much less than the improvements which had been added by Lemper to the premises. Messrs. Lemper and Gavas, while considerably worried by the legal procedure to which they were strangers, feel pleased that they have been justified, and that they have been acquitted. No evidence was produced against either of them, but the complainants endeavored, by general evidence, to try and make a case against Mr. Nicholas Lemper, and failed. The prosecution was ably conducted by Mr. W. Carnew, County Crown Attorney, and the prisoners were defended by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn of O'Flynn, Diamond & O'Flynn. Mr. Lemper, who is a cousin of both Coros and Douros, whom he had trusted implicitly in all his matters, contends they have taken advantage of his trust and feels keenly the injury, annoyance and trouble they have brought upon him.

Another Story of Serbia's Fate

BERLIN, July 28.—(Special)—Roumania may join the Entente against Germany. It is possible, but, I believe, improbable. The thing hangs to-day in the balance.

The determining fact will be the military events of the next fortnight. During the past three weeks these have been unsatisfactory from the Austro-German points of view.

Should Roumania decide to throw in her destinies with the Eentente it would be another story of Serbia — sharp, quick work.

General Lee Passes Away

One of The Few Canadians Who Rose to High Rank in The United States Army

TORONTO, July 28—Special— The death occurred yesterday at his summer home, "Hague," on Lake George, of Major-General J. G. C. Lee, in his eightieth year. General Lee was one of the few Canadians who had risen to high rang in the army of the United States. He was born in Saltfleet township, Wentworth, and when eighteen years of age joined the army of the Union on the outbreak of the Civil War. He was shortly after promoted to the office of Assistant Quartermaster, and rose step by step almost to the head of the service. As Col. Lee he was for a number of years head of the Military School in Chicago, and during the Spanish-American War he laid out and took charge of the Chickamauga Camp. When he retired a number of years ago he bore the rank of Brigadier-General.

General Lee made his winter home at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, and spent the summer on the shores of Lake George.

He was the last surviving son of Samuel and Alma Lee of Saltfleet, and had many relatives in Hamilton, Toronto and the surrounding districts. Mr George M. Lee of Osgoode Hall, who was notified of General Lee's death, is a nephew. General Lee was a graduate of Victoria University, and a number of years ago was the guest of the University at a reunion of the Alumni. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity of the 33rd degree, and of the Anglican Church.

FORMER GERMAN SHIP FLIES ITALIAN FLAG

MONTREAL, uly 27.—With the Italian flags flying aft the steamer "Axenfels," formerly a German liner, came into port this morning. There were no Huns on board. Those who were on the steamer when she was captured in an Italian port, when the war broke out, are now dreaming of the Fatherland in some secure place. The steamer is commanded by Capt. T. Bosia of Genoa, and most of the crew hail from sunny Italy. The vessel came in light. The captain and officers say that there are now plenty of sailors, either for merchant ships or the navy, to be had in Italy. Along the coast the male citizens are all fishermen and since the Huns took to strewing the seas with mines the fishing has to a great extent been abandoned, and the fishermen who are the very best of sailors, have offered their services to the shipping companies and the navy.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PERCY T. JONES

The following letter has been handed into The Intelligencer Office for publication. The tone is pitiable, and we feel assured that any favor extended the writer will bring him cheer and be fully appreciated:

Abt Kaisin Augusta,
Schull, Coln, June 23rd.

Dear Friend.—I hope you got my letter. I have been here since the 3rd of June. I have been very ill. I have two wounds on my face and one on my neck. The people who wait on me do all they can to relieve the pain. Do send me a box with a home-made cake. I could do with a box every week. I hope this will find you and your mother well. Kind regards to all my friends. I thank God I am alive; a lot of my chums are gone.

Yours truly,
Percy T. Jones.

FROM JOSEPH ELSMORE

June 30th, 1916.

Mr. Oliver Wardaugh,
Belleville, Ont.

My Dear Friend—It is with much pleasure that I take this opportunity of writing a few lines to you, hoping that you all are enjoying good health. I am pleased to say that at this time I am fine, and feeling in the best of condition. We left Belleville, as you will remember, on May 13, and after a very pleasant time on train and boat arrived at Borden, in the south of England, on May 31st. To tell you everything that took place on the trip would occupy a large amount of time. Suffice it to say it was one that the men of the 80th and several other units besides, will ever remember. We are training very hard every day, so as to make ourselves fit for the time when we shall be required to occupy the firing line, and I feel that when this time does arrive, that I more than ever will do my best to bring glory and honor to the Empire I belong to, and the flag we so much admire, and which means so much for us—freedom and liberty.

I had a letter a few days ago from the lady who is looking after the children, and she tells me that they are doing fine. I am glad of this you may be sure, but I shall be delighted and grateful too, if (while I am away) you will try and see them, so that I may be quite sure that they are faring all right. Every day and very often during the day I am thinking of my little ones, and believe me, if it were possible to return at once I should do so and be in Belleville at the earliest opportunity. But as that time has not yet arrived I must be content to do my duty manfully, cheerfully, hopefully, so that when it is over and I return (please God) I shall have no regrets, but shall be able to remember having done my bit with satisfaction to myself, my King and country, and when my little ones are old enough to understand, they will be able to see the sacrifice that their father made was in their interests as well as anything else, for you will admit that were we to be overcome and conquered by the enemy, that life under their way of ruling would not be very pleasant. Therefore the need for true Britishers has been shown, and that very much, as I have found out since my arrival in England.

I am sending two memoriums; one for you, and one for you daughter. It will be twelve months on the 11th of July since Mrs. Elsmore died. How much I miss her and how much the children miss her no one knows, but I am hoping that they are being looked after well, then I shall not have need to worry so much.

You will be surprised to hear that after a short time in England the 80th Battalion has been broken up, and sent to the 74th and 75th Regiments. However, the Sergeants and men who were sent to the 74th, have some fine officers, and I feel sure that when the time comes for us to be present at the firing point, we shall be led by men in whom we shall have confidence.

I shall be pleased to hear from you early. Give my kind regards to Ma, Lena and her husband, and every enquiring friend, and should you see any of my little ones kiss them for me. I thank you for all your kindness to me and mine since I have known you. May God ever bless you for your expressions of sympathy and help.

Yours faithfully,
Joseph Elsmore.

Wire Tapper Tried to Die

New York Police Officer Could Not Stand Criticism and Jeers Inspired by Failure

NEW YORK, July 27.—Crazed by criticism he brought upon himself as a witness in the wire tapping proceedings, Sergeant John Kenneth, of the police wire tapping squad, tried to kill himself in the office of the bureau at 50 Church street today. He shot himself directly below the heart with his 38 calibre service revolver, and he is now at the point of death in the Volunteer Hospital. So serious was his condition last night that physicians did not attempt to remove the bullet for fear the operation would kill him.

In a statement he made to Assistant District Attorney Joyce, of the homicide bureau, he said he could not endure any longer the criticisms and jeers inspired by his failure to prove the accuracy of phonograms which were obtained by him and used as evidence in the wire tapping hearing before Justice Greenbaum in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court. But more than that, he said, he could not stand the resentment of his own co-religionists, who snubbed him because he, as a Catholic, had taken the stand as a witness against two Catholic priests.

Deputy Police Commissioner Lord and Inspector Faurot, who first reached the officers side on his removal to the hospital, found him on the verge of complete mental and physical collapse. In one breath he would insist that he told the truth on the witness stand and in the next he would speak of his children and the humiliation which he and his family had to endure.

"My head is in a whirl," he gasped. "Don't blame me. Everything I got on the wires was true. I could not help it. What will my poor wife and children do? Did you tell by brother? Cant they give me something? The pain is terrible."

When Kennell reported for duty at the wire tapping headquarters to-day his fellow officers observed that he was disconsolate. With Detectives Watson and De Gilio he listened to conversations of some gangsters whom the police are tracing by telephone until about eleven o'clock, his lunch hour. Then he got up from his seat and walked behind a glass partition which separates the wire-tapping room from the wash room. His associates heard a shot. Rushing behind the partition they found Kennell lying at the foot of the washstand, with a revolver at his side.

Kennell was asked: "How did you happen to do it?"

"I don't know, I don't remember, I can't realize it," replied the wounded man.

District Attorney Joyce asked him what he was worrying about, and he replied: "The treatment I got the other day from people prepared to criticize everything I did. Everything in these conversations is true, and nothing but the truth. There was no stranger in the room, only the men that were assigned there, aid we all made out our own papers, only I couldn't do the typewriting, and I left that to the other men, so that's all I have got to say. I couldn't sleep. I was taking messages and messages."

HAD A CLOSE CALL

Party of Girls Come Near Being Hit By a Train

KINGSTON, July 27.—A party of girls returning to the city from Barriefield camp in a taxi, about 5 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, had a close call from being struck by a train on Ontario street, owing to the carelessness of the young man who was driving. The car just made the tracks and that was all. The girls were given a bad scare, as well as a number of citizens who happened to be close by at the time, and who witnessed the affair.

PLAN SOUNDINGS OF NIAGARA WHIRLPOOL

Heavy Weight Will be Suspended From Aerocar Which Will Travel by Cable Over the Seething Water— Spanish Capital Behind Promoting Company

Of intense interest to scientific men is the series of soundings which officials of the Niagara Spanish Aerocar Company, Ltd., propose to take in the famous Whirpool Rapids of the Niagara River, from the passenger-carrying car suspended 200 feet above the water. The aerocar enterprise has been completed at a cost of $70,000 and a new thrill will be at the command of Niagara tourists. The formal opening is planned for this week.

Wild stories are told of the depth of the Whirlpool. Many contend that there is no bottom. Others estimate the depth as anywhere between 250 and 1,000 feet. There is also a theory that the Whirpool is connected with the waters of Georgian Bay through an underground passage.

Of Great Importance.

Because no boat can live in the rapids it has been impossible to contradict or verify the rumors. Now, from the vantage point of the car, engineers are planning to make a series of soundings with a weight of 500 pounds, or heavier if necessary. If they are successful in handling a sufficiently heavy weight to stem the swift current there is no reason why a perspective of the bottom of the river at the Whirlpool cannot be made. The work promises to be of great importance to science.

The areial railway, 1,800 feet in length, has been completed after more than a year of labor. It is the second cableway of its kind in the world and the only one on the continent. As an engineering feat it is unique. Over six one-inch cables of crucible steel, each with a breaking strength of between 40 and 50 tons, runs the car with a carrying capacity of 45 passengers and an operator.

To take the trip from Thompson's Point to Colt's Point is to experience a new sensation. As the car moves slowly from its landing on either side of the river one develops a great love, pathetic in its intensity, for the cables overhead. Suddenly the passenger acquires a deep interest in wire ropes, such an interest as he has rarely before found in a bit of flexible steel. He scans them carefully, but as nothing happens he turns his attention to the Whirlpool below.

The Whirlpool Below.

There is displayed a seething mass of foam-flecked water, debrisladen, such as he could not imagine from the shore. Small whirlpools, scores of them, form and disappear before him. Areas of water are sucked down out of sight, only to reappear later at a distant point, welling to the surface cold green in color with merciless precision. A huge log travels round and round the edge of the central eddy with horrible monotony. It has been there for days; perhaps for weeks, it will be there for many days more.

There is no sense of dizziness but one involuntarily shudders and clutches more firmly the guard rail. In spite of the assurance of the attendant that a fatal accident is impossible, the thought comes "What if something should be added to that restless, tossing mass?" In the midst of these dark reveries comes a slight jerk. The passenger arouses himself to find that the landing place has been reached. The four-and a half-minute journey across the whirlpool has been successfully accomplished.

Spanish Capital

The design of the cableway is based upon Spanish patents, and the enterprise was financed entirely by capitalists in Spain. The company has issued $110,000 in capital stock. The system is the invention of Torres y Quevedo, an engineer, who has gained considerable European fame in aeronautics. His son, Gonzolo Torres y Polanco, C.E., is chief engineer and vice-president of the Canadian company, Antonio Balzola is president and secretary-treasurer.

The design of the anchorages was governed largely by the stipulations that the cableway was not to cross the tracks of the Niagara Belt Line Railway, that the appearance of the cliffs on neither side of the Whirlpool must be altered and that no structures of any kind could rise above the level of the railway tracks which run on top of the cliff. The last two rulings were made by the Victoria (Niagara Falls) Park Commission which collects an annual rental increasing with the number of passengers carried, besides a minimum rental of $3,500 a year.

Little Danger of Accident.

Six supporting cables are used. Any two are sufficient to support the weight of the car and its passengers. Should one or two of the wires break there would be no accident. Every precaution has been taken to protect the passengers. Should the power fail, a gasoline engine is ready for the emergency. It can be engaged through a worm gear and sprocket wheel, and will slowly pull in the car. If the traction cable, through which is transmitted the motive power, should break during a trip the car would oscillate backwards and forwards along the track cables until it gently came to rest at the lowest point in the sag of the wires. To bring the car back to Thompson's Point in such an emergency, a relief car and a relief traction cable are available. A man would be sent out to the passengers in the relief car. After attaching the relief cable, both cars would be hauled in.

Approved by Minister.

The station at Thompson's Point is cut out of solid rock and is lined with concrete and buff tapestry brick. All work had to be done to the satisfaction of Hon F. G. Maclarmid, Minister of Public Works of Ontario.

Greatest of Its Kind

The only previous installation of this system is at San Sebastian, Spain, for transport of tourists across a gorge, from a trolley terminus to an otherwise inaccessible view-place and casino overlooking the Bay of Biscay. The span there is 919 ft. with a rise of 92 ft. It has been in successful operation for six years, carrying as many as 266,000 passengers in a single season.

The car at San Sebastian holds only 14 passengers, all standing, but the car built for Niagara provides seats for 24 passengers, and standing room, in a raised aisle in the centre of the car, for 21 more, besides the conductor. The weight of the car empty is 3½ tons, fully loaded 7 tons. It is 10 ft. 10 in. wide, 24 ft. long and 23 ft. high. It was manufactured complete in Spain and assembled here.

◆

In four years, 1912-15, 3,597,000 people have visited the Canadian National Exhibition. Yet in all that time there has not been an accident getting on or off the cars at the main entrance wher practically all the traffic is handled.

THIS IS THE 847TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

HOUSEHOLD SPECIALIZING.

Leading French men and women who are looking forward to the rehabilitation of their country when peace comes believe that the experience of the women of the nation in munitions shops and in other factories in work which ordinarily was pre-empted by men will bring about among other changes a great specializing which will do away with most if not all the drudgery that now attaches to it.

Mme. Madeline Pelletier of Paris believes a complete transformation of household operations will take place after the war.

She declares that all dirty dishes will be laid outside the kitchen door to be taken away by specialists who will bring them back properly cleaned. Darning will be done by other specialists and the family cooking will also be done by experts who will bring the meals already cooked to the homes of even people who earn but moderate incomes.

The compensation for all these specialists, it is stated, will be comparatively little from each family as the number of families served will be so great that the total amount received will make very handsome returns for the various specialists.

This transformation in the matter of household work, this specializing which the French men and women leaders predict as certain to result from the knowledge acquired of the value of co-operative effort is already taking place among American families that have had no war experiences.

More and more household work is being specialized. More and more it is being done outside the home. And when modern ingenuity adds to all the other devices something that will eliminate the dish washing, cooking and the home laundry work the average housekeeper will be ready to say that the millennium in the housekeeping line is very near. And thousands will pray, "Lord let it come quickly."

THE IRISH CRISIS.

Whatever mischief Sir Edward Carson may have been charged with by his critics in the past, his declaration on the floor of the British House of Commons regarding the present attitude of Ulster is certainly prominent among the agreeable features of last Monday's proceedings:

> "It would not be a bad day for this country, for Ireland, and for the war if Mr Redmond and myself should shake hands on the floor of this House. But if that is to be done there can be no idea of coercion of Ulster. Let Ulster be struck out of the bill. Then go and win her if you can; she can be won by good government. If the hopes of a settlement in Ulster and the rest of Ireland are shattered now, it would be a calamity.
>
> "At the end of the war we will have had enough fighting. We will have other great questions to deal with and it is inconceivable that we should resume our old quarrels."

Had John Redmond returned the manliness exemplified by the man from Ulster and grasped the extended hand, all Britain would to-day be rejoicing over the permanent settlement of a vexed question—a question made up largely of trivialities that should have no part in matters of State.

"Win Ulster by good government." What broader statesmanship could Ireland as a whole ask than Sir Edward's offer? Ulster, through its sturdy leader, does not ask the impossible, and this approach to a settlement is fair to the last degree. But in reckoning with Ireland one must look beneath the surface. There are evidences that Redmond does not wish a consummation of the Lloyd George agreement, and will tactically oppose every measure advanced.

Britain has sought to meet Ireland more than half way; the valued time of Lloyd George was thrown into the scale, and the Empire once more breathed easy in the feeling that all was well. But with his temperamental alertness Mr Redmond took offense at a supposed thrust from Lord Lansdowne, and now turmoil is rampant; the Irish caldron is seething; Redmond himself is regarded with suspicion by many of his adherents, and it may be necessary, for the present at least, to abandon the temporary arrangement.

Following his speech Sir Edward Carson exhibited the inherent traits of the true gentleman, and stepped forward with extended hand, only to be met with a face of flint and a heart of iron; the pact was declined. And there the matter rests.

In Alberta there is some difference of opinion concerning the meaning of the law with respect to intoxicating beverages in private houses. The province is without licensed bars, but a householder is allowed to have whatever he likes in stock for his own use. A citizen may not buy a glass of gin or whisky, but he can buy a bottle or a case if he is so inclined and cares to take the trouble. Of course, he must not sell the liquor, and there is where the difficulties begin. Chief of Police Cuddy, of Calgary, for example, is quoted as saying that citizens should bear in mind that the fact of having a quantity of liquor in a house is prima facie evidence that it is on sale. "If there are any signs of drunkenness, or if crowds are seen going to a house, action will be taken by the city police to see what is going on," he declares. So far so good. But the law also has it that any person who is charged with having liquor in his residence for sale is entitled to prove that the beverage is not for sale, but for private consumption. It is a question for the court to decide.

Ottawa Free Press: What better comment is required on the German publicity bureau statement that Turkish forces have been sent to help the hard-pressed Austrian armies in Galicia, than that, on the very day of its issue in America, the official announcement should be received that the Turks had been driven in disorder from Erzingan, their greatest stronghold in Armenia? It would seem as if the Turks required all their troops to try and resist the Russians, who have already invaded 140 miles into Turkish territory. But the German publicity bureau is getting hard up for optimistic bulletins.

London Times: The retirement of the Duke of Connaught from his post as Governor-General of Canada is an event which, even in these days, cannot be passed over in silence. The value of the work he has done in Canada is uncontested. His simplicity, his self-devotion, his quiet but efficient performance of duty, have won for him a memorable place in the history of the Dominion. It will not easily be forgotten how, when war broke out, he stood to the post that he had been about to leave, setting, without protestation or display of any kind, his duty above what were known to be his private inclinations.

A New York newspaper in making comparisons as to the price of gasoline has discovered that New Yorkers are paying 27 cents a gallon retail, which is dearer than in most other places. In Buffalo, for example, the price is 25, in Los Angeles 19, in Memphis 22, in New Orleans 21, in Chicago 20, and in Detroit 19. Perhaps one of the reasons why the oil is dearest in New York is the willingness of the purchasers, who are many, to pay what is asked without complaint, which is apparently the case with consumers in Belleville, where it ranges all the way from 30 to 35, according to the desire of the dealer to get rich quick.

Current Comment

It is announced from Toronto that the bars in Ontario after September 16 will be permitted to do business all night. We have visions of a lot of fellows sitting up all night for a lemonade stew.—Ottawa Free Press.

The high contempt of public men and political candidates for the newspapers is well illustrated in the Associated Press account of Mr Hughes's visit to New York. "He went directly to his hotel," reads the Chronicle, "and after orderin copiesg of all the morning newspapers, retired to his room."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

We are told that Mr E. L. Phillips, the millionaire governor of Wisconsin, recently spent two days in the State prison trying to study the matter at close range. Pretty good way of getting at the facts. If people had tried this plan long ago our jails would have been transformed long before this.

Sir Edward Carson is playing a patriot part in accepting an agreement—disagreeable enough to his own people—but apparently the only agreement securable at this time. He has shown from the first an over-mastering determination to win the war at all costs. This is the spirit which will command the respect and gratitude of the Empire, and will serve to win the war.—Montreal Star.

Dr Chas. W. Eliot has put forth the following as a fair estimate of what the United States spends each year in luxuries. Tobacco, $1,200,000,000; jewellery and plate, $800,000,000; confectionery, $200,000,000; tea and coffee, $100,000,000; chewing gum, $13,000,000; and intoxicating liquors, $2,200,000,000; or a total of $4,513,000,000 on things which in no case are necessities and in some cases are positively hurtful. We pay high for our follies, and we pay more in character than we do in dollars.

What Is Uric Acid?

THE CAUSE OF BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL AND SUDDEN DEATH.

Ever since the discovery of uric acid in the blood by Scheele, in 1775, and the bad effect it had upon the body, scientists and physicians have striven to rid the tissues and the blood of this poison. Because of its over-abundance in the system it causes backache, pains here and there, rheumatism, gout, gravel, neuralgia and sciatica. It was Dr. Pierce who discovered a new agent, called "Anuric," which will throw out and completely eradicate this uric acid from the system. "Anuric" has proved to be 37 times more potent than lithia, and consequently you need no longer fear muscular or articular rheumatism or gout, or many other diseases which are dependent on an accumulation of uric acid within the body. Send to Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a pamphlet on "Anuric," or send 10 cents for a trial package of "Anuric Tablets."

If you feel that tired, worn-out feeling, backache, neuralgia, or if your sleep is disturbed by too frequent urination, go to your best drug store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. They are put up in 50-cent packages.

Doctor Pierce's reputation is back of this medicine and you know that his "Golden Medical Discovery" for the blood and his "Favorite Prescription" for the ills of women have had a splendid reputation for the past fifty years.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. One tiny Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

GREAT DAYS

Vanish, every idle thought!
Perish, last of Folly's ways
All that pride of eye hath sought,
All that rebel flesh hath wrought,
Utterly reduced to naught,
How can ye outlive these days?

Henceforth never be it said
Ye with us still lingered on
When an ocean dyed blood-red
Bade you finally be gone—
Hence for aye from heart and head,
Hence from house and board and bed,
Stript and disinherited,
Be ye no more thought upon!

Since that drenching stormclap drave
To the ground your petty dust,
And the wasteful roving wave
Whelmed our foremost man of trust,
In its dark ungardened grave
Lost, with those five thousand brave
Who their island home to save
Took all odds, because they must.

Vanish, every puny thought!
Perish, last of Frailty's ways!
Ne'er a nobler fight was fought,
Ne'er a truer spirit wrought;
Though the seas with death be fraught,
Giant hearts shall rule these days.

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER X.—Continued

"If I am right in my estimation of him," Nick went on grimly, "his present situation can be the result of only one thing—a conspiracy. And I'm going to get after the men who, in view of all the circumstances, are most likely to have conspired against him—Andrew Todd and the gang with him in United Transit."

"They are a crowd not easily downed," Chick remarked, with a significant headshake.

"I know that, Chick," was the reply. "They have brains, money, and influence, and are as bold as buccaneers. Todd thinks that he has pull enough at the district attorney's office to choke off any prosecution for any ordinary offense, and I know that he and most of his gang are far from scrupulous."

"Things seem to be coming their way just now, all right."

"Apparently," corrected Nick, with brows knitting. "United Transit will soar to-morrow. It will advance with leaps and bounds, in all probability—but wait till I get in my work."

"Something doing, eh?"

"You bet there'll be something doing. Wait till the smash comes when, with Fenno's help, I get after those fellows. I'll see, then, what they'll do. I'll put them where, of necessity, they must make as desperate moves as I supect them of having already made. I'll set a ball rolling to-morrow, Chick, that will rattle Wall Stret and crush somebody before it stops. Take my word for that."

CHAPTER XI.
Paving The Way.

Having seen Chick and Patsy start out on the work assigned them, Nick Carter's first move on the morning following Judge Packard's murder was to visit the headquarters of the United Transit Company, which consisted of elaborate offices in Broad Street, within a stone's throw of the Stock Exchange.

Nick found the adjoining corridor thronged with men interested in the stock of the company, some legitimate investors, many only speculators in the market, but all anxious to learn what the probable effect of Judge Packard's murder would be, so quickly following his judgment in favor of the company.

There seemed to be no dissenting voice, however, in the comments which reached Nick's ears. What signified the death of the jurist, now that his decision had been announced? It would have been a calamity, indeed, if the order of things had been reversed!

What mattered it that he was now dead, that his murder was a probable result of his decision, that the community was shocked, the press censorious, and the police up in arms? What cared the company for any of this? Judgment had been rendered. It was certain that it could not be reversed, and that in court, in view of the theft of certain documents and records on which the judgment had been based, would set it aside.

Nick Carter thought he could see the hole in the wall, the rat in the meal; for in Wall Street wealth and power run in double harness, and, too frequently, plunge roughshod over anything that gets in their way.

Buy! Buy! Buy!

This was the advice handed out from the company's office in regard to United Transit stock.

This was the tip that went from mouth to mouth, as the speculators rushed to act upon it. Wall Street and Broad Street were alive with excited men at half-past nine that morning. The offices of brokers and bankers were thronged to their doors. Men on the long side were crazy to buy more before the expected rise. That there would be a mad scramble for the stock from the moment the market opened was obvious to the veriest novice.

"Somebody's going to get hurt," was Nick Carter's mental comment, as he made his way through the crowded corridor and entered the general office of the company.

He had hardly crossed the threshold when he was discovered by Andrew Todd, who rushed out of an inclosed part of the office and hurriedly dragged him into a directors room near by, in which several men were gathered around a large leather-covered table.

"You're the very man I want to see, Mr. Carter," he said, as he drew Nick into the room and closed the door.

"It's lucky I came in, then," said Nick. "I thought I'd drop round and see if you had received any information about those stolen papers, or concerning Allen."

"Not a word, Mr. Carter. Have you?"

"Not yet."

"Why did you think I may have heard?" Todd demanded, with a searching glance at the detective's placid face.

"Only because the rascal who did that job, if hoping to get money by returning the papers, might have communicated directly with you," Nick evasively explained, thus covering the true motive for his visit.

He wanted to see who was there this morning, and, as a matter of fact, what was going on in this office. Looking over the half dozen men seated around the table, he recognized only three. These were Martin McNulty and the junior partner of the firm, one Peter Coyle, and President Atkins, of the Ironclad National Bank, of which Todd was one of the most influential directors.

Two of the others, Nick afterward learned, were officials of the same bank, while the last of the number was a representative from Damon, Dale & Smith, the brokerage firm through which Todd operated openly in the market. There were many other concerns who handled a part of his business, however, when he wanted it done secretly.

"Well, he might do that, I'll admit," he replied, in answer to Nick's explanation. "But I have heard nothing—not a word. The loss of the papers and the disappearance of Allen, moreover, have been completely overshadowed by the murder of Judge Packard. You know all about it, of course."

"I know only what the newspapers state," said Nick. "I've had no time to look into the details of the case. I see that Percival Fenno has been arrested."

"Arrested? I should hope so!" cried Todd. "He's as good as tried and convicted. It's about what might be expected of such infernal upstarts, plungers who meet with temporary success in the market, and then lose their heads and want to run things. Failure always turns them dafy. He couldn't take his medicine like a man. It's just as I said yesterday, Mr. Carter, and this crime of his proves it."

"What was that, Mr. Todd?"

"He was out to nail something which he thought was in our favor, and the destruction of which would cause Packard to render an adverse decision. When it came in our favor, however, it was more than Fenno could stand. He lost his head and fell back on the satisfaction too often sought by a madman—that of revenge."

"You think there's no doubt of his guilt, eh?" queried Nick blandly.

"Not the slightest."

"You may be right."

"I know I'm right," Todd flatly declared. "But what I would like to know, Mr. Carter, is this: Who the devil is Detective Mouser, of the Central Office? I've phoned over there, and can get no information."

"Mouser?" returned Nick inquiringly, with brows lifting.

"Yes, Mouser."

"I never heard of him."

"There, what did I tell you, Todd? He's not known there. It's cursed strange that some unknown man can have put up such a front as——"

The interruption came from McNulty, in his bulldog fashion; but Todd checked him as quickly as possible, and hastened to change the subject by introducing Nick to the several men. He shook hands with each of them, wondering on which manacles properly belonged, but the smile with which he responded to their greeting was too subtle to betray the nature of his thoughts.

A ticker on a stand in one corner began clicking noisily, and Todd glanced quickly at a clock on the wall.

"The market will open in ten minutes," he said, rubbing his hands and reverting to Nick. "I'll give you a tip, Mr. Carter."

"What's that, Mr. Todd?"

"Buy United Transit—all you can carry. Put up every dollar you've got, all you can beg, borrow, or steal, and you'll double your money before three o'clock to-day. Take my word for that."

"Excuse me," said Nick, with a dry laugh. "I never gamble in stocks."

"But this isn't a gamble, Mr. Carter."

"What is it, then?"

"It's a sure thing."

"A sure thing, eh?"

"As sure as death and taxes," Todd cried confidently. "There's no risk. United Transit is obliged to bound upward. We're plunging on it to the limit. It closed at twenty-eight yesterday. Mark me, Carter. I'll close it to-day up fifty points, as sure as you're sitting on the corner of this table."

"Suppose you slip up?" smiled Nick inquiringly.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean, Mr. Todd, suppose you succeed in lifting it to seventy-eight, and it then fails to hold," said Nick. "You'll get awfully long of the stock in carrying it to that figure. Can you peg it here and absorb all offerings at that price? You take a tip from me, Mr. Todd, and don't bite off more than you can chew."

Blotted Out "Lord Penn."

The first book of any kind published in Philadelphia was Atkin's Almanack for the year 1686. It was an unpaged pamphlet of ten leaves, only two copies of which are now known to be in existence. The first copy of the Almanack printed was sent to Colonel Markham, Penn's deputy, who reported to the council that the book had erroneously declared Pennsylvania to have been founded by "Lord Penn." The council disapproved such a high sounding title and directed the author and printer (William Bradford) to "forthwith and effectually blott out ye words 'Lord Penn.'" This had the effect of recalling the whole edition and the abolition of the obnoxious words.

Homely Philosophy.

Don't build your house on the site of Tribulation Town and then growl when the hurricane sweeps it away.

The minute we think we're overstocked with wisdom it's high time to ask the good Lord to give us some.

When we hang out the trouble sign that's the time all the little troubles locate us and crowd in to give us all that's coming to us.

No Oratorio.

A young bookkeeper attended a pupils' recital in greater Boston and was questioned next day by a musician as to the program. "Good music, eh?" "Oh, yes; fine!" "Popular stuff or classical?" "Oh, all classics." "Any oratorio?" "Oh, no; no oratorio, all music."

Discretion.

Though a man has all other perfections and wants discretion, he will be of no great consequence in the world, but if he has this single talent in perfection and but a common share of others he may do what he pleases in his particular station of life.—Addison.

JUST BLOUSES.

Latest Notes About This Pet Hobby of All Women.

This is the season for blouses. They are needed for a multitude of reasons.

The one piece frock has not vanished into the warm summer air because the separate blouse has come into fashion again. It appears to be necessary to have both even in the average wardrobe. There is always a struggle in the mind of the woman who is not plentifully endowed with clothes money as to how she should choose between a suit and a one piece frock for constant service, and probably the married man put it correctly for all women when he said that his wife brought the subject up to him semiannually every day for a fortnight, invariably decided in the end according to her own desires and was dissatisfied about her choice, no matter what it was, for the rest of the season.

One of the advantages of blouse buying is that the average woman can get half a dozen to suit her different needs and moods. This season they are unrolled before her like a brilliant, never ending carpet. The design and the color constantly change. They have reached a degree of variety and gayety that has not been touched in several seasons.

Fine colored muslins, solid and striped, are in the forefront of fashion, and white and colored organdies, which have been so extensively used for neckwear, have been cordially taken up by the makers of blouses.

The plain white organdie waists are embroidered with one or more colors, sometimes in the simple and ever pleasing design of scallops, again in polka dots and triangles of brilliant red and blue, green, black and yellow.

Because polka dot frocks are in fashion we will be able to wear separate blouses of polka dot fabrics with the pleased feeling that we are quite in the middle of the picture. Taffeta and satin are not looked upon with any degree of warmth, but taffeta is applied to chiffon and then embroidered in gold and silver to build up an ornate blouse.

Every one knows by this time that the smartest of French blouses drops over the skirt instead of going under it after the manner of a miniature Russian blouse. Cheruit sent this out in white organdie, with a sash of colored silk, and it has led the way for a dozen other conceptions by our own dressmakers.

NOVELTY VEIL.

Another Interesting Accessory That Comes "by the Yard."

With a close turban, flower wreathed, is worn a flyaway veil that may be as long as preferred, since it comes, all striped and gay with favorite spring colors, by the yard. Draped horizontally, the effect is picturesque.

Attractive Chains.

The new bead necklaces show combinations of jade and jet, coral and jet or jade, pearls and jet, with imitation pierced gold or silver filigree beads used at effective intervals for ornamentation. One chain, in which jade is used most attractively, has the pierced gold beads, with antique finish, and a piece of Chinese money used as a pendant.

The Beauty of Order.

A resourceful mother, remembering the latent love of beauty that lurks in the heart of every child, drew on it heavily when the time came when she was compelled to instill a love of order in her little girl's heart.

An old cottage set had been carefully enameled in a soft shade of cream, and dainty blue scalloped covers were made for the bureau and the low chest of drawers. Against a pale blue wall paper with a narrow cut out border of old fashioned pink roses the contrast was delightful.

The two top drawers of the bureau were divided into three compartments, each by means of heavy cardboard, and in these sections gloves, handkerchiefs, collars, ribbons, belts, and stockings were neatly arranged. There was no possible excuse for cluttering up things, and Betty exclaimed over the skillful arrangement.

The lower drawers and the drawers of the chest were filled with underwear. The closet cupboard was fitted with two rows of hooks. On the upper row hung Betty's stiffly starched linen frocks, each on a separate hanger to avoid mussing. Below, where the little girl could reach them herself, hung her gingham school dresses and her bathrobe. On the door was a well made shoe bag, and in a corner her father had put up a little shelf to hold her best hat, carefully wrapped in a gay cretonne cover.

On the bedroom floor a simple rag rug in rose and white lent a warm note of color to the dainty room, and two low wicker chairs and Betty's little white desk stood in the corner by the window.

With such a well planned "place for everything," Betty learned instinctively what years of insistence would not have taught her—the perfect beauty of order.

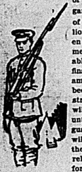
MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

SPECIAL SERVICE BATTALION



The "Special Service Battalion" organized at Barriefield camp is proving to be one of the best institutions of its kind ever organized. The lines of the 109th Battalion have been taken over and all the men who were not able to pass the final medical examination have been taken on its strength. They will be given drill until experts in guard work, and will take over these duties, thus relieving soldiers for the front.

This Special Service Battalion is in the nature of a base unit that has a varying strength. At present there are about ninety men on its rolls, but a fe wof these are being discharged.

With such strenuous recruiting campaigns being carried on through the country during the past fall and winter, hundreds of men were taken on, and afterwards had to be rejected through slight physical defects. In cases where these men are over age they have to be either discharged or used in home service work in Canada. The S. S. Battalion at the camp has some five or six men on its rolls that have sacrificed two, three and four sons to the service of the Empire. Their true British hearts will not let them sit idle, and they have offered themselves for the defence of the front line trenches. Some have been taken on even though far past the age limit, and the secret of their ages having now got out the yhave been rejected for overseas. Still persistent in helping the cause they have volunteered to do anything that was possible for them to do, and allow others to go forward. Men of this class have been taken on the strength of the S. S. Battalion, when discharged from other units about to go overseas.

The thousands of cases where boys under eighteen years of age have enlisted for overseas are taken care of by organiaztion of this kind. Instead of sending them home they are kept on. They are valuable for guard duty and if not too young may still have a chance at the Huns.

The medically unfit men who have been the cause of such an amount of unpleasant publicity since the war broke out, are in this unit. Through no fault of theirs they are unable to go overseas. Having once passed the doctor's examination they have been drilling honestly and faithfully, confidently hoping that they would go to the front with their unit. A final and more strict medical examination unearthed their unfitness, and instead of being discharged they have been taken on the rolls of this unit. In many cases an operation and hospital treatment will fit them again, and this matter will be attended to, so that they can go overseas at some future time.

The officers of this unique battalion are: Capt. W. J. Thorne, in command; Lieuts. A. M. Scott, D. R. Bissonett (paymaster); J. C. McQuarrie and G. H. Potts. All were with the 109th.

ROW OVER BEANS.

Because the beans served them were not to their liking, some of the members of the 156th Battalion at Barriefield Camp created at big fuss. In order to please the boys marmalade was served instead of the beans and this made things O.K. for the men in khaki.

Men who are going to fight for their King and Country believe in having everything of first class order on their bill of fare, and thus the kick was raised when the beans were not first class.

BISHOP'S COUSIN WOUNDED

Capt. Leonard Birwell, cousin of Bishop Bidwell, was reported dangerously wounded on July 8th. He subsequently underwent a serious operation, and has recovered sufficiently to be removed to a base hospital. His home is in Saskatoon, and he went overseas with the 18th Battalion.

MEN FROM CAMP BORDEN

For the past week there has been a most persistent rumor prevalent in camp and city to the effect that several thousand men are to be sent from Camp Borden to Barriefield ,and the rumor has grown to such magnitude that a Press representative asked the camp commandant if there was the remotest hope of such a rumor approaching the truth. Brig.-General Hemming replied: "If there is anything in this rumor, I know nothing whatever about it.

NOTES

Both the 155th and the 156th Battalions are practising for the ceremonial of colors presentation.

A few recruits are being secured each day at the recruiting depot in the city.

Captain Gilmore of the 155th Battalion, has returned to camp after spending a few days in Halifax.

It is published for the information of al concerned that battalion assault courses, in course of construction must be completed by Monday, the 31st inst.

Fifteen out of the 48 nurses to be mobilized here for overseas service have arrived, and are spending their time during the day at "Ongwanada" military hospital. The balance of the number required will not be here for several days yet.

The camp dentists are working at present on "B" company, of the 155th Battalion. "A" company of this battalion has been completed. The difference between the teeth of the city and country residents is brought out very clearly with these examinations. Most of the men of "A" company are from Belleville, and have their dental fixtures in good working order. The men from the northern part of the country are not so well blessed and require more attention from the Dental Corps officers.

BILLION DOLLAR CROP EXPECTED

After a thorough canvas of various points throughout Western Canada, Dr. McGill of the Dominion Grain Commission, is quoted in Calgary as saying that Alberta would have a crop as good as last year, that the Dominion would have a billion dollar grain crop and that the grain crop of the three prairie Provinces would be little if any behind that of last year.

"The country as a whole never looked better than it does at present," said Dr. McGill. "The weather was made to order as you might say, and I am of the opinion that this year's harvest will be another wonderful one."

Those who contemplate going west will do well to remember that the most fertile districts in Western Canada are served by the Lines of the C. N. R., and that this season they can travel from their home districts to destination, Canadian Northern all the way.

Arrangements have been made whereby passengers may travel in comfort, Colonist and Lunch Counter being a feature.

The first of these excursions will be run in August, the date will be announced later.

NEW YORK'S EPIDEMIC

No Sign of Decrease of Cases in Manhattan

NEW YORK, July 27.—The detailed figures for infantile paralysis, given out to-day, show that Tuesday's high record of forty-two new cases in Manhattan was duplicated today, the same number being reported in the borough.

Unsatisfactory reports also came from Queens, where twenty-five new cases were recorded. Four of these cases, Commissioner Emerson said, should have been included in the report of Tuesday, making the total on that day twenty, and twenty-one to-day. So far arranged the figures showed, Dr. Emerson said, no sharp advance in Queens, but he admitted that forty-one new cases in forty-eight hours denoted that the outbreak there, as in Manhattan, was growing, whereas in Brooklyn, the Bronx, and Richmond it was not consistently gaining.

Summing up the new cases Dr. Emerson said:

"Brooklyn has risen to its normal and Manhattan has failed to decrease, but I see no reason for fear that the epidemic has not reached its crest in Brooklyn, or that it will sweep through Manhattan. There is no indication in science that the virus of poliomyelitis gains in strength after passing through numbers of persons, so that there should be no reason for increasing virulence."

Which of these men uses the AutoStrop Safety Razor?

Take a look along the line and pick him out.
Judging from appearances they all use the AutoStrop.
It's smooth-shaving comfort brings a smile to every man's face.

In Camp, on Transport, in the Trenches a man is far from the corner store, and he needs a dependable razor, one which sharpens its own blades and doesn't go dead on his hands. The AutoStrop is more than a razor, more than a safety device. It strops, it shaves, and is cleaned without taking anything apart, without even removing the blade. And like a perfectly stropped ordinary razor, the blade improves with use.

Would you go the Front with a rifle which would play out after firing ten shots, or a pipe which would be no good after filling it a few times? Then what about your razor? Will you be forced to grow a beard because it hurts to shave, or will you take an AutoStrop with you and be perfectly independent of new blades, (because you can strop them) and thus be equipped for the entire campaign.

PREDICTS NEW BUYING

Iron Age Says Heavy Steel Orders Are Expected

NEW YORK, July 27.—Reports from various steel centres this week indicate that the manufacture of munitions is expected to consume a vast amount of mill products in the remainder of this year and in 1917. The Iron Age says:—

The week has brought a new crop of rumors of large shell orders. What is confirmed is that more than 1,000,000 shells of 8-inch and 9.2-inch sizes have been actually placed for deliveries running up to April 1, 1917. Negotiations for 6-inch to 12-inch shells in quantities respresenting heavy steel tonnages are still under way, and steel makers look for the placing of more orders soon. The slackening of 3-inch shell business here and the larger British and French output are well known, but in heavy shells this country's capacity will be called upon for a good many months.

To the firmer stand of the steel companies on contract enforcement and the large percentage of orders existing in the form of specifications has been credited the recent caution of domestic buyers as to far forward deliveries. But the new developments in export demand are now the basis of predictions of a September buying movement.

Will Follow As Spy Ship

A British Tramp Steamer Will Move at Same Time as Does The Deutschland

BALTIMORE, Md., July 27.—When the German sub-seafreighter Deutschland skims down the Patapsco for the Capes, enroute home, a big British tramp steamer, the Ardgryfe is due to follow her as a spy ship.

A watcher on the tramp boat admitted to-day that "We plan to go out when our friend over wonder does." He was reticent about his purpose though he admitted that he and his Japanese crew are keeping lookout.

"Look up our record in port," he said. That record showed only that she came in light. It didn't tell where she goes from here or whether she will dog the submarine farther than the Capes.

The Ardgryfe carries a swarm of little brown men. They watch well, and the Ardgryfe wireless can tell tales if she wishes to take a chance with the American neutrality rules and the radio inspector. Such things have happened.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia —not the ordinary crabonate, citrate, oxide or milk but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anythng and enjoy it without any dangor of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

UNGRATEFUL PRISONERS

Granted Freedom of Corridor, They Broke Jail

ST. JOHNS, Que., July 27.—No trace has yet been found of the two prisoners who escaped from the jail here some time during Tuesday night. The police and prison authorities have been scouring the countryside all day in an effort to effect their capture. The fugitives are Richard Walsh and Henry Miller, aged 16 and 20 years respectively. They were arrested last week in connection with the burglary of a butcher shop in Iberville, and had been committed for trial. Tuesday night they took advantage of having been given the liberty of the corridor outside of their cell to escape in a measure from the heat. They managed to pry a bar from a window and escaped to the yard, then scaled the wall with the aid of a plank for a ladder.

WOMAN CASHIER IN BANK

Former Stenographer Made Assistant in The National of Cuba

NEW YORK, July 27.—Evidence that woman's part in the banking business is not confined to manipulating a typewriter, was presented in news that Miss Lillian Jones had been appointed assitant cashier for the Bank of Cuba. The appointment was made in May at the time when the Bank of Cuba was organized with a State charter to take over the agency in this city of the National Bank of Cuba, but was not announced then. The parent institution in Havaa, according to its statement of June 30, has deposits amounting to $60,000,000 and assets aggregating $78,000,000.

Miss Jones is the only woman to hold so high an office in an important bank in New York. She joined the agency as a stenographer six years ago. Her appointment was suggested by J. T. Monohan, now Vice President of the Bank of Cuba, who began his Wall Street work twenty years ago as office boy for R. A. C. Smith, present Dock Commissioner, at $3 a week.

KINGSTON, July 27.—Tommy O'Neill, who starred on the 77th Battalion hockey team last season in the Ottawa City League, has decided to enlist with the Depot Ammunition Column. O'Neill was one of the most promising youngsters in the game and it was rumored that the Ottawa club intended giving him a tryout this season. Cliff Morrison, also of the 77th team is going with him. O'Neill will not leave for Kingston for a couple of weeks, business pressure forcing him to remain in the city until the early part of August. Lieut. Redmond Quain is rounding up a good bunch of Ottawa athletes for the Ammunition Column, the majority of whom will go down with O'Neill and Morrison.

LADIES TO SELL PARSON'S LOCKS

Hair of Rev. J. D. Morrow of Toronto to be Disposed of at a Church Bazaar

TORONTO, July 27.—"Tousled locks for cash." "Souvenirs of a memorable campaign."

The above sign neatly lettered can be expected at the autumn bazaar of the Ladies' Aid of Dale Presbyterian church. Real human hair will be for sale; hair upon which Toronto sun has shone and upon which Toronto rain and snow has beaten. It once adorned the head of Capt. (Rev.) J. D. Morrow, pastor of the church.

Where is it going? Rev. "J. D." does not know. He says he does not care, so long as it does not find its way into "switches" or "rats." The danger is ever present for who would not incorporate a wad of the well-known, comely strands into her coiffure rather than a mass of hair of unknown origin? However, it is more probable that the locks will be sought after as souvenirs. By postponing the sale until cooler weather the demand will be more brisk.

Capt. Morrow, after vowing that he would not wear a hat or cut his hair until he raised sufficient money for a new church, continued his bareheaded way after Dale church was built. But when he secured his appointment as chaplain with the 180th Battalion the superfluous hair had to go to make room for a cap, as provided in the militia regulations.

He is authority for the statement to the Press that he has the hair put away in a safe place now and that his consent to have it sold by the ladies at their bazaar was secured in response to their urgent request.

"How do you feel without the foliage?" he was asked.

'Cooler and younger,' replied the jovial parson.

Forced to Quit The Commons

Sergeant - at - Arms Has to Remove Nationalist — His Own Vote His Only Support

LONDON, July 27.—Laurence Ginnell, a stormy Nationalist, whose opposition to the government has grown more aggressive since the Irish insurrection last Easter and who, in questions to the cabinet ministers makes the most serious charges against the government, caused a short suspension of the sitting in the House of Commons yesterday owing to his refusal to withdraw when ordered to do so by the Speaker of the House.

Mr. Ginnell refused to budge when approached by the sergeant-at-arms, who was ordered to remove him and not until the sergeant had summoned assistance and his brother Nationalists had advised him to do so, did he obey the command of the Speaker.

The Nationalist member had asked Herbert Samuel, Secretary for Home Affairs, whether the military authorities at the time of the insurrection at Dublin had the sanction of the government for "bombarding the headquarters of the Cumannamban Nruses, cutting the Red Crosses off their dresses and imprisoning them as criminals."

The Home Secretary categorically denied all the allegations, whereupon Ginnell said: "Owing to the insolent reply of the Minister ——." He got no further, as there were loud shouts of "Order." He withdrew the word "insolent," but insisted upon it on returning the question, whereupon Speaker "named" him to the House, and in accordance with practice Premier Asquith moved that Ginnell be suspended.

Mr. Ginnell alone voted against the motion.

TOLD TO SHUN ELIGIBLES

Boycott Stores, Says Wife of Recruiting Officer

WINDSOR, July 27.—Declaring that every man physically fit for service in trenches should be in uniform, Mrs. Catherine Williams, wife of Col. Cecil G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Militia Department, told Windsor women yesterday it was their duty to shun men who were unwilling to don the khaki.

Mrs. Williams spoke under the auspices of the Emergency Corps, which is being formed in every city and town throughout the Dominion by women, who will find other women to take the places of men of military age now employed in factories, banks and stores, as soon as they enlist.

"Boycott stores where men of military age are working," advised Mrs. Williams, "and take any steps necessary to compel men to serve their country. There are young men employed in many business places who allow others to do their fighting for them so they can live a comfortable life far from harm. Refuse to have anything to do with this class of shirkers and ostracize them from your homes and hearts."

KITCHENER PLANNED A COMMERCIAL BLOW

London Post Says He Proposed Barrier Against Enemy Subjects

LONDON, July 27.—The Morning Post, in its leading editorial, urged the Government to take drastic steps immediately to prevent the Germans from gaining a foothold, commercial or otherwise, in the British Empire after the war.

The Post declares that Lord Kitchener shortly before his death devised a plan along these lines, which the paper now endorses.

"Lord Kitchener's proposal," says The Post, "was to pass a law that for 21 years no German should be allowed to naturalize himself or take up his domicile in the United Kingdom or the British Empire, or to enter into any partnership in any British business or become a shareholder in any business or become a shareholder in any British company."

The same editorial, discussing German submarine activity, says:

"The Germans some time ago pretended to desist from their submarine policy. The truth is they had no more submarines to carry on the blockade, because our navy had sunk nearly all. When the Germans build more submarines they will try again, but we have faith in the British Navy to account for anything the Germans put on the water or under the water."

SALONIKI DRIVE UNLIKELY

Enemy in no Position to Undertake Attack

ATHENS, July 27.—Following lengthy conferences between Gen. Moschopoulos, commander of the Greek forces at Saloniki and King Constantine and the Greek General Staff, the impression is general in military circles at Athens to-day that a resumption of hostilities in Macedonia between the Entente and the Central Powers is not imminent.

There are no indication that Saloniki will be attacked. The Austro-Germans have less than a brigade of troops and the Bulgars have only ten divisions on the Saloniki front, and consequently, military observers point out they are not in a position to undertake an assault on the formidable Macedonian stronghold.

ITALIAN SHIP GOT AWAY

Was Attacked by German Submarine, But Used Defensive Guns and Escaped

Canadian Press Special.

ROME, July 29.—The Red-Italia, a six thousand ton vessel of the Italian-Lloyd Sabaudo line, was attacked by a Teutonic submarine last Sunday morning while on a voyage from Genoa to New York. Defensive guns, with which the vessel is equipped, were brought into play and the submarine was driven away. The liner then proceeded to America.

A Mysterious Camp Near Brockville

Theories Are That it is German Aeroplane Base or a Miner's Quarters

BROCKVILLE, Ont., July 28.—A visitor to Brockville to-day from Westport, 45 miles distant in Leeds County, reports that considerable discussion had been aroused there over an incident which seemed to lack explantion.

About four miles from Westport at a spot where a lifty bluff overlooks Sand Lake, the cliff rising sheer and straight from the water, with a level plateau at top, some kind of camp has been discovered. Large trees have been cut down with regulation woodsmen's saws, erected with attachment suggestive of wireless telegraph installation and ground prepared in a similar fashion, and places to start and land an aeroplane. From articles found about the camp, the Westport people who visited it are of opinion that the place was fixed up for use of an aeroplane. The owner of the land claimed to know nothing of who had cut his trees down.

From another source the aeroplane story is punctured by the statement that the camp is being used by a mining man from Northern Ontario experimenting with an ore bucket. In some quarters this explanation is not acceptable and the attention of the proper authorites has been directed to the matter.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Farmer Terribly Burned in Storm at Grantley

CORNWALL, Ont., July 27.—On Thursday afternoon during a severe electrical storm, James Robertson who resides near Grantley, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Mr. Robertson left home to go to the pasture to bring the cows up for milking, and was about three hundred yards from the house when he was struck. The fluid entered the top of his head, making a hole in his cap, then passing down his breast where he was terribly burned, and down into his rubber boots the left one of which was burned and torn from his foot. The flash set fire to his clothing, but when he fell forward on his face the flames were smothered. His wife, on hearing the terrific crash looked in the direction in which her husband had gone, and saw the smoke arising from the burning clothing, but assistance was unavailing as he died instantly. Besides his wife he leaves two young children.

FAMILY OF FIVE FIGHTS

Four Brothers From Cornwall in Army, Father in Navy

CORNWALL, July 28.—F. A. Wale, of the Bell Telephone staff, Cornwall, has received a telegram from headquarters at Ottawa informing him that his brother, Gunner Henry Wale, is in hospital in Calais, having been wounded in action. The wound is in the right arm. Gunner Wale enlisted in Cornwall at the outbreak of the war and left with the first contingent. Two other brothers are at the front and another is now in training at Kingston. Their father is in the naval service, being now in charge of a fleet of trawlers in the North Sea. The family belongs to Dublin, Ireland. Gunner Wale had lived in Cornwall a couple of years before he enlisted.

IRISH SITUATION STILL HOPEFUL SAYS GEORGE

David Lloyd George Does Not Despair of an Eventual Solution of Knotty Problem — Nationalists and Ulsterites Shake Hands Instead of Fists

LONDON, July 29.—(Special.) —"I don't despair about an eventual solution of the Irish problem, in spite of the recent failure to reach an agreement between the Nationalists and the Unionists," said David Lloyd George yesterday in replying to a request from the Associated Press for his views on the breakdown of the negotiations for putting the Irish some rule act into effect immediately.

"We achieved at least one thing that had never hitherto been accepted," continued the British War Secretary. "We brought the representatives of the Irish Nationalists and the Ulster Unionists to the point of shaking hands instead of shaking fists at each other."

Full of Optimism

The Secretary for War, however, is still full of optimism regarding the Irish difficulty. In reply to a question whether the Natinalists were justified in refusing the proposed settlement, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"Never has a better offer been made by all the British parties together. The only new stipulation inserted was one concerning the British and not the Irish Parliament. The moment the demand was put forward by the Unionists that Ireland should be represented at Westminster only in proportion to her population, except when the question of the Irish settlement was under consideration, it had to be conceded."

ROOSTER CROWS DOXOLOGY

Tallest Chicken Story of Year From Rochester, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., July 28.—Vernon Green, of West Rush, owns a Plymouth Rock rooster, which he keeps in a poultry yard adjoining the Lutheran church. Thus the birds have had all kinds of opportunity of hearing church hymns and sacred music.

One morning recently he saw the Plymouth Bock rooster stretching its neck and unmistakably crowing a tune That is to say, he saw the neck and heard the tune. Mrs. Green then stated that she had noticed the bird on the previous Sunday listening as the doxology was apparently trying to imitate it.

Mr. Green, who is an accomplished violinist, got his violin and played the doxology through. Whereupon the rooster (in concealed delight) repeated it faultlessly in a lusty crow. Since then the bird has done the same thing many times and has been heard by several of the neighbors.

CLOSES SWIMMING POOLS

WINDSOR, Ont., July 29.—Special —Finding the river water in the vicinity of the Windsor civic swimming pool, at the foot of Bridge avenue, Sandwich West, highly contaminated with sewage water, Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Medical Health Officer for Ontario, ordered it closed this afternoon. Dr. McCullough also notified Dr. U. J. Durocher, Medical Health Officer for the township at Sandwich West, that in the event of the pool not being immediately closed to persons of all ages he would send an officer from Toronto to close it, the municipality to pay the costs.

Haig Holds All Longueval

Furious Battle on Five-Mile Front Bring Success

LONDON, July 29.—(Special.)—One of the most furious battles of the war, was being waged last night on the five-mile Pozieres-Longueval front, where the British and Germans have been gripped in a bloody struggle for more than a week.

The British troops are continuing to gain important ground against the most desperate resistance yet faced in any theatre. With their full weight of guns and with thousands of trained reinforcements the Germans are contesting every inch of the bloodsoaked territory.

The Germans have been completely driven from the Delville Wood, just north of Longueval, a forest-fortress behind the German third line of defence. The British won the last inch of ground in this vital position by night attack.

House Burned to The Ground

Kingston Child Set Fire Going When Playing With Matches

KINGSTON, July 28.—A boy playing with matches was the cause of a fire to-day at noon in an old frame house at 24 Johnson street, which completely gutted the building. The call was sent in to the fire stations about 12.35 and the firemen were soon on the job. Three hoses were turned into the interior of the building and after twenty minutes' work the fire was under control.

The house was occupied by Mrs. Taylor whose husband is at the front. Mrs. Taylor and her children were in the house at the time. In getting her baby from the blazing building Mrs. Taylor was scorched about the face. Very little furniture was saved.

The McGill estate owns the house and the loss on the building is covered by insurance. There was a little insurance on the furniture belonging to Mrs. Taylor. There was some damage done by the fire to the adjoining house, No. 26, occupied by Mr. Richard, and slight damage by water to No. 28, occupied by Messrs. Shea and Patrick. The occupants of these houses soon had their valuables out on the street where they were covered by the firemen with a tarpaulin.

Renovation of Emmanuel Church

Enterior Now in Splendid Condition Parsonage Also Receives Attention

During the three weeks of suspended services at Emmanuel Church, painters, frescoers and electricians have been busily engaged renovating the interior and adding such improvements as the Board deemed necessary. The church now presents a very neat apearance, with walls, ceiling, chancel and wood-work brightened, including the exterior of the main entrance, the whole lending a tone which will be most attractive to the membership. This little spiritual lighthouse is among the prosperous denominations of our city, free of debt, and progressive in every department.

Much credit is due the pastor, Rev. A. M. Hubly, who is a tireless worker, interested in all, within and without his immediate fold. To-morrow the church re-opens with a sermon by Bishop Brewing of Toronto. We might add that the work of renovation has also been extended to the parsonage, now shining within, as the result of paint and dainty wall paper, making the surroundings of Rev. and Mrs. Hubly most enjoyable. This interest manifested by the church membership is most encouraging.

COLORED BODY FOUND

CORNWALL, Ont., July 28.—The body of a colored man was found in a rush bed near Hopkins Point yesterday afternoon. Word was brought to J. R. Duquette, at Stanley Island, and Dr C. J. Hamilton, coroner of Cornwall, was notified. Mr Duquette sent Capt. Gus Haines across to the Point, and it was discovered that the body was in Quebec waters. The Ontario authorities had no jurisdiction, so the body was taken to Huntingdon, Que. A colored man was drowned while bathing near the power house, Messena, a few days ago, and it is supposed the body went down the south channel to Hopkins' Point.

TEUTONIC RESISTANCE NOW PARALYZED BY RUSSIANS

Gen. Sakharoff Takes Brody, the Key Position Before Lemberg Immense Captures Made by Kaledines — Over 9,000 Men, Two Generals and Nearly Fifty Guns Taken

LONDON, July 29—Special— Brody, the largest Galician city northwest of Lemberg, and one of the chief objectives of the Russian drive, which aims at a new invasion of the Crown land aid the capture of its capital, fell into the hands of the Russians yesterday morning.

The fall of the city was announced by the War Office last night in a brief sentence supplementary to the regular offical night report, which told of the pursuit after the Austro-Hungarians "in the direction of Brody."

Evidently with a view to preparing the public for the loss of this important city, the Vienna War Office in the night statement, after admitting that the Russians last night penetrated the Laszinoff-Brody road, added: "We are still fighting on the southern edge of Brody."

Invade Northeastern Galicia

Brody lies three and three-quarter miles from the Galician frontier. The city had been in Austrian hands since September 1, 1915, when it was captured in Field Marshal von Mackensen's great drive, which carried his troops more than thirty miles westward beyond Brody.

Simultaneously with the success at Brody, which makes the long-expected new Russian invasion of northeastern Galicia army operating farther north, to the west of the Volhynian fortress of Lutsk, broke through the whole first line of the Teutons, driving the defenders into a precipitate flight and taking 9.050 prisoners, including 50 officers, among whom are two Generals and two regimental Commanders, according to the Petrograd statement.

Fate of Garrison Unknown

The Austrian official statement is silent on this area of fighting, but summing up the situation in Volhynia says that since the middle of July the Russians have taken 31½ miles of Austrian front, "bought with incessant attacks at enormous sacrifices.'

MORE PARALYSIS AT WINDSOR SUSPECTED INFECTIONS INSPECTED

WINDSOR, July 29.—Dr J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Medical Officer of Health for Ontario, after examination of ten Windsor children suspected of being infected with infantile paralysis, declared this afternoon that the suspects were suffering from a mild type of the malady.

Two new cases were reported to Dr Cruickshank, Medical Health Officer, to-day. One in a flat above a grocery store on Wyandotte Street, and another at 35 Langlois Avenue. Both the children are under three years of age, and pronounced symptoms were evident, the children being unable to stand. Strict quarantine was ordered at once. At the meeting of the health officers of the Canadian border municipalities in the City Hall this afternoon Dr McCullough told of the best methods to cope with the outbreak.

GUARD NICKEL INDUSTRY

Ontario Government Will Give the People Fair Share

TORONTO, July 28.—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Mines, Lands and Forests, informed an influential deputation from Northern Ontario, which waited upon him to-day to urge upon the Government the advantages of North Bay as a location for a nickel refinery, that he was thoroughly in accord with the view that the refinery should be established at some point in Northern Ontario, where it legitimately belonged, and that his influence would be exerted in that direction.

The Minister declared that at the next session of the Legislature, after the report and recommendations of the nickel commission had been brought down, the Government would enact legislation, which would not only amply safeguard the nickel industry, but allow the people of Ontario to get a fair share of the profits accruing from the commercialization of Ontario's nickel ores.

He declined, however, to express himself in favor of any particular locality.

The deputation, fifty strong, was representative of boards of trade and town and township councils as far north as Cochrane, east to Mattawa, north to Sudbury and south to Burk's Falls.

Jewish People Out to Recruit First Rate Unit

Local Community Enthusiastic Over Prospect of Raising New Battalion

Members of the Jewish community in Montreal express lively satisfaction over the Order in Council which has just been issued authorizing the recruiting of a Jewish infantry regiment in Montreal, which, a prominent gentleman of that faith said last night, showed that the Government had confidence in the patriotism of the Jewish people. Capt. Isadore Friedman, who had reluctantly consented to take up the work as a result of this confidence, will now set to work with a vim and do everything possible to make this unit one of the most efficient in Canada. Quarters have been opened in the old Chalmer's Church building on St. Lawrence Boulevard, near Prince Arthur Street.

Rib Broken in Auto Mishap

J. C. Kells and Party From Millbrook in Accident

PETERBOROUGH, July 28.—Yesterday afternoon Mr J. C. Kells, of Millbrook, with Alfred Needler, Miss Lottie Vance and Miss Vance, daughter of Judge Vance, of Barrie, motored from Gore's Landing to Harwood to meet a few friends who were down on the business men's excursion. All went well until the return journey was under way when, in starting to climb a hill, something went wrong with the brakes, and they refused to respond, with the result that the car started a down-hill trip and landed in the ditch upside down.

Mr Kells had a rib broken, and Miss Lottie Vance sustained a badly cut knee. The other escaped injury and were able to return to Millbrook.

Dr T. N. Greer of Peterborough was at Gore's Landing when the accident happened and attended to the injury.

RECEIVED WRIST WATCH

Pte. N. J. Asselstine of 155 Battalion, 78 Mill St., received wrist watch from friends.

GET AFTER IT

If you hear a warbling in the city tree-tops, investigate. It is probably Mrs. Robert Gibson's "Polly," who got away yesterday.

CAME UP WITH BOYS

Dr. J. G. Evans of the Kingston Standard, came upon the special train as the guest of Col. Adams of the 155th Battalion. Dr. Evans has charge of the military news of Barriefield Camp. He paid a friendly visit to our office on the arrival of the special train.

RED CROSS DAY

The Red Cross Society of Thurlow township today reaped quite a harvest in Belleville. Many automobiles tastefully decorated containing ladies who are members of the society, came to the city and the ladies were soon upon the streets disposing of badges and flags. The money obtained is for a worthy object.

On the line of march the streets were crowded with spectators. At 2.30 this afternoon the presentation of colors donated by the Argyle Chapter of the I.O.D.E. of this city. HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

LAST WINTER in lecturing to a Woman's Club I told the members that light shoes produce obesity (fatness) and bad breath. Every woman desires to be attractive, and some of them assert—perhaps, too, with a certain amount of reason—that women dress in the absurd fashion of the day even to the shoes because the men like to see them fashionably dressed. The young girl allows the salesman, who usually knows little or nothing about the fitting of shoes, to crowd her foot into a narrow, high-heeled shoe utterly too small and unsuitable. As a consequence the foot may look small and shapely but she pays the price.

If the toes are cramped together in a space about large enough for the great toe the bones about the ball of the foot are spread out and corns and bunions develop. The narrow-high-heeled shoe disarranges the bones of the foot and tends to develop a falling arch or some other painful affection which is sometimes erroneously designated as rheumatism. The high and narrow heels add to the discomfort of the narrow toe by the fact that the foot slides forward. The effort in balancing upon the high heel induces aching in the calf muscles. The corns, bunions, aching feet and muscles settle the question of exercise, because no woman wearing the fashionable shoe will walk any more than she can avoid. The muscles of the arms, legs, and abdomen become soft and flabby. Lack of exercise, especially after 35 or 40 years of age, induces obesity. The flabby abdominal muscles allow the abdomen to sag and the abdominal organs may become more or less displaced. Want of exercise, flabby abdominal muscles and displaced stomach, liver, and intestines induce constipation.

BAD SHOES AND THEIR RESULTS

A bad breath may come from defective tonsils or teeth. Its common cause in women who take no exercise is the absorption of certain substances from the intestinal tract. Bad breath is often present in constipated women.

In first-class hospitals every nurse who begins her training is fitted with a broad-low heeled shoe. She could not stand the continuous walking about on hardwood floors with a fashionable shoe. Every probationer nurse whose feet give out has likely had them spoiled by her foolishness or through ignorance of the harm a high-heeled shoe will do to one's feet.

The girl who wears a tight, high-heeled shoe gains what she desires: a shapely foot; but she pays the price in securing mis-shapen feet, painful feet, bad posture, flabby muscles, obesity, constipation, bad breath, sallow complexion, and in all probability ill-health. Is it worth it?

• • •

Many people pay little or no attention to the care of their teeth. This may be due to the fact that in early life they were not taught the necessity and importance of the care of the teeth. Or it may be due to carelessness, a bad habit. Often one sees comparatively young men, and young women, too with disgustingly foul teeth; or, as a result of neglect the teeth may be lost through decay, loose from pyorrhoea, or replaced by artificial ones. Pyorrhœa has become a very common disease of the teeth. It is largely due to neglect and is the result of accumulation of waste matter from the mouth and glandular excretions forming about the teeth and setting up inflammatory processes in the gums. As a result of this pus forms, the gums become enlarged and flabby and fall away from the teeth. Extension of the process causes the teeth to become loose and finally they are lost.

THE TEETH AND DIGESTION

Someone has said that since we are provided with thirty-two teeth we should chew each mouthful of food thirty-two times. One cannot have good digestion if the teeth are in bad condition or if there are large gaps in the jaws which should be filled with teeth. Many persons are tortured with indigestion resulting from diseased teeth.

Nowadays much good is being done by having school children taught the importance of proper care of the teeth, the right kind of a tooth brush to use and the proper manner of using it. Dentists and doctors now place much more importance upon the value of good teeth than they did twenty-five years ago. An aching tooth in those days was soon nipped out by the doctor or dentist; such a thing is rare nowadays. The dentist has become so expert that he is able almost to make an old tooth, if not entirely new, at least as serviceable as a new one. Artificial teeth, while a useful substitute for natural teeth, are less and less in demand. Thy are neither so good nor so nice in appearance as the real ones, but they are better than none.

Accuracy is Demanded

It won't do to guess what time it is—not these days.

Every man that "does things" must own a watch that he knows will stand by him.

If it won't do that, then he should let us fix it so that it will do that.

Don't wait to have it done, hand it in at once.

It is bad for the watch to neglect it and inconvenient for you. Does this apply to you and your watch?

Former Belleville Boys Doing Their Bit in The Canadian Club of New York

The hearts of Canadians wherever found were stirred by Canada's ready declaration to do her part when this mighty struggle began of "Arms against Arbitration." Nowhere was this more evidenced than in the Canadian Club of New York, where the desire for participation at once put the question: "What can we do to help."

At the first meeting voluntary offerings enabled them to send $1,000.00 to Ottawa as a contribution to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Since, another $1,000.00 cheque has been contributed to this fund; and again in response to the inquiry, "What can we do to help? Where is there a real need we can care for here?" Ottawa responded, "Provide against the suffering and want among the dependent ones on your side of the line left behind by those enlisting in the Canadian regiments, as these are outside of our jurisdiction." This work throughout the entire State of New York is now being done.

"What more can we do to help?" was again asked when Surgeon-General G. Sterlin Ryerson, founder of the Canadian Red Cross Society, addressed the Canadian Club of New York last February. He replied, "Motor ambulances are needed." As a result, seven ambulances marked "Gift of the Canadian Club of New York to the Canadian Red Cross Society" are now at the front.

We have just received the Canadian Club of New York 1915-1916 Year Book, and special mention of members, Mr Arthur Barber, Willis G. Bogart and Mr Joseph Doctor, who still boast of being Belleville boys. Their friends here are glad thus to hear from these sons of Belleville and their efforts at doing their bit through the Canadian Club of New York. We shall watch for further evidence of activities gratifying to their Belleville friends.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Agitating A Good Road

From Prescott to Belleville is Route Suggested — Would be a Great Boon

(Kingston Standard)

An agitation is on foot for a movement to petition the Provincial Government to begin work at once on a "Good Road" between Prescott and Belleville, on the main highway between Toronto and Montreal, and passing through Brockville, Gananoque, Kingston and Papanee. With this end in view, a meeting of representative men of Prescott, Brockville, Gananoque, Kingston, Napanee and Belleville will likely be held at the Inn in Gananoque in a few days.

It is pointed out that the Government is already building a good road from Prescott to Ottawa and another from Hamilton to Toronto and that it is most important that work on the road between Prescott and Belleville should not be delayed, inasmuch as it is between these points that the great majority of American automobile tourists come in to Canada, crossing over either at Prescott from Ogdensburg, at Brockville from Morristown or at Kingston from Cape Vincent. It is pointed out too, that all along the American border, across from these Canadian towns and cities, the American roads are perfect boulevards, and that when the tourists there cross over into Canada they are met with about as bad roads as in any part of Canada and go away disgusted, this giving Ontario, and especially this section of it, a black eye.

The feeling is that the government could well afford to spend the money and begin work on this section immediately, as the expenditure would more than pay for itself (as the good roads in the States have proven) by the presence of great numbers of tourists here and the spending of large sums of mocy. As it is now, there is practically no auto tourist trade in this section of the Province and everyone is complaining of the wretched condition of the roads.

ANOTHER SHIPMENT ABROAD

The St. Julien Chapter sent two boxes, one hospital box, containing 5 pillows and 16 pillow cases, and a trench box containing stationary, chocolates, gum, tobacco, soap, cigarettes, wash cloths, handkerchief, socks, biscuits, and candles, was sent to the Belleville boys of the 21st Battalion. A generous donation of wool was received by the Chapter from Mr. D. V. Sinclair, and from Mrs. Coleman, President of the Ladies Aid of Roblins Mills Methodist church, 10 pillow cases and 28 towels.

STOPPED SUBMARINE WAR BECAUSE SUBS ARE ALL GONE

LONDON, July 28.—The Morning Post in its leading editorial, urged the government to take drastic steps immediately to prevent the Germans from gaining a foothold, commercially or otherwise in the British Empire after the war.

The Post declares that Lord Kitchener shortly before his tragic death devised a plan along these lines, which the paper now endorses.

"Lord Kitchener's proposal," says the Post, "was to pass a law that for 21 years no German should be allowed to naturalize himself or take up his domicile in the United Kingdom or the British Empire, or to enter into any partnership in any British business or become a shareholder in any British company."

The same editorial discussing German submarine activity, says: "The Germans some time ago pretended to desist from their submarine policy. The truth is they had no more submarines to carry on the blockade, because our navy had sunk nearly all. When the Germans build more submarines they will try again, but we have faith in the British navy to account for anything the Germans put on the water or under the water."

IRISH LEADERS COULD NOT CARRY COUNTRY

LONDON, July 28.—The breakdown of the Irish settlement does not in any way injure the cause of Home Rule nor indicate any change in the attitude of the government toward the Irish question, Sir Horace Plunkett told the Associated Press today.

Sir Horace, who for many years has been occupied with Irish agricultural and congestion problems, probably possesses as broad knowledge of Irish affairs as does any man. He has always maintained an aloofness from party politics and enjoys general popularity in all sections.

He continued: "The government was anxious to seize the opportunity for an agreement between Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond to put the Home Rule Act into immediate effect, but before doing so it felt bound to ascertain the real sentiment of the Irish people which proved more unfriendly toward the scheme than either the government or its Irish advisors had expected.

Redmond's Difficulty.

John Redmond had the greatest difficulty in securing the support of those of his followers whom he had time to consult, and it soon became clear that he could not carry with him the general assent of National Ireland.

"Sir Edward Carson severely strained his authority in securing the limited approval of Ulster Unionists.

"The government was naturally unwilling to impose on the Irish people a settlement unacceptable to them and it was found that the scheme tentatively offered to the two Irish leaders would meet with strong opposition both in England and Ireland. Hence considerable delay took place, but in the result a great blunder has been avoided. Opinion in Ireland is obviously relieved by the withdrawal of the two hastily constructed scheme.

Prefers to Wait.

"Home Rule at the end of the war is perfectly secure and the large measure of agreement reached between Carson and Redmond will doubtless be utilized to improve the terms of the ultimate settlement. Talk about 'dashing the cup of freedom from the lips of Erin' is sheer nonsense. It is, however, true that some of the contents of the cup were not to her taste and she very sensibly prefers to wait."

Sir Horace, who has been abed ill for several days, is rapidly recovering.

Now the Dutch government is to introduce bread cards, so scarce is grain. We should be thankful we live in Canada.

Shake-Up Due In Education

British Committee Appointed to Study the Problem

LONDON, Jhly 28.—Viscount Haldane started a debate in the House of Lords a day or two ago on the urgency of reforms and improvements in national education to enable Great Britain after the war to meet the inevitable German competition.

The Marquis of Crewe announred in the House of Lords last evening that the government proposed to appoint a committee to review the whole field of national education.

The Marquis of Crewe announced of strong agitation to overhaul the educational system of the nation in view of the defects revealed in the course of the war, and with the object of meeting German competition in various fields of research in which Great Britain hitherto has been outdistanced.

The Marquis of Crewe, further explaining what was intended to be done, said that the proposed committee would be closely bound up with the general committee on reconstruction after the war, over which Premier Asquith presided. Education, he added, was a subject on which the country did not dare restrict expenditure, whatever the taxation that had to be borne. He would venture to say that, so far as anything admirable was to be found in the German system, they would desire "to attain German thoroughness without the servile discipline which disfigured the German nation and army in peace times."

One of the principal lines of inquiry would relate to the application of science to business. There must be greater honor for the teaching profession and better rates of pay.

Lord Haldane expressed approval of the government's decision, but urged the minister to act promptly, saying: "We still have the tide, but it is an ebb tide. Other nations are making progress."

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 Postalnote or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co.,

BRITAIN NEVER CLOSER UNITED

"Great Britain is not tiring of the war. On the contrary the country has never been more hopeful and united," said Lord Derby, former director of recruiting and now under secretary for war, in an interview with American correspondents, whom he welcomed in his new capacity.

"I want you to impress upon the American people," Lord Derby continued, "our determination to destroy the efforts of Germany to dominate the world. The fighting now is terrible, so awful that not a man in it—ourselves as well as Germans—ever wants another. But we must push our victory until we make it impossible for the German rulers to revive the conflict.

"The unity of the nation has become impressive. It extends to every circle. No one could have told me three years ago that I would have been working in the same office with Lloyd George, but here we are using our utmost efforts in perfect harmony to do our part to win the war.

"Even the Irish situation, lamentable as it is, merely forms a domestic problem. The unfortunate aspect is that neutrals may think it indicates disunion in our prosecution of the war, but a study of the speeches of both sides to the controversy shows they have not changed a hair in their opinion that the war must be prosecuted with the utmost vigor.

"The military situation is satisfactory. I am not in a position to give you details of the actual operations, but I can tell you that on a recent visit I found everyone at the front exceedingly cheerful and fully convinced that we were started on the straight road to victory.

"The way may be long or short. Any man venturing to prophesy the length of the war is foolish, but I am convinced that ultimately victory will be ours without question. Our voluntary armies have proved equal to the best conscript armies. In saying this I do not mean to underestimate the efficiency of iron discipline, but it is difficult to equal the spirit of volunteers. Not only the work of the infantry, but even the more surprisingly good showing of our artillery proves that the voluntary spirit leads the troops to acquire knowledge in a few months which standing armies take years to gain.

"Of course, my chief interest lies in the men of my own country, whom I found fighting like veterans, although most of them were in factories a few months ago. But it is impossible to distinguish between countries as all are fighting so splendidly.

"We have no desire to partition Germany. Some of our colonies may insist upon the retention of the German colonies, but that is not what we are in the war for. We want to prevent future wars and we want the United States with us in this, not for this war, but hereafter.

"You asked how far the present offensive expects to go. I do not know, but personally I want it to go as far as Berlin."

New Fittings For Deutschland

Captain and Agents Suddenly Find They Have Repairs to Make to Submarine

BALTIMORE, July 28.—Should the submarine Deutschland be still at her pier to-morrow morning everybody will give up guessing the time of her departure. If Captain Koenig and the officers of the company, who have fortunes at stake in the venture, only had reliable news of the safety of the Deutschland's sister submarine, the Bremen, the Deutschland would be off, but they are still waiting, and the waiting has made them nervous and irritable.

A delegation of the Congressional Rivers and Harbors Committee arrived at the Deutschland's pier, under the leadership of Congressman J. Charles Linthicum, of Maryland, during the day. They were anxious to get a sight of the submersible, but did not do so.

Those who accompanied Mr. Linthicum were Senator Saulsbury, of Belaware, and Representatives Miller, of Maryland, J. Hampton Moore of Costello, of Pennsylvania, Dupre, of Louisiana, Small, of North Carolina, Frear, of Wisconsin Kettner, of California, and Hurlburt, of New York.

Captain Koenig reluctantly said they might go aboard the Neckar and take a peep over the side if Captain Hinsch, of the Neckar, didn't object. But Captain Hinsch did—and they did not go. Captain Hinsch was very courteous about it. He regretted that "it was not possible at this time."

It was reported that recent submerging tests have developed defective parts which must be replaced before the Deutschland is ready for her return dash across the Atlantic. According to these reports, Naval Constructor Prusse, who superintended the building of the Deutschland and Bremen, and who came to Baltimore as the Deutschland's supercargo, is working day and night on the repairs.

The report, which is circumstantial, goes on to say that it has been necessary to replace practically all the bearings of the submarine, and that the shortage of bronze and similar metals in Germany made it necessary to fit the submarine with bearings of a new steel alloy developed by German metallurgists, and that while this new metal worked well on the trip to this country, Constructor Prusse determined that it would not hold up for the perilous trip home.

Accordingly, he decided, the story goes, to replace the alloy with brass and bronze bearings, and extra bearings to equip other submarines, now under construction, will be taken back to Germany on the submarine.

Operations Failed to Cure
Kidney Disease

Mr. John E. Pumfrey, Farmer, Viceroy, Sask., was twice operated on in an English hospital for kidney disease. Urinary troubles grew worse and caused excruciating pain. He now states positively that he has been cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and is enjoying excellent health.

This is further proof that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, by their combined action, cure the most serious and complicated ailments of the kidneys. Prove this for yourself.

BILLION DOLLAR CROP EXPECTED

After a thorough canvas of various points throughout Western Canada, Dr. McGill of the Dominion Grain Commission, is quoted in Calgary as saying that Alberta would have a crop as good as last year, that the Dominion would have a billion dollar grain crop and that the grain crop of the three prairie Provinces would be little if any behind that of last year.

"The country as a whole never looked better than it does at present," said Dr. McGill. "The weather was made to order as you might say, and I am of the opinion that this year's harvest will be another wonderful one."

Those who contemplate going west will do well to remember that the most fertile districts in Western Canada are served by the Lines of the C. N. R., and that this season they can travel from their home districts to destination, Canadian Northern all the way.

Arrangements have been made whereby passengers may travel in comfort, Colonist and Lunch Counter being a feature.

The first of these excursions will be run in August, the date will be announced later.

1,000 Families Are Homeless

Building on Amsterdam Avenue, N. Y., For Nearly A Block Destroyed

NEW YORK, July 28.—More than $11,000,000 damage was caused by a fire last night which destroyed the building extending from 150th to 151st street in Amsterdam avenue. Fifteen thousand persons, many of them driven from apartment houses, stood for two hours in the rain watching the firemen battle against the flames under control, and that the damage to the apartment houses which surrounded the burned building would be only that caused by smoke.

Law Was Swift So the Pair Found

TORONTO, July 28.—Arrested while in the act of trying to dispose of $20 worth of copper wire to a second hand dealer, Joseph Gareau and James Lafleur, captured by Sergeant Corbett, pleaded guilty this morning and went through a quick process of law. They were heard in enquete, made their voluntary statement, and later were remanded for sentence by Judge St. Cyr. The sergeant saw the men bargaining for a sale. They claimed to work at the Canada Range Company, St. Catherine street, and to have been given the copper by their foreman. This morning they changed their story and pleaded guilty to theft.

MURDERED FOR 3 DOLLARS

Card Gambling Has Tragic Sequel at Battleford

OTTAWA, July 28.—A Cabinet Council to-day decided to let the law take its course in the case of Peter Nimalovitch, of Battleford, found guilty of murder. He will hang tomorrow.

Nimalovitch, after having played cards with two compatriots one evening, and lost $3 to one of them, got up the next morning and shot his creditor through the head, also attacking his companion. He pleaded insanity at the trial, but alienists adjudged him sane. The fact that there was no apparent motive for the murder was not considered as establishing insanity, as "foreign" murders often occur seemingly with absence of provocation.

A case will shortly be decided by the Cabinet where one British Columbia Italian decapitated another because he stated "he woke up at night and looked ugly at me."

THIS IS THE 648TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE COUNTRY FALL FAIR.

The rural fair has developed largely into a holiday and social time for the people round about. This is all right, and every farmer who works well throughout the summer is deserving of his day or two at the fair, where he meets his friends from other localities and neighbors engaged in the same business to discuss matters pertaining to their occupation, and to have a pleasant time together. There are those who hold that the fall fair is worth while from the standpoint of sociability, leaving out altogether the quality and educational value of the exhibits made. There are others who believe that unless the fair is of some value in an educational way to the exhibitors and to those who attend, it is not worth while.—Farmers' Advocate.

One thing is certain, there is no reason why the country fair should not be educational as well as a promoter of sociability and a good place to visit. Too often the directors scurry around at the last moment and get some of the men in the district to enter and bring out stock. This is not always well fitted, and stock raw from the fields does not make as attractive an exhibit as stock well finished and prepared for the fair. Sometimes a big breeder is encouraged to take his herd to the show in order to fill the stalls, and he walks away with all the money, there being little or no competition. It is competition that brings out the good and bad points of the stock. An animal generally looks well at home, but when placed alongside a better one the defects of the former stand out prominently. This is where the public should get most of the fall fairs. A campaign should be put on for better fitting, a larger local entry, keener competition, and an all-round better exhibition. We would advise the directors of these fairs to encourage the young men in their counties to exhibit. Twenty young men bring out one or two well-fitted animals, each one of far more use to the fair than one big exhibitor trotting out twenty or forty animals. If necessary get some of the twenty young men on the directorate. They will bring in some new ideas, and some of the vim and aggressiveness generally lacking in the older men who have seen the fair go on the same year after year for a quarter century.

The same thing applies to exhibits or grain, roots, vegetables, fruits and other farm crops, as to the stock. Quality should be insisted upon, and a regular campaign made to get out these exhibitors, and to get them to fit their stock. In fact, we would be in favor of cutting out prizes altogether to stock or any exhibits which were not properly prepared for the show-ring.

"We have often wondered," continues The Advocate, "whether or not agricultural sicieties could not run better farming competitions, based not only on the appearance of the farm, but upon profits made as shown by the financial statement of the owner or tenant. This would serve the double purpose of insuring a more systematic and all-round better method of farming, and also would promote the keeping of accounts on the farm which, in the end, would show the farmer wherein his profits and losses resulted. If necessary the farms could be divided into three or four classes, as for instance, dairy farms with pigs, beef-cattle farms, and mixed farms, or in any more suitable way that the societies might agree upon. Anything of this nature, if it is to achieve its greatest success, should emanate from the agricultural societies or the Boards of the different county fairs. We feel certain that if suitable prizes were offered and the right conditions imposed that a marked improvement in the farming of the districts trying the scheme would soon be noticed, for one good farm in a neighborhood has an effect upon all the surrounding land, which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. In this, as with the ploughing, we advocate taking a part of the fair to the man's farm, where it is really of most benefit."

CANADIAN SCHOOL REFORM.

The Province of Alberta is going to reform her school curriculum. This is the announcement recently made by the Hon. J. R. Boyle, Minister of Education for the Province. Mr Boyle declares that programmes of studies for rural schools have been arranged and prepared chiefly by city people, and naturally he thinks this is a somewhat anomalous situation. Those who have a close understanding of rural life, he thinks, should have something to say in the preparation of rural school curriculums.

Saswatchewan is in line with Alberta in this matter, and, in fact, throughout the entire west there seem to be a determination to revise and remodel the school systems, which have been largely borrowed, putting in their place, something more of a home-made article. Friday, June 30th, was set apart as "Better Schools Day" in Saskatchewan, the idea being that the subject of school reform and improvement should have general discussion throughout the country. Reports indicate that such discussion and consideration as was given the matter on this special day will bear good fruit.

One of the important changes suggested is the establishment of rural high schools, such as have been introduced into some of the more progressive States of the American union. It is felt that at present the high schools and collegiate institutes specially serve the need of the town dwellers, and this contention is borne out by the fact that the students who attend them rarely return to the farm. If rural high schools have the effect of helping to keep the young folk on the farm, certainly the sooner they take root in Canada the better. And by serving the real need of those who would engage in farm life, and raising the statute of farming in the mind and thought of the students, it is easy to see how the rural high school would have the effect suggested.

It cannot be denied that there is quite a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction with our school system, both east and west in Canada. And this feeling is cherished by people who have a full appreciation of its excellences and are grateful for the service that our schools have rendered during the past half century or more of our history as a Dominion. It is widely felt that our schools might contribute much more than they do to the unity and development of our national life, and there is an insistant call for reform and improvement that will produce results in this direction. Not only in Alberta and Saskatchewan, but throughout the whole Dominion, changes are imminent in our schools that will bear good fruit in our national life.

Toronto Mail and Empire: Mr Asquith has informed the House that he proposes to advise the King to deprive the Dukes of Albany and Cumberland and Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein of their English titles and honors. About three weeks ago, in reply to Mr Swift MacNeill, Mr Asquith said that he did not consider the question of having the Duke of Cumberland's English titles and dignities cancelled was worthy of the attention of Parliament. Mr MacNeill has asked whether the Prime Minister was aware that his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland and Teviot, Earl of Armagh, and Prince of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, had sent to the German Emperor a letter, which had appeared in the press of those countries, offering to the German Emperor, as creator and developer of the German navy, his heartiest congratulations on the occasion of the recent "victory" in the North Sea; and whether, having regard to the disgust and indignation of a large section of the people of these countries at this traitorous personage being permitted to retain all but the highest rank, title, and dignity of the Realm, any, and, if so, what steps would be taken to remedy this grievance.

Hamilton Herald: In returning to the Imperial munitions board the sum of $758,248, representing the profits on a munitions contract, F. W. Baillie, manager of the Canadian Cartridge Company of this city, has performed a notable act of patriotism—unique in its kind so far as the Herald's knowledge goes. When Mr Thomas, Lloyd George's representative, was in Canada last year, letting contracts and organizing the imperial munitions board, he announced that a Hamilton manufacturer had promised to make munitions at cost. The name of the manufacturer was not divulged at the time. Now it transpires that Mr Baillie was the man whom Mr Thomas eulogized. The return of his profits is the fulfilment of Mr Baillie's promise. His company had two contracts for the manufacture of shell cases, each contract being for a million cases. The money which has been returned to the munitions board is the profits on the second contract. As an example of real patroitism and public spirit the action of Mr Baillie is inspiring.

Current Comment

The Kaiser has sent an apology to the Sultan for not paying a promised visit to Constantinople. He and his troops have some exceedingly pressing engagements elsewhere.

It was quite like Sir Sam Hughes to start for England without waiting for the verdict of the Meredith-Duff royal commission. The Minister of Militia leaves it to his opponents to do the worrying.—Guelph Herald.

With the ruling price for wheat in Winnipeg some six cents a bushel higher than in Chicago, there is a good reason why the western grain grower is keeping quiet on the question of marketing his product across the border.

The Grit manipulators are talking of running an anti-prohibition candidate in the bye-election in South-west Toronto, the seat rendered vacant by the death of Hon. Mr Foy. It would be a trick eminently characteristic of the party.—Brantford Courier.

Speaking of the Irish question, Gladstone thought he had the vexed question settled, only to have it wreck his government, and also for many years his party; for the defection of such men as Chamberlain, Hartington, James and a number of others led to the formation and the success at the polls of the Unionists.

One, Israel Abraham Rosenberg, has just died in Pittsburg at the age of 107. He was born in Russia and came to America 35 years ago. He made a practice of rising early in the day, never rode on a street car, smoked many cigarettes and drank wine sparingly. If the hardy old gentleman had refrained from smoking he might have reached the great age of 108 or even 109. Tobacco has played the dickens with many a chap's health.—Montreal Gazette.

Excessive heat put the hydro system at Berlin out of action for three hours. Perhaps some of the name-changers and the antis were having an argument in the vicinity.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel rundown and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE

BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER XI.—Continued

Nick had his object in making these remarks. He wanted to learn just how far this gang of operators was going, how heavily they were likely to commit themselves, and in how desperate a corner they would be placed if the plans he had made with Fenno were successfully carried out. This was the chief object with which Nick had called on Andrew Todd that morning.

"Bah!" cried the latter derisively. "You're talking through your hat, Mr. Carter."

"Well—possibly."

"We know what we're doing and what we are up against, you can bet on that. Man alive, think of the bull points on the stock since yesterday. We've got the one thing for which we've been waiting—the Packard decision.'"

"That's true."

"In addition to that is the arrest of Fenno, which was entirely unexpected, and for a crime that removes him permanently from our path," Todd went on, with obvious exultation over this downfall of his foe. "He was a factor that still might have bothered us a little, but now even he is down and out. There is no reasonable probability that he will ever again set foot on the floor of the Exchange."

"It looks so, I'll admit," said Nick, with inscrutable countenance.

"You see, Mr. Carter, we now have smooth sailing before us. It's a walkover, a cast-iron, copper-bottomed cinch. Bite off more than we can chew Bah!" Todd cried scornfully. "You wait and see, Mr. Carter—you wait and see!"

"Well, we have not long to wait," laughed Nick, glancing at the clock while he arose to go.

"That's right, too," Todd returned. "Drop in after the market closes today, Mr. Carter, and I'll figure out on paper for you where you might have made a fortune."

"Possibly I will, Mr. Todd, if I'm in this locality," smiled Nick, with a nod to the others, as he withdrew from the room. He remarked to himself, however, as he left the outer office: "Unless I'm much mistaken, you'll have enough to do in figuring out where to raise a fortune with which to meet your own obligations."

Crossing Broad Street, Nick entered the New Street door of the Stock Exchange Building. The noise from within—a roar like that of Niagara—fell upon his ears before he fairly had left the street. Instead of going to one of the galleries available to the public having cards of admission, he found one of the attendants with whom he was acquainted, and obtained a brief view through one of the door ways leading to the floor of the Exchange.

He had arrived too late to witness the opening of the market, however, but what he saw confirmed his anticipations.

United Transit had opened at forty-two- nearly fourteen points above the previous day's closing, and the wildest excitement prevailed. Around the standard of the stock a mob of brokers were fighting like madmen, climbing upon and over one another in their frenzy to execute orders, and shrieking like a horde of Apaches on the warpath.

It was a scene that would baffle verbal description, and Nick Carter, having far more important business, did not long remain to view it. He waited until the stock had advanced into the fifties, with hardly a reaction, and then, feeling sure its upward course would continue, and that the Todd crowd would plunge in their efforts to lift it as high as possible during the last hour of the session, and endeavor to close it at the top figure, he left this speculative madness to run its course—until he was ready to interfere.

Half an hour after leaving the Exchange Building, Nick entered the private office of the district attorney.

"I want to see you alone Henderson," he said, after a cordial greeting.

The latter at once dismissed a clerk then in the office, and the detective took a chair near the official's desk.

"Have you done what I asked by phone?" he enquired.

"Held up Fenno's arraignment?"

"Yes."

"I have done it, Nick; but I was somewhat surprised at such a request coming from you."

"You'll be more surprised at my next one."

"What is that?"

"I want Fenno released on bail."

"Bail!" Henderson exclaimed, staring. "Are you mad? What do you know about the case?"

"I have investigated it."

"You have?"

"I was one of the first on the scene of the crime."

"Strange it hasn't been mentioned to me," Henderson said frowningly. "I was told that house detective, Jimmie Holman, and another man named Mouser, who claimed to be a Central man, yet whose identity——"

"I was Mouser," Nick interrupted, somewhat dryly.

"Oh, the dickens!" Henderson exclaimed, with his frown instantly vanishing. "I ought to have guessed it when you said you were one of the first on the scene. You are always treating a fellow to surprises of this sort. What do you make of the case, Nick, that warrants your asking for Fenno's release on bail?"

"I'll tell you, Tom," said Nick, drawing his chair nearer. "I'll also tell you why I want him at liberty. You'll presently see that it is imperative to the work I intend doing on the case."

What Nick Carter told him then and there is not material. It comprised much that has already appeared—his observations, suspicions, and deductions, added to which was an outline of the work he had in view and the ends he expected to attain.

The district attorney listened attentively, with his strong, intellectual face steadily becoming more serious. What he heard amazed him. What the detective proposed doing almost staggered him. Yet he had in the judgment of Nick Carter, in his discernment, ability, and integrity, more faith than in those of any other man of his acquaintance. He drew up in his chair when Nick had concluded, regarding him with grave and doubtful eyes for several moments.

"You are tackling a tremendous proposition, Nick," he said, at length.

"I think I'm good for it, Tom," the detective simply replied.

"If it should prove that you are not, Nick, what you now ask of me, if I consent, will reflect most seriously upon my judgment. In other words, it would end my career as the district attorney."

"I know that, Tom," said Nick, in his quiet, impressive way. "Yet you must consent. By no other means can I accomplish this work, or you serve to greater advantage the interests of justice. If your reputation is to be put in jeopardy, so also is mine —and I value mine, Tom, as highly as you value yours. The question is —will you do it?"

Henderson arose from his chair, taking his hat from a rack on the wall, then turned and extended his hand.

"Yes, Nick; I'll do it," he replied. "I will do it for you—but I would do it for no other man in New York City."

CHAPTER XII.
FENNO MAKES GOOD

Half an hour after their departure from Henderson's office, Nick and the district attorney were in private conference with one of the judges of the municipal court.

An hour later a closed carriage left the Tombs and rapidly was driven to the detective's residence. Two men, one with is features muffled with his handkerchief, sprang out of the hack and hurriedly entered the house.

Nick was taking no chances of a miscarriage of his plans by allowing Fenno to go to his business office before three o'clock that day, or to his apartments in the Mammoth Hotel.

It was then one o'clock, and Nick, after entering, telephoned to a Broad Street broker and asked about the market.

United Transit had touched seventy, reacting to sixty-five and was fluctuating wildly between these figures, amid great excitement and under enormous dealings.

"It will close higher—at least ten points higher The Todd crowd are booming it with millions," were the last advices that came over the wire.

"It will soon be up to you, Fenno," said Nick, after stating the information he had received.

The man lounging in the detective's easy-chair made no reply, but his white, determined face, as hard as flint in its set expression, spoke volumes.

At half-past two that afternoon Nick Carter entered one of the galleries of the Exchange and wormed his way through the crowd until he could view the floor.

On the quotation board the last sale of United Transit was at seventy-six.

The stock was swaying like a reed in a raging gale, however—now up, now down, moving madly in the seventies, while the Exchange was in an uproar that would baffle description.

True to his prediction, Todd was striving to close the stock fifty points up for the day; and, under the leadership of Karl Damon, of Damon, Dale & Smith, known to be Todd's floor brokers, a bull pool, already formed, was getting in its work with the ferocity of tigers in a pit. All around the standard of the stock a frenzied mob was battling, Damon at times being nearly swept from his feet by surging and shrieking crowd.

It was, indeed, a momentous hour of the day, one best calculated for such a move as Nick Carter had planned, and the effect of which he could plainly foresee.

SLAVS COVERED 100 MILES IN ONE WEEK'S STRIDE

PETROGRAD, via London, July 28.—Russian troops covered a hundred miles in their advance on Erzingan within a week. The capture of that city means the virtual completion of the Russian occupation of Turkish Armenia and gives Russia the benefit of the extremely fertile valley and opens an easy means of communication through Trebizond for the western and southern Caucasian armies.

It is estimated that the Turks had between 25 and 30 divisions between the Black Sea and Mush—approximately 350,000 men. Three months ago the Turks undertook a comprehensive campaign, intended to recapture Erzerum, and incidentally to draw troops from the Russian European theatre. General Eudenich, the Russian commander in the Caucasus succeeded, however, in holding the Turks in the Erzerum district while delivering an effective blow at them in the Mush district. In order to counter this flanking from the south an da similar effort from the north the Russians were obliged temporarily to abandon Mamakhatun, fifty miles west of Erzerum. The Russians now have captured Trebizond, Baiburt and Gumish Khaneh and re-occupied Mamarkhatun.

The Galician advance of the Russians has caused the Germans to withdraw troops from the Balkans and Turks were sent there to replace them. The Russians, quick to see the advantage thus afforded, started a vigorous offensive toward Erzingan. Only a rear-guard battle preceded the capture of the town, the Turkish main forces having been beaten and forced to retreat toward Sivas.

TALES OF THE LAST BRITISH ADVANCE

One o fthe British officers in the fighting about Fricourt and Mametz remarks:

"Their Prussian Guard are good, I admit, but even there our chaps are obviously their superiors. There's not a doubt of that. I don't say our average can run rings round their best. But our best can beat their best; and, what's more, our average is infinitely superior to their average, and I believe they know it.

"I saw a badly wounded lance-corporal of the Dorsets. His left arm was helpless, and I saw him from the shell-hole I rolled into when I was pipped. He swang his rifle with bayonet fixed in his right arm—a big, fair chap, like a Viking—and he bailed up five fully-armed Boches besides my shell-hole. He roared at 'em like a bull. 'Drop them rifles, you——s, he shouted. 'Mercy mercy; kamerade,' they said. They dropped their rifles—I picked one up for myself, after. And that lance-corporal marching the five back to our line, handed 'em over."

"But I saw one better than that when I was getting back from M—." It was an officer of the Gordons speaking this time. "We'd got the village then, so the five behind was nothing. That was six hours after I was wounded I saw 600 Boches, of all ranks, marching in column of route across the open, back towards our rear. They were disarmed, of course, and what do you think they had for escort? Three ragged Jocks—our battalion—all blood and dirt and rags, with their rifles at the slope, doing a sort of G. O. C's inspection parade march, like pipers at the head of a battalion."

Captives Who Wouldn't Go Back.

"Our men are not bullet-proof," testifies a wounded subaltern. "When they enter a zone of living fire they get hit. But till they get picked out they balk at nothing. No prospect can check them. The officers? My officers were splendid—all of them. One young fellow, now Lieutenant Chawner, was most gallant. In the teeth of that tornado of fire he dashed across No-Man's-Land at the head of his platoon. He actually landed in the Boche front line without a man (his platoon was a small one); not one man got through but himself. And he found himself face to face with three Boches, whom he pramptly threatened with his revolver, and he made them lay down their rifles, took the three of them prisoners, and ordered them back to our own lines. Just then he was knocked over by a shell fragment with one of the Boches. When he recovered consciousness one of the remaining two Boches, who seems to have known which was the better side to be on, was bandaging him. The other had vanished! So Chawner thanked the Boche who bandaged him and then marched the man back to our lines a prisoner."

Ashamed to Capture Boys.

"It seemed to me," said a Lincolnshire lad, "as if there was a machine gun to every five men.' Without exaggeration there were many of these machines and they were served skillfully and terribly by their gunners. Beyond La Boisselle, which was pressed on one side, the fire became very intense.

High explosives, shrapnel, and trench mortars plough up the ground. "They threw everything at us except half-crowns," said a man of the Royal Scots.

A segreant of the Manchesters, speaking of the prisoners captured, said they were "all sorts." Some were fine, big fellows, but there was a fair number of middle-aged and also some very youthful soldiers. "I brought in myself," he said, "two lads who did not look to be more than fifteen. Upon my word, I was ashamed to do it. But they were very nice boys and they cut the buttons off their tunics and handed them to us a skeepsakes."

Everywhere there lay about great numbers of steel helmets, some of them with vizors, and well designed, so that they come down to the nape of the neck and protect all the head. Some of our soldiers were bringing them back as souvenirs. One man had ten dangling about him, like the tin pots on a travelling tinker.

WITH BRITISH SUB. WHEN ENEMY SEEN

A graphic description of the "life" in a British submarine about to attack a German ship is given in the following account.

Look carefully and see how the grim shadow, almost flush with the sea, blends with the grey waters and the grey sky. Her narrow deck is washed from end to end, her bow hidden in a pillow of boiling sea, her counter lathered in the foaming eddies of her wake. Behind the canvas "dodgers" of her tiny bridge her commander and helmsman ply their trade, the only members of her crew visible, the others are at their stations in her well-lighted interior. Suddenly there is a sharp word of command, more men appear on her wet deck, all her movable gear—the wheel, the ventilation cowls, the compass, and other objects—is detached and taken inside her hull. The rails are turned down in one moment flush with the deck. Then everyone disappears; the hatch is screwed tight, the main ballast tanks are filled, the periscope is pushed up to its full height, and thus she prepares to dive to the wet shadowy realms of the cod and the conger eel.

The roar of her oil engines has suddenly ceased. The silence seems strange after their thunderous note, and to take their place comes the gentle hum of the electric motors which drive her below the waves. The commander is in the conning tower, his eyes glued to the vibrating lens of the periscope. The stolid coxswain has the wheel controlling the horizontal rudders that work the boat in her trips below. The second coxswain has the wheel that steers her to port and starboard. The leading torpedo-man at the switchboard controls all the electrical devices that man has chained to his will to work this strange ship. The torpedo-men are at the fully-charged tubes. The engine staff have seen that the water and oil are shut off and are now at the Kingston valves and "Blows" (blow-off valves) on the main ballast tanks. Everyone stands to his station, blind to the world without, waiting for the commands of the one man who can see.

"Dive fifteen feet!" comes the order, quick and concise. The next moment the bow has canted down ever so little and the boat like a shadow has slid below, guided by the steady hand of the first coxswain.

In the far distance a ship, grey from truck to waterline, is speeding along the horizon, tossing a trailing haze of smoke from her belching funnels.

"Torpedo stations, make ready!" comes from above. The firing reservoirs of the tube are instantly charged with compressed air, the caps covering the outside ends of the tubes are raised by "No. 2" of each tube, and water floods each chamber until a warning spurt from a tiny vent inside the boat tells the torpedo man that all is clear for firing.

The silence which now reigns is alone broken by the hum of the motors. Everything depends on the judgment of one man; the others see nothing, know nothing, and have blindly to obey his will. . . . The cruiser is now standing up a dark silhouette on the skyline. Not one of her people have seen the "plume" of the submarine's periscope heading straight and true to cut them off.

Already a string of concise orders is coming down from the commander; finally, "Starboard tube—stand by." The tube is ready, "No. 1" (the chief torpedoman has jumped round to bang down the firing ball in case the electric circuit fails).

The commander's finger crooks round one of the pistol triggers before him—very carefully he is aiming with his whole ship (for the tubes are fixed in the hull). Then comes the single word, "Fire!" There is a heavy thud, a momentary alteration in the boat's trim (at once corrected by the alert coxswain), and at the same instant over 200 pounds of explosive in the war nose of the torpedo goes hurrying away at forty miles to the hour.

The enemy notes the wake of the "tin-fish"; there is a burst of flame from his secondary battery, and as the shells start on their screaming courses there is a fresh series of commands inside the submarine, and like a shadow her periscope has vanished, and she is plunging down to sixty feet below the surface, and turns and twists away, steered by clock and compass.

All the while her crew are listening Water is a good conductor of sound and will bring to their ears a message if the torpedo has gone "home." Suddenly they hear it—just a heavy thud—and on the instant they slip towards the world of fresh air at once. As the periscope projects the commander starts and ejaculates. "Good shot—right in her engine-room."

And the most vital feature of all is that the car is a "Made in Canada" product. This means that a full knowledge of the service expected of it lay behind the plan of design and construction after which it is built. It also means that the car possesses a degree of stamina and endurance that insures its perfect operation no matter how rough the road or steep the hill.

ABDUCTION IN DUMMER

Fourteen-Year-Old Girl is Missing Man is 35

Publicity is the long suit of Dummer. If it is not one thing, it is another—anything to keep in the limelight.

Another case which will be aired in the court shortly is one of abduction and the chief actors in the play are a girl of 14 and a man of 35. The girl was living with a good family in the township and was practically one of the household, but it appears that some years ago the man in question took a great notion to the little girl and was wroth when he was debarred from seeing her.

Some days ago he was seen in the neighborhood of the girl's home and since then both girl and man have been missing.

A warrant has been issued for his arrest on the charge of abduction and the matter is in the hands of Constable Archie Moore.

It is said that the couple are sojourning in the neighborhood of Campbellford.

DISTRUCTION OF FISH EGGS

Perhaps Only One Egg In Seventy or One Egg In Seven Hundred Produces One Live Fish

(By Prof. E. E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries.)

What is called "The Balance of Life in Nature" is maintained in many ways, some of these being exceedingly wonderful. Perhaps none are more wonderful than the methods by which the abundance of various kinds of fishes is ensured. The sharks and dog fishes produce either living young or large eggs which are protected in a strong purse of leathern shell, and the water is strong, active and hardy, and well able to resist enemies and take care of itself. These fishes produce few eggs or young each year, yet so large a percentage survives each year that sharks, dogfish and skate seem to increase rather than decrease in the ocean.

Many Many Millions.

With salmon, trout, whitefish, etc., it is very different, and still more so in the case of cod, haddock, mackerel, halibut and most sea fishes. All these, excepting the herring, produce eggs by millions each season. The cod, for example, produces from five to nine million eggs each winter. They are transparent globes of very small size, which are so light and buoyant that they float in the sea near the surface. The famous Norwegian naturalist, Dr. G. O. Sars, found on a calm day in the Lofoten Islands, a layer of cod spawn floating at the surface of the sea and extending for a great distance. Vast numbers of these countless millions of eggs form the food doubtless of immense numbers of small animals in the ocean. Other fishes feed upon them, and they are subjected to all kinds of destructive influences. Dr. Sars, indeed, thought that as the eggs of the cod sink when placed in fresh water, it is probable that a heavy fall of rain may affect floating eggs and cause their death.

Chemical pollutions, oil, etc., decayed matter, must kill these floating eggs, and when heavy seas break on sandy shores, incredible numbers of eggs must be thrown on the beach and die there. Dr. Johan Hjort, of Bergen, Norway, in one of his important reports says: "We know, of course, that the destruction of cod eggs and young fish when they hatch out in the surface waters must be enormous; and were this not so, the sea would soon become over populated with cod."

One In Seventy

Professor Apstein, a distinguished authority on oceanic life, calculated that at least seventy eggs are required the Director gave his personal note to produce one hatched larval cod; that is to say, sixty-nine out of every seventy eggs are eaten by enemies or killed by unfavorable conditions of various kinds. It is difficult to determine in the sea with any exactness the total loss of eggs and fry in the case of a single female fish each year, but one writer has expressed his opinion that not more than one in a thousand young salmon in our rivers becomes an adult fish. A female salmon produces five to ten or twelve thousand 12,000, eggs annually, and there is a great loss amongst the eggs due to non-fertilization, to fungus, drought, ice, pollutions and predaceous enemies, so that it is clearly an overestimate to say that the result from the spawning of a single salmon cannot be more than three to five or six adult fish per year. This estimate is far too favorable.

Recently a British observer studied the losses in the case of a small river fish, the English roach. He calculated that 7,500,000 of roach eggs were deposited on weeds, roots, etc., in a stretch of fifty yards around the bank of the lake. He observed ducks and water birds, schools of other fish, especially eels, devour them both day and night, so that in four or five days only about 10,000 eggs were left. These surviving eggs were in scattered patches and escaped destruction, and most of them hatched out young fish.

Few Reach Adult Stage. ...

Now if only one in 750 deposited eggs yielded a young fish, and it is probable that a very large proportion of young fish themselves perish, so that very few reach the adult stage, and the probability is that 1,500 roach eggs would be required to produce a single adult fish.

Nature has omitted no means whereby the supply of fish may be kept up, and especially by overproduction of eggs far in excess of anything that is necessary to keep up the normal number of fishes. She has made it certain that in spite of the inroads of enemies, and the destruction by natural and artificial causes, the total extinction of these valuable food fishes is rendered impossible.

It is true the abundance of fish may be seriously reduced over different areas, but such a thing as the total extinction of fish in the sea must be regarded as an impossibility in view of the safeguards which have been referred to.

DON'T USE DANGEROUS ANTISEPTIC TABLETS

It is an unnecessary risk. Use the safe antiseptic and germicide, Absorbine, Jr.,—it kills germs quickly and surely without any possibility of harmful results, made of pure herbs, non-poisonous, and there is no danger whatever if the children get hold of the bottle. It retains its germicidal powers even when diluted one part Absorbine, Jr., to 100 parts of water—and its antiseptic powers one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts water.

The germicidal properties of Absorbine, Jr., have been tested and proven both in laboratory and actual practice. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

MILITARY MATTERS AT BARRIEFIELD HEIGHTS

A BIG TACTICAL SCHEME

At last definite plans for the big tactical scheme to be worked out by the soldiers at Barriefield can be made and the General Staff Officer, Lieut. Col. S. A. Thompson, is making arrangements so that this can be held next week.

It is planned that on Friday of next week every available man, of the camp will be in a parade to Lemoine's Point at the end of the King street west road. The parade will spend probably 24 hours in that district, and some of the most elaborate field manoeuvres will be on duty, and help in the carrying out of an attack on a given point.

The meals will be served probably by the School of Cookery system, and the men will spend the night on the ground under the stars. Each man will of course carry full equipment.

The final details have not yet been worked out. In all probability the date will be Friday and Saturday of next week.

LIEUT. YOUNG TO REPORT

Lieut. Young, formerly 155th Battalion who is in charge of the Machine Gun School at Barriefield, will report for duty on Monday. While at the front with the first contingent he was taken prisoner of war and was sent to a prison camp in Germany. A shell wound caused his hand to be crippled, and because of this and through clever work in getting by the doctors he was able to return to England and to Canada. While here he has been with the 155th Battalion, but his ability as a machine gun officer have been recognized he was appointed to the responsible position of being in charge of the Machine Gun School for the camp. This work has been carried on by Lieut. McGie, who will now be able to take over his section.

ATHLETIC BANDSMEN

155th Battalion Band Have Several Champion Athletes.

The Officers' Mess of the 155th Battalion is not only attractive to the press from a dietician standpoint but from the collection of trophies there which mark the wonderful athletic ability of men of the battalion. On Thursday there was on display two cups and a bronze medal which were won by J. G. Osler, of the 155th Band, in Trenton, on Wednesday. This man won first prize in the quarter mile and first in the 220 yards dash, and received cups for each event. The medal was presented to him for coming third in the 100 yards dash.

Arthur Rowland, another bandsman, won first in the musician's race, and Bandsman Wannacott won third in the same event.

COOLER WEATHER

Thursday and Friday the weather was more tolerable in camp. A breeze from the lakes has made Barriefield commons a place of delight for two days. There is no unusual excitement in camp, and very few civilians are visiting the camp during the day. Barriefield is maintaining its good name for conduct and discipline, and the men in training are giving evidence every day of their character as men and soldiers. Occasionally there is a deserter to be punished, and he is sent before a magistrate for trial and punishment. In some cases good stiff sentences have been imposed by way of warning to others. But in no case since the war began has Canada imposed the extreme penalty for desertion, which during active service is death. A sentence of two years is the heaviest that has been given so far.

VETERANS' CAMP FIRE.

Last night the Kingston Veterans' Association gave a concert and camp fire at the Military Y.M.C.A. in camp. There were songs, recitations, reminiscences, and a good program of instrumental music. The band of the 155th Battalion furnished the music, Lt.-Sol. Putman, Captain Wrightmeyer, Lieut. Cameron, Captain Doyle and others sang, and many a story of war and camp was told by men from campaigns reaching from the Crimea to the present war.

NOTES

Prof. Cameron, of Albert College, Belleville, is now Lieut. Cameron, of the 155th aBttalion.

The band of the 155th Battalion returned from the firemen's tournament at Trenton yesterday morning.

Brig.-General Hemming and a number of his staff will go to Belleville to-morrow for the presentation of colors to the 155th Battalion.

One man who got farm furlough has been located in a blacksmith's shop swinging the hammer. He has been ordered back to duty, and there is a rod in pickle for him on his return.

Lt.-Col. Wilson, D.A.A., and Q.M.G., will go to Belleville for the colors presentation to the 155th, and will officially represent the 49th regiment of which he is the commanding officer.

Lt.-Col. Adams has had a number of clean water barrels installed in the lines of the 155th, and an additional thousand pounds of ice daily will be taken so as to give the men ice water to drink these hot days.

Capt. Wrightmeyer, of the 155th Battalion, has three sons in the C.E.F. The captain has had 23 years in the Canadian militia, and felt it his duty to join the expeditionary force as well as give his sons.

Capt. W. S. Harper, 155th Battalion, C.E.F., is detailed as a member of the ration board, in report to the field officer of the day at the C.A.S.C., supply depot at 5.45 a.m., to-morrow the 28th inst.

Two new bandsmen have been secured for the 155th Battalion band.

Capt. Munro, medical officer 154th Battalion, is on leave in Cornwall, and Capt. T. McIlroy, Q.F.A., is looking after the battalion in his absence.

Major G. I. Campbell, chief recruiting officer, M.D. No. 3, and Capt. Dodds, 155th Battalion, will conduct a recruiting meeting in Picton on August 6th.

Lance-Corporal Hawthorne, 155th Battalion, has presented Lieut.-Col. M. K. Adams, commanding the 155th Battalion, with a match safe made out of moulded Barriefield clay. It is a fine piece of workmanship and artistically designed.

Capt. Dodds, chaplain 155th Battalion, will conduct three services in Belleville on Sunday. He will be in charge of the military service on the Amouries lawn at 9 a.m. and will also officiate at both morning and evening services in the Bridge street Methodist church.

The shield won by the Trenton platoon of the 155th Battalion is now in the officers' mess of the battalion and bears the following name sas the winners of the Victoria Day contest: J. Aoms, A. Hutchins, L. Comeau, F. Donnan, J. Smith, J. Downs, J. Pearson, O. De Sile, J. Potts, B. Young, M. Wannimaker, K. Packeu, Sergt. Mavin (captain.)

A Delightful Garden Party

Annual Event Tendered For The Benefit of Home of the Friendless

The annual Garden Party in connection with the Home of the Friendless, was held last evening on the spacious grounds of the Home, at the corner of Moira and Ponton Streets, and it proved to be not only a most delightful function, but was successful in every feature. The Home and grounds had been tastefully decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting, and as the shades of evening fell, numerous electric lights illuminated the building and grounds, whilst lighted Chinese lanterns added to the scene. There was a large attendance of spectators and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The I.O.O.F. band, under the leadership of bandmaster Blaind, gratuitously offered their services, and during the evening rendered in a most acceptably manner, a number of selections which were much appreciated. The playing of patriotic pieces, such as "Never Let the Old Flag Fall," and "Tipperary," were very pleasing to the aged inmates of the home, one of whom requested the band to play the latter selection, which they graciously did. There are at the present time 8 in the Home, four females and four males, and they were not forgotten by many present, who procured for them ice cream and other dainties which it is needless to say were heartily relished. Whilst the ice cream and candy booths were liberally patronized, the fish pond was a great attraction, especially to the younger element present. The proceeds of the affair was gratifying in every respect, and to Mrs. Minnie Connors, the genial and indefatiguable matron, and the ladies of the W.C.A., who are conected with Home work of the Association, is due great credit for the success of the party.

The Smallest Capital.

From the tourist point of view Cetinje is probably the least interesting as well as the smallest of European capitals. The principal building is the ancient monastery, in front of which is the old palace, now the home of the bishop and still known as "The Billiards," because until recently it boasted the first and only billiard table in the kingdom. The new palace is a modest chocolate colored villa, and by far the most imposing buildings in the little city are the Russian and Austrian consulates.—London Globe.

Sensibility.

Two highly respectable citizens of Brooklyn were strolling past the old Kings county penitentiary, now nothing but a memory. They noticed a gang of convicts working on the road and paused to watch the prisoners, who appeared to be harder than the stones they were breaking. The guard, a tough looking man, came along and said:

"Beg pardon, gentlemen. You will have to move on. It embarrasses the boys to have their friends see them in such a predicament."—New York Post.

NORTHERN ONTARIO FIRES HAVE FATAL RESULTS

Cochrane, Mathison, Iroquois Falls, Nushka, Poiquis Junction and Other Places Swept by Flames—Death Rate Runs up to About 184

ENGLEHART, Ont., July 31.—(Specail.)—Forest fires, which for several days have been threatening the northernmost towns and the outlying settlements of northern Ontario, to-day and yesterday culminated in a holocaust which has wiped out entire communities, licked the fringe of larger towns, and levied a death toll which cannot at present be accurately computed, but which may range from 140 to 200, with scores of persons suffering from injuries, many of whom are likely to succumb. The loss of life so far reported is as follows:

At Nushka, a French-Canadian settlement, fifty-seven.

Cochrane, eighteen dead, thirty-four injured.

Matheson, thirty-four dead.

Iroquois Falls, fifteen dead and many injuried.

Porquis Junction, number unknown, but the town wiped out with the exception of the station.

Ramore, fifteen dead. In addition to the known dead there are many outlying places, which, it is feared, will materially swell the list of victims when the rescue parties return. It is thought that at Tashota and Kowkash many prospectors may have been trapped.

RUSSIAN DRIVE STILL IN FORCE

To Date They Have Captured 350,000 Teutons—Stanislau is Menaced

LONDON, July 31.—(Special.)—On both wings of the present Russian line of attack Gen. Brusiloff's armies made further important headway during the last twenty-four hours. As a result the city of Stanislau, in southeastern Galicia, the converging point of five strategic railways, is closely menaced with envelopment by the Russian left flank, while the right wing in its advance on Kovel, the great Volhynian railway centre, has broken through the teuton first lines on the Kovel-Rochitche sector and is now retreating defenders. In the centre, too, where Lemberg, capital of Galicia, is the Russian objective, further progress was made by the army of General Sakharoff. On the whole 150-mile front, from the east of Kovel down to the region just south of the Dniester, the Germans and Austrians continue on the defensive, stubbornly fighting for every inch of ground.

350,000 Captured to Date.

In yesterday's fighting the Russians took 21 officers and 940 men among them many Germans, and captured four guns and four machine guns.

The total number of Teuton prisoners taken in the first half of the Russian summer campaign just closing is placed at 350,000 by a semi-official estimate given out in the Russian capital.

GENERAL HUGHES TO COMPLETE ORGANIZATION OF CANADIANS

LONDON, July 31.—(Special.)—General Sir Sam Hughes, accompanied by Major Bassett and Captain Grumer, arrived in London this afternoon, two days later than expected, the delay being due, he said, to some boiler trouble. The party was met by Col. Sir Max Aitken, General Carson and Col. Murphy.

General Hughes stated that the main object of his visit was to continue the work of reorganization of the Canadian forces in England and at the front, which had to be suspended two months ago owing to his return to Ottawa. He also proposed inspecting all the Canadians in camp, and would probably before his return pay another visit to France.

He will review troops at Shorncliffe on Thursday, when the overseas Parliamentary delegates will attend.

Sir Sam made special reference to recruiting among the French-Canadians, and while it had not been on the same scale as the rest of the recruiting in Canada at the beginning of the war, it was now picking up in a marked degree, indeed it was more than satisfactory.

Three London papers have in the course of the past week advocated a public welcome to General Hughes, whom they hail as the Lord Kitchener of Canada.

PRESENTATION OF COLORS TO 155TH

A Memorable Gathering at Belleville Armories--Thousands of Hastings and Prince Edward Residents Attend Function--Colors Gift of Argyle Chapter, Daughters of the Empire--Prominent Speakers Address the Assemblage

For the third time within a period of fourteen months the presentation of colors to battalions recruited in this city and vicinity took place on Saturday afternoon, and upon each occasion it was a memorable event. On Friday, June 11th, 1915, the 39th Battalion commanded by Lt.-Col. Preston, was presented with colors, the same being the gift of the members of the Women's Canadian Club of Belleville. On Thursday, April 20th, 1916, the 80th Battalion, commanded by Lt.-Col. Ketcheson, received its colors being the gift of the Ketcheson family of Hastings county.

LIEUT.-COL. ADAMS
Commanding Officer.

On Saturday last the 155th Battalion which was recruited in Hastings and Prince Edward counties received their set of colors, which was the gift of the Argyle Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire of Belleville. This battalion is under command of Lt.-Col. Adams of Picton, who is deservedly a most popular officer. The battalion has been for some weeks in training at Barriefield Camp, and as was expressed by one of the speakers it is a battalion second to none in the third military district. The marching of the men and the accuracy of movements executed by them bore out the compliment paid them.

The battalion was conveyed to the city by two special trains over the Canadian Northern Railway; the second section arriving at the depot about 11 o'clock in the morning. Hundreds of citizens and friends were at the station, and the brave soldier boys were certainly accorded a hearty reception. After all had detrained the battaion was formed up and headed by the fine battalion band, (which, by the way, has under the able leadership of Bandmaster Hinchey, developed into a fine musical organization) marched up Pinnacle street to Victoria avenue, down Victoria avenue to Front street. and thence up Bridge street to the Armouries, where the rifles for the time being were deposited. The streets were lined with admirers of the battalion, and cheer after cheer was accorded the men, all of whom appeared to be pleased at the opportunity of again visiting Belleville. The men were then dismissed until 2 o'clock, when they returned for parade to receive the colors.

At a few minutes after 2 o'clock the battalion was reformed in the armouries, and marched out of the western entrance to Pinnacle street, and thence up Bridge street to the armouries' parade ground, where the interesting ceremony took place. The battalion was about 1000 strong, and the men certainly presented an appearance which was most commendable and inspiring, every man looking like a true soldier. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Col. Hemming of Kingston, officer-commanding of the third military division, Col. S. S. Lazier of Belleville, took the Royal Salute, and also formally inspected the Battalion going up and down each line. The battalion band was present and played suitable selections. The colors were then brought forward and placed crosswise upon two drums.

The colors are most beautiful in every respect. One flag is made of red silk. It bears the inscription and crest of the battalion, and is adorned with gold trimmings. The second flag is the Union Jack, the King's colors, and is also of silk. Both flags are trimmed with gold fringe.

PRESENTING THE COLORS

After one verse of the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers' had been sung, the band playing the tune, Capt. Rev. Thomas Dodds, chaplain of the battalion, consecrated the colors, following which an appropriate prayer was offered. At the conclusion of this part of the ceremony, Major Allen and Col. Putman came forward and knelt in front of the drums for the purpose of receiving the colors, the presentation being made by Mrs. Geo. Wallbridge, First Vice Regent of Argyle Chapter, and Mrs. A. P. Allen, second Vice Regent of the Chapter.

Mrs. S. W. Vermilyea, Regent of the Chapter, read the following address:—

To the Officer Commanding, Officers, N.C.O.'s. and Men of the 155th Battalion, C.E.F.

The Argyle Chapter of the I.O.D.E., feel honoured that they have been permitted to offer you the Colors for your battalion.

Your unit, recruited from the Bay of Quinte district, is largely representative of those pioneers, who, over a century ago, left homes of comfort to hew for themselves new homes amid the primeval forests of Canada, nor deemed the price too dear since they would still be British subjects.

Springing from such stock, we know that every member of your battalion, from the bugler to the officer commanding, will display the same indomitable courage in the face of the enemy as their forefathers did in times past, nor count the sacrifice of even life itself too great, if that by so doing, British supremacy may be maintained and right prevail.

Our Canadian soldiers, who have gone before you to fight the battles of the Empire on the soils of Belgium and France, have made a name for themselves that will endure so long as history is written, nor will you, when your opportunity arrives, be less gallant than they.

In presenting you with these colors, we do so with mingled feelings of pride and sorrow. We are proud of our battalion, for so we feel it to be, and for the gentlemanly behavior of its men while with us, but we grieve that it heralds your departure from among us.

When you go from us, we will watch hopefully for the honors which we feel assured your battalion will win, and we will pray fervently for your safe and victorious return, for that you would return without victory is inconceivable.

And now, Sir, I deliver to you, on the behalf of the Argyle Chapter of the I.O.D.E., these colors, the white of which is symbolical of the purity of your motives, the blue, the right and justice of the cause in which you are embarked, and the red, the courage of your men.

These colors are but a slight token of our affection and esteem. They are blessed, however, by our earnest prayers, and we trust that they will prove a talisman of encouragement and goodluck. As you are going forth to fight in our defence, kindly accept them from us, and by so doing place us under another obligation to you.

Again, we wish you Good-speed on your voyage and a safe return to your homes.

When Mrs. Vermilyea had concluded the reading of the address she handed to Col. Adams an envelope containing a cheque for $100 to be applied to the battalion funds. The gift was from the members of the Argyle Chapter.

An escort then marched to where the colors were located and they were handed to and placed in the custody of Lieutenant Porter and Lieutenant Wilson. A general salute was next accorded the colors, and the band played the National Anthem. The escort and the two standard bearers then slowly, to an impressive slow march played by the band, marched around the battalion, the colors being carried aloft. At the conclusion of this part of the ceremony, speech-making was the order of the day.

At the northern entrance of the armouries a platform had been erected, and it was appropriately decorated with flags and bunting. A number of ladies and gentlemen occupied seats thereon prominent amongst the latter being Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Hon. Henry H. Corby, Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P., Col. Ponton, Col. Barragar, H. F. Ketcheson, Esq., Mayor of Belleville and Mr. E. E. Horsey.

About the outside of the spacious armouries' grounds, thousands of interested spectators from the city and vicinity were assembled to witness the interesting event.

Owing to the excessive heat and the fact that the members of the battalion were rather tired after their marches etc., the speeches made were brief, but to the point, and elicited the applause of those who were privileged to hear them.

The Chairman E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P.

Col. Adams, officers, men of the 155th staff officers, ladies and gentlemen:

I very greatly appreciate the honour done me by requesting me to preside at this loyal and patriotic gathering.

It is not unusual in these days to witness manifestations of loyalty and patriotism not only in Canada but throughout the whole of he great British Empire.

It is a great source of satisfaction and we may with pardonable pride refer to the fact that no part of that great British Empire has responded with greater alacrity or with greater enthusiasm to the call of duty or displayed greater loyalty or heroism on the field of battle than the sons of Canada.

With the honour and glory they have already won for themselves it is no matter for surprise that we love them, that we honour them and that we put our faith and confidence to the fullest extent in them never fearing but that our freedom and liberty are in safe keeping when in their hands.

It is fitting then that we gather together on this occasion to express in a public manner by delivering to the noble officers and men of the 155th an emblem of the Empire's greatness and a token of the hope and love of donors who will present it and of all whose hearts will go with it to the very end, even if carried upon the blood-stained battlefield of Europe.

Our hope is that it may never do other duty than peacefully unfold itself above the heads of the 155th Battalion a silent token of love and regard, but if fate should so decree we are confident that in the brave hands in which it shall be held in the hour of trial it will always float as the signal of victory.

We see in these noble young men composing the 155th Battalion, with whom we have met to-day, "The Flower of the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward." Men who are offering the greatest sacrifice men can make, and all to uphold the foundation stones upon which the British Empire is built—"Liberty and Freedom" we enjoy.

For the great sacrifice they are making, they are deserving of the greatest sacrifices we can make on their behalf..

I am not unmindful of the grand and noble work that has been and is now being done by the ladies of this city, and these counties for the comfort, convenience and betterment of our soldiers. They are deserving of every

SPECIAL DISCOURSES IN LOCAL CHURCHES

Chaplain Rev. Thomas Dodds of the 155th Battalion in Bridge Street Church—Bishop Brewing Preaches at Re-opening of Emmanuel Church—Anniversary Service at Baptist Church

AT BRIDGE STREET CHURCH

It had been generally understood that the 155th Battalion would worship in a body at Bridge Street Methodist church on Sunday morning, but a later decision of the military heads gave the soldiers the privilege of holding a service at nine o'clock, thus giving the opportunity to visit with families and friends. However, a large congregation assembled to hear Captain (the Rev.) Thomas Dodds, the populor chaplain of the 155th, who preached an excellent sermon from Exodus 14-15: "Wherefore criest though unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

The preacher advocated a forward movement if success was to be obtained in the Christian warfare—the opening or deliverance was always ahead, never in the rear. The backward step meant defeat. With the Red Sea in front, mountains on each side, and the armies of Pharaoh at the rear the situation appeared desperate for the children of Israel. It was God's business to open the way in front, which he did to the salvation of his own people, and the destruction of the enemy.

We cannot go back; we need not retire, declared the preacher. Our business is to move onward and trust the mighty God of Israel for results. God is for his faithful people first, last and always; his resources are limitless, and his methods practical. As Pharaoh's armies were not permitted to follow in the opening made for the children of Israel, neither will the enemy of our souls be permitted to partake of the deep and blessed experiences provided for those who are faithful to their trust. Safety alone is in the forward movement.

During the service solos were rendered by Miss Maysel Stork and Lieut. Dan A. Cameron. Mr. F. E. O'Flynn introduced the preacher of the day. Rev. Mr. Dodds also at the evening service.

AT EMMANUEL CHURCH

The re-opening of this church, following a suspension of services for three weeks to give opportunity for repairs, occurred Sunday. Bishop Willard Brewing of Toronto, assisted the rector, Rev. A. M. Hubly. This reverend gentleman, one of the most pleasing preachers who occasionally visits our city, preached two excellent sermons.

He was delighted to see the property in such good condition and hoped that it might be made a great blessing to the members of the congregation and through them to the community at large.

The subject of the morning discourse was "What and Where is the Kingdom of God?" based on the petition in the Lord's prayer: "Thy Kingdom come." The word kingdom was defined at the domain of rule and authority. The kingdoms of the world come and go, but the Kingdom of Jesus Christ is inviolate and inviolable. This kingdom is within you if you are a citizen of it. Christ said: "The Kingdom is within you." Men may profess, or claim to belong to a kingdom and yet violate its laws and abuse it privileges.

Only as the kingdom is within the heart will men be loyal, and the kingdom be truly effective. The British kingdom among all the kingdoms of the world, has solved the problem of empire building by not only adding colonies but making them integral parts of the Empire.

Jesus Christ is King of kings and Lord of lords, because He is King of His people, who are all made kings and priests unto God. The subjects of the Kingdom of God are kingly, and each one have within the principles of the kingdom, and manifest in a more or less degree the character of their King.

In the evening the discourse was taken from Hebrews 12-1: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

Running a race—a contest in which we meet with much opposition; a relay race in which each is supposed to run his course, to be taken up and extended by the next in order; the runner runs his best—his course is set in the midst of winners of races by whom he is encouraged to do his utmost; the winner of a contest knows what the race means, hence his encouragement means much to the runner; we run best when encouraged; therefore the need of encouraging others. Give God your best—the cream of your talents. Noah built the ark through a period of 120 years, against great opposition, but he built well, and when the flood came he was prepared for the

HOSKINS—DOWNEY.

On July the fifth the home of Mr and Mrs James Downey was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their youngest daughter, Laura, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr Arthur Hoskins of Halloway. The ceremony was performed at high noon by the Rev. Mr Huffman of Plainfield, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends of the contracting parties. As the wedding march was being played by Mrs W. Parks, the bride entered the drawing-room leaning on the arm of her father and took her place under a bell hung in an arch of evergreens and roses. The bride was attired in white embroidered voile and wore a bridal veil fastened with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white carnations, while Miss Mary Colden acted as bridesmaid and carried pink carnations, and Mr Percy Hoskins, brother of the groom, performed honors for the groom. After the nuptial knot had been tied the bridal party marched to a tent on the lawn, where they partook of a sumptuous dinner, at which the health of the happy couple was toasted by the guests. The interior of the home had been beautifully decorated for the event with flags and flowers. The bride is a popular young lady who has a host of friends who wish her every wedded felicity. The large number of wedded gifts which she received gave evidence of this. The bride's travelling suit was navy blue silk with white lace hat. In the afternoon they started for a trip West and upon their return they will reside near Halloway, where Mr Hoskins is a prosperous young farmer.

Return of Sergt. Chas. A. Gibson

Arrives in the City Unbeknown to Friends and Is Driven Home Behind 'Dick' Arnott's Grey Pony

No one had the slightest inkling that the C.P.R. train from Montreal, due here at 3 P.M. Sunday, would convey Sergeant Charles A. Gibson to his home, as no news had been received of his coming, other than the official notice received by Mrs. Gibson, and published in The Intelligencer on Saturday. As soon as the S. S. Matagama docked at Quebec, Sergeant Gibson headed for Monatreal on the first train, and without delay may his way toward the comforts of home in old Belleville.

Arriving here, and finding no conveyance at hand, he was about to telephone for a hack when "Dick" Arnott and his grey pony hove in sight and took him in. My! but Dick was glad to see Charlie. It wasn't an hour before the arrival was heralded throughout the city, in Sunday Schools and elsewhere, the news getting to Mayor Ketcheson and Dr. MacColl, who immediately captured the returned soldier and whirled him down town, to be greeted by military officials, including Col. Adams, in lieu of the demonstration that was intended to be extended. After all, the home-coming was pleasing to both the returned and the waiting friends. Sergeant Gibson will rest for a few days, as he has not quite recovered from the terrible nerve-shock received when wounded at the front. Anyhow, it's good to know that he has lived to return home.

Loss Has Been Rather Exaggerated

Canadian Press Special.

TORONTO, July 31.— Premier Hearst, who with Hon. Ferguson has been on duty since telegrams were received reporting fires in the north, received information this morning that reports of loss had been exaggerated. The total missing added to bodies recovered, accounts for 184 people, and Government says that is the outside limit. The business section of Cochrane and entire town of Matheson has been destroyed. Since last night thirty-seven more bodies have been found at Nushka which brings the total to 184. Relief work is all under way. The Militia Department is sending three officers and one hundred men to the district. Supplies are being rushed, and Mr. Dane, Loan Commissioner, will be authorized to advance money from the Northern Ontario fund, so settlers may rebuild their homes. The district relief vote cannot be made until Legislature meets.

There has been no rain in Porcupine district for two months, and timber was as dry as powder. It was quite possible that the fire started from spontaneous combustion, said Hon. Mr Ferguson, who declared that woodsmen in the north country will tell you fires often start from that cause among those woods which are mostly balsam, spruce and pine. Within the limits of the burned section, wires are all down, and banks and mining brokers as well as anxious relatives, are all vainly trying to get information.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

WHO ARE SAINTS

By Rev. A. M. Hubly.

"He will keep the feet of His Saints," I Sam. ii., 9.

"He"—"The high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity"—"whose goings forth have been from old, from everlasting"—"He will keep the feet of His saints"—Who are they? Not only those who are presented by certain systems of religion, as objects of worship and adoration because of something they had not done while on earth.

"We believe in the communion of saints." It may be that the large number of such communions at present time are glorified, having been translated into the heavenlies, and are now members of the Church triumphant, but their feet no longer need Divine keeping; they are no longer in danger of treading unsanctified paths. These have gained the goal of all striving against sin. They are the finished work of the ministry of grace and truth, and have been presented "faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy." The feet of those, made forever perfect, need no "keeping"; "none of their steps shall slide." But God has His saints on earth to-day, as He had in that far-off day when Hannah, the mother of Samuel, gave utterance to these soul-staying words of insspiration. Her feet had been guided to Shiloh, the appointed place of worship. There she chanted her magnificate.

Many things in the common experiences of human life contribute to that soul culture which is necessary to the glad expectation and happy confidence in God which Hannah manifested by her outburst of thankful and prophetic praise. She knew disappointments. She experienced bitterness of soul. She prayed unto the Lord, and wept sore. She had borne the pains and perils of motherhood, going down to the waters of death, and bringing up upon her bosom a child, a precious soul to train up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

Tender love and sweet affectionate solicitation for baby boys are common to mothers who desire their sons to become good and true men.

As the mother looks upon the babe of her bosom, what would she not suffer and do to assure the safety of these little feet amid the ruins of sin, so apparent on every hand? In herself she is helpless. The evidences of the mighty forces of evil operating all about, with tempting fascinations to allure the feet of the young into bye and forbidden paths, forces upon her the deplorable fact of her own impotence.

No man is strong enough in his own power, to successfully cope with either his spiritual adversary or the storms of life, nor is he able to keep his feet, in which is the power of locomotion, from snares of sin and pitfalls, the entanglements of sin and death traps strewn along his earthly path by the enemies of righteousness.

Samson, while walking in the counsel of Jehovah, had the strength of a thousand giants, and had power to overcome a nation of enemies; but when he turned his feet from the way of obedience to the Word of the Lord, he was led captive by the wiles of a silly woman.

Aseph said: "My feet were almost gone; my steps had well-night slipped. For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked." As a saint of God his feet were kept in the way of truth, and when he entered the sanctuary he had a vision of life's realities, and so understood the end of the wicked, that he decided to, for ever afterward, be led by God's counsel.

"Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary." Here is safety. As a wise mother, Hannah brought her child to Shiloh, that he might become one of "God's saints." She left him to be instructed and to serve in the sanctuary. When we think of the Almighty in His relation to the rolling eons, with their passing events so multitudinous and so varied in size and import; and these again, in their relation to the coming and going generations, and to the rise and fall of nations and kingdoms, how stupendous and yet how sweet and tender the thought that not one of His saints are neglected, even to the making of a misstep.

O the height and depth of grace and mercy! The Supreme Ruler who guides and controls all dispensations, epochs and events, will also keep the feet of stumbling, faltering beings such as we and our children.

How tender in His mightiness is God! How mighty in His tenderness! Happy and blessed indeed is the mother who can so realize this, that she can with glad assurance commit the keeping of her beloved child to Him, rather than hold him in her own care and doubtful power to protect from harm. Hannah surrendered her God-given boy to the service of the tabernacle, and with enlarged hope and higher aspiration, and with new, clearer vision of God's outpouring love, and with a deeper knowledge and appreciation of His keeping power and guiding hand; her heart rejoiced, and her mouth was filled by the Holy Spirit with a song of thanksgiving.

"He will keep the feet of His saints"—Who are they? Saved sinners. A new condition of life effected by repentence, faith and obedience toward God.

"Born again" through the power of a Divine Saviour: "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of man, but of God."

"I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." This is a terrible fact. But over against stands another: "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. This gift brings soul change. The prodigal comes to himself, and by the exercise of new volitions he changes his position in relation to his former life. He will to arise and go to his father. He is no longer what he was—an unclean, hungery exile. The swine and the husks are behind him, his face is toward the old home, with its "enough and to spare." His feet are no longer in the slippery mud and mire of the sty, but are firmly treading the adamantine pavement of the King's highway.

This is conversion, and conversion is sainthood, with the feet kept in the way of Life Eternal.

How They Say It In South America.

The mission schools in South America yield a rich harvest of mistakes in English, such as are always imminent because of the close similarity between Spanish and English. The consonants "b" and "v" in Spanish are practically interchangeable. A teacher, having given some dictation to her class, was therefore not so astonished as amused to have it come back to her:

Then give to the world the vest you have,
And the vest will come back to you.

The same teacher has kept a collection of some other slips which need no explanation. "I don't could." "A pigeon with a rag tied round its paw." "My father is very thick." "My watch is not well; it is anticipate." "I have to wash my hair very often because it is so fat."

Not With Malice.

"Look here," said the head of the firm, "I want to give you a pointer."

"Yes, sir," the office boy respectfully replied.

"If I hear you humming any more popular songs around here I'll discharge you."

"All right. I don't do it no more. I wouldn't of done it this time only me lips is sore and I can't whistle."

Remembrance.

"Every time you see a pretty girl you forget that you are married," his better half complained bitterly.

"On the other hand, my dear," he replied sadly, "nothing brings home to me the fact with so much force."

After which war and tariff seemed pretty tame affairs.

A Difficult Task.

"What does he do for a living?"
"Writes jokes for the funny papers."
"What kind?"
(Absently) "Oh, humorous ones, I suppose."

Scientific Order.

Mr. Pessimist—What is a consulting specialist anyhow? Mr. Optimist—Oh, he's the big doctor that says you are going to die and tells you how to do it properly.

The Remedy.

"Bill seems to be afraid to think for himself."

"Then he'd better get married."

No Value Received.

Barkus—Thingembob married for money. Bitus—His wife didn't get the worth of her wealth.

HAND-TO-HAND GRENADE FIGHTING FAVORABLE TO ALLIES

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, July 31.—(Afternoon statement.)—To the north of the Somme towards the close of yesterday evening and in the course of the night, Germans multiplied their counter-attacks against our positions in Pem wood and on Monacu farm. Fighting was particularly violent around Monacu Farm where the enemy succeeded for a moment in gaining a foothold, but the brilliant offensive return of our troops regained possession of this. At Pem Wood all enemy attempts were repulsed by our fire. During these attacks the fire of our batteries on the left bank of the river enfiladed enemy troops and inflicted heavy losses on them. On the left bank of the Meuse German attack against northeast slopes of Hill No 304 failed under our fire. On the right bank a minor operation enabled us to advance in the region southwest of Fleury and to capture some twenty prisoners. An enemy grenade attack against the western portion of Vaux Lechapitre Wood was unsuccessful.

A REFUNDING PLAN FOR WESTERN CANADA.

The offering in New York last week of $1,000,000 of Manitoba's and $1,000,000 of Saskatchewan's ten-year bonds, is apparently made in connection with the scheme for retiring certain Canadian debts in London and refunding them in New York. Part of the present issues in New York are 4½'s and part are 5's. The price of the 4½'s is, we understand, 93½ less ¼ of 1 per cent. This financing, therefore, is done on approximately a 5⅛ per cent. basis.

Much has been heard as to the large saving to be effected by purchasing the securities in London and reselling them in New York, but unless there are some factors of which the general bond market is not cognizant, it is difficult to see that the saving will be substantial, even if there is any at all. The Western borrowers are paying 80 and interest for the securities which are being mobilized in London. Taking into consideration the profit in exchange, less the shipping and insurance charges, the purchase price would be reduced to about 78½, which is approximately a 5⅛ per cent. basis. Without considering the suggestion heard in some quarters that a higher price than 80 has recently had to be paid in London for the bonds, these figures indicate that the securities are being sold to the investor on exactly the same basis at which they are being bought in London, namely 5⅛ per cent., only in the case of the sale in the United States, that figure makes no allowance for expenses, which we understand are in the neighborhood of 2⅛ per cent. The question of saving, therefore, seems to come down to the possibility of again refunding, in London, at a lower basis, say, at the end of ten years. It is difficult to understand why the new bonds should have been offered so cheaply, as the basis is substantially lower than the current New York quotations. This is emphasized by the new offering of Greater Winnipeg Water District bonds in New York on a 5¼ per cent. basis, as compared with 5⅛ per cent. for the Manitoba and Saskatchewan issues.

Advices from London seem to indicate that it is unlikely that the large holders of these Western securities in the United Kingdom will sell at the price mentioned, 80 and interest, because such a sale necessitates the burden of a very heavy capital loss and it is difficult, if not impossible, to reinvest the proceeds to any better advantage. While there are available Government securities yielding 6 per cent., these are short-term issues and cannot therefore be considered in this connection. The talk of many millions of Canadian securities, now in London, coming on the New York market during the next few months should be accepted with reserve, in fact present indications are that the total amount will be relatively small. Unfortunately these rumors have already disturbed conditions in the New York market so far as Canadian securities are concerned, the inference being that "bargains" will soon be on the counter,—in the opinion of "The Monetary Times" an unwarrantable conclusion.

Nelson, B.C., Daily News: The Conservative Government stands for stability. The Liberal leaders' record promises nothing but instability and the province had enough of unstable governments prior to 1903, when Sir Richard McBride took office and brought order out of chaos. Stability of government is essential if the people of the province are to prosper and the natural resources be developed. The internal dissensions among the Liberals and their inability to offer a definite policy and their general conduct in opposition proves that they are unfitted to undertake the administration of provincial affairs. A Liberal administration at this time would undermine the confidence of those upon whom the province depends for the capital for its development and the maintenance of its industrial and commercial progress. A Liberal administration would be a danger which the people have too much wisdom to risk. The Brewster writ alone is sufficient warning.

Mail and Empire: Captain Fryatt, of the Great Eastern Railway Steamship Brussels, has met his fate at the hands of the Huns. On March 28, 1915, he brought his vessel safely out of an encounter with a German submarine. A month ago his vessel was captured by German warships lying in wait for him at Zeebrugge as he was sailing from Rotterdam to Tilbury. It is understood that the capture of his ship was facilitated by an enemy passenger who masqueraded as an American and sent signals to the Zeebrugge warships. The captain was tried by court martial for attempting to ram the German submarine from which he saved his vessel in 1915. He was convicted, sentenced to be shot, and was at once executed. This example of Hun barbarity will not be lost on the Allies. They will fight the better for it, and the Kaiser will pay dearly for it.

* * *

Count Zeppelin says the Kaiser has granted his advisers a free hand in the use of submarines and Zeppelins and that "vital blows" will soon be struck. Germany, with its armies tasting the bitterness of defeat and its people starving, is evidently to attempt another campaign of frightfulness with the idea of scaring its enemies into a premature peace. It will only add to the score which Germany must pay when the inevitable day of reckoning comes.

CANADA CONTROLS ALL NICKEL SALES

NEW YORK, July 29.—Special—James L. Ashley, treasurer of the International Nickel Co., to-day reiterated that all sales of nickel made by his company since the beginning of the war have been under the supervision and control of the Canadian Government. Speaking of an alleged interview referred to in Canadian papers in which he is quoted as saying that "he knew nothing of the reported refusal of the company to sell nickel to Germany," and that "the company could not refuse to sell nickel to any purchaser," Mr. Ashley denied that he ever gave any interview whatever upon this subject, and denied that the statements which he is alleged to have made are correct.

JULY.

When the scarlet cardinal tells her dream to the dragon-fly,
And the lazy breeze makes a nest in the trees,
And murmurs a lullaby,
It is July.

When the tangled cobweb pulls
The corn-flower's cup awry,
And the lilies tall lean over the wall
To bow to the butterfly,
It is July.

When the heat like a mist veil floats,
And poppies flame in the rye,
And the silver note in the streamlet's throat
Has softened almost to a sigh,
It is July.

When the hours are so still that time
Forgets them and lets them lie
'Neath petals pink till the night stars wink
At the sunset in the sky,
It is July.

Queer Tail of a Bird.

Signal officer of the birds' army corps is the racket tailed humming bird. For his duties nature has equipped him with a pair of purple flags fashioned out of two long and peculiar tail feathers. He wigwags his signals from one tree to another, issues his challenges to battle and courts his mate. When he's not signaling he's sipping honey from the flowers and trying to keep his tail from entangling itself in the briars.

He's a midget of the South American mountains. He has short wings, which he operates at lightning speed. His tail is a combination of two wirelike handles, with a purple tuft of feathers at the end of each. He crosses them near the middle, and sometimes he brings the pair of "rackets" at the ends to his head, as though trying to fan himself.

The male birds have a sort of love dance which they engage in during the mating season. Then they play all sorts of tricks with the rackets.—Philadelphia North American.

Australia's Stony Desert.

The great stony desert of north Australia was discovered by Captain Sturt, an Australian explorer, in 1845-6. It is north of the river Darling and is about 300 miles long and 100 broad, consisting of sandy dunes or ridges. Its want of trees, except along the creeks, gives the country a sterile appearance. These ridges were probably formed by the joint effect of winds and a gradually retiring sea. According to Captain Sturt, these waters were gradually lost by evaporation or carried to some undiscovered sea. The only vegetation, growing scantily, is prickly acacias in full bloom, all of stunted growth. Water is scarce except in the creeks which are sheltered, and this is generally brackish. Few travelers care to traverse this inhospitable desert.

"Julia, do you know what love is?"

The love sick young man put the question in an intense voice.

"Yes," replied the fair maid firmly.

"But do you really know?" he asked again. "Have you ever been the object of a love as undying as the sun, as all pervading as the air, as wonderful and sparkling as the stars? Have you ever loved and been loved like that, Julia?"

In an agony of suspense he waited for her reply.

"Have I?" she presently murmured, staring thoughtfully into the glowing fire. "If you will come up into our box room I can show you a trunk full of letters and three albums full of photographs, and in my jewel case are seven engagement rings!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Deadly Industry.

One of the most deadly callings and one of which very little is known is that of the workers in champagne cellars. The work, which is light and without any obvious elements of risk to health, consists in turning over the bottles of champagne so that the wine may be clear and transparent and absolutely free from sediment. The men who do this work spend eight or ten hours a day in the dark wine cellars, turning over bottles by the thousand. This monotonous duty they discharge day after day in semidarkness, in a high temperature, unhealthy atmosphere and absolute solitude. These combined conditions affect the nerves and health of the workers so seriously that few of them can continue at their posts until middle age.—London Mirror.

Method In Their Madness.

After having her blood curdled badly by a thrilling story Mrs. Kurious was angry to find that it ended in an advertisement for somebody's tooth powder.

With a pout she threw the paper containing the deception across the room.

"What's the matter, dearie?" asked her hubby.

Mrs. Kurious told him her trouble and wound up with the remark:

"Now, Jeremiah, I know why the Chinese people begin reading at the end instead of the beginning. Their intelligence is greater than ours."—London Mail.

Gothic Architecture.

The styles called Gothic, springing from a common source in Romanesque architecture and developing throughout western Europe on differing lines, are in general characterized by the following features, although not all of these will be found in all examples:

Ribbed vaulting, pointed arches, the flying arch and pinnacled buttress, clustered shafting, traceried windows in all but the earliest phases, stained glass, a progressive tendency toward loftiness, lightness of supports and suppression of wall surfaces, a system of decoration of which one element was the emphasis and adornment of structural features and another the use of sculpture and carving of human, animal, vegetable and grotesque forms, controlled by a definite didactic purpose and significance, and finally the use of available materials according to their nature upon principles in part of structural logic and in part of decorative effect.—A. D. F. Hamlin in Architectural Record.

National Flags.

If the question were asked which country's national flag had been longest in use the answer would be either the dragon banner of China or the chrysanthemum flag of Japan. The former has been used from a very early period, and the latter is as old as the present dynasty in Japan, which is the most ancient in the world.

Among European national flags that of Denmark, a white St. George's cross on a red ground, is the most ancient, having been in use since 1219. No other flag has existed without change for anything like the same period as a national emblem, although there are royal standards that are older.

The Spanish colors date only from 1785, and Great Britain's flag in its present form was first flown after the union with Ireland in 1801. The stars and stripes of the United States was first planned and ordered by Washington of an upholsterer in Philadelphia and formally adopted on June 14, 1777.—London Spectator.

Earrings Denote Widowhood.

That India is a land of curious customs is confirmed by the Popular Science Monthly. A widow, instead of wearing black crape, dons ponderous earrings made of solid brass. Since her widowhood is perpetual she is obliged to wear them the rest of her life. Each year another ring is added. The constantly increasing weight of metal stretches the lobe of the ear, to which it is attached, in an extraordinary manner. It is safe to say that no widow ever forgets the fact of her widowhood when wearing such a clumsy weight.

THE Oshawa Reformer tells of the "startling statement" recently made by the manager of a big Toronto Mail Order House. He said: We have a bureau whose duty it is to read the country paper. There is not a paper of any consequence in our territory we do not get. The bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants do not advertise in the local papers, or where advertisers do not change their advertisements regularly, we immediately flood that Section with our catalogues and literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory WHERE THE LOCAL MERCHANTS USE THE LOCAL PAPERS."

A FATAL BARGAIN
OR
THE MAN WHO DARED FATE
BY
NICHOLAS CARTER

Author of the celebrated stories of Nick Carter's adventures, which are published exclusively in the New Magnet Library, conceded to be the best detective tales ever written

CHAPTER XII.—Continued

At a quarter of three, when, amid a madnese among the bull faction that appeared to have no bounds, the stock touched seventy-eight for the first time in many weeks, up fifty points for the day, there arose yells of exultation that seemed to shake the building's massive walls.

It was then, when the uproar and excitement were at their height, that occurred one of the most startling and dramatic scenes ever witnessed in this theatre of sensational events.

It came like a bolt out of the blue. One would have said that no solitary individual in the world, by any manner of means, could have wrought a change of sentiment in a single instant. One would have confidently declared that the entrance of one man into the midst of this scrambling, battling, shrieking crowd would not even have been noticed.

Only one man, however, a man whose face was as hard and white as a face of stone, yet whose eyes blazed with a light that seemed something more than human—this man suddenly rushed upon the floor of the Exchange, and in a moment was among the crowd, his tall figure towering above them, his head held high, and his right arm and fingers uplifted while he thundered his offer to sell.

The man was Percival Fenno, and for several seconds his mere presence silenced every observer. An incident more potent to turn the tide of sentiment could not have been conceived.

It was as if the dead had returned to life. This man, from the outset a persistent, immovable obstacle to the plans of the United Transit Company, a foe known to be feared by its promoters as bitterly as he was hated; this man, supposed at that moment to occupy a prison cell, and to be swept forever from the path of those he had opposed—it was as if he had risen, phoenixlike, from the ashes of his own apparent ruin, endowed with superhuman powers for the renewal of his interrupted work.

The effect was all that Nick Carter had anticipated, all that Percival Fenno himself had predicted. Superstitious men saw in his unexpected reappearance the turning point of the corporation's career. Men who long had been bears in the stock beheld, with sudden, swift infusion of courage, this dramatic return of their fallen leader.

Nearly all men, too—Nick Carter among them—saw Todd's floor broker, who had been the wildest bull of the day, shrink as if he had beheld a ghost, an apparition marking him for slaughter, and heard him falter in his bid for an insignificant part of the block that had been offered.

It is a true saying that he who hesitates is lost.

In another instant Fenno's name was turned into a pandemonium, a madhouse!

Then began a selling movement as swift and resistless as Niagara. Bulls wildly hastenede to take profits. Bears fiercely threw out short lines with impunity. Stop-loss orders augmented the downward rush.

And all the while Percival Fenno stood hurling his offerings upon the market, as if shares of the stock were no more than dead leaves, to be swept up and delivered from any street gutter.

Nick Carter craned his neck to gaze at the quotation board on the side wall.

The first sale came at seventy-four—and then the drop was on.

It was more than a drop.

It was a crash, a smash, an appalling collapse, the like of which precipitates a panic.

Fractions were ignored.

Five—ten—fifteen—twenty points—they were covered in as many seconds!

Values shrank and vanished like dew in the sun.

At five minutes of three the stock crossed fifty in its headlong, downward course, with not a sign of a rally.

There it hung for one minute, as Fenno, with coat ripped from his shoulders and collar torn from his neck, lost his footing in the mob surrounding him and fell to his knees on the floor.

Damon, the bull leader—Todd's ever-reliable, as he at times was termed—found ghastly courage to add still more to his enormous holdings in an attempt to check the fall—a thousand shares at fifty-one.

In another moment Fenno was upon his feet with offerings of twenty thousand shares, in blocks to suit, at fifty— forty-nine —forty-eight— forty-five—it fell as fast as it was taken, crashed down to forty, with Damon staggering like a drunken man on the outskirts of the mob—and then came the clang of the bell that marked the market was closing.

Fenno spoke to no man, ignored a hundred hands outstretched to grasp his. He thrust all of them aside, rushed from the floor of the Exchange, leaped into a waiting carriage in Wall Street, and twenty minutes later he was back in the detective's residence.

He had made good—at what cost time alone could tell.

He had smashed United Transit back to forty!

Nick Carter did not defer his departure. Before the market had fairly closed, he was forcing his way through the crowd in the galleries.

There was a look of grim and ominous satisfaction on his face when he left the Exchange Building and emerged into Broad Street.

"Now, Mr. Todd, we'll see how this dose of medicine affects you," he said to himself, turning in the direction of the company's office. "If you survive it—well, there'll be more to follow."

He had come in sight of the office building, and beheld, as the last grim thought crossed his mind, a man rush down the steps up the street—a man with eyes bulging, with face as white as the linen around his neck, and whose frantic haste betrayed his awful need, his frightful agitation.

He ran up the street, Andrew Todd himself, with Nick Carter coolly following him; and the detective, with grim complacency, saw him rush like a madman into the Ironclad National Bank.

"Gone to raise the dough, eh?" thought Nick. "Got the bank back of him, eh? Well, I next will strike you there."

He did not wait to interview Todd, to have him figure out on paper where he might have made a fortune that day. Feeling sure that he had put him in a bad financial corner, in which only some desperate move would avail him, and that he had, in obtaining Fenno's release pending further investigation of the Packard murder, placed in Todd's way a block that would effectually prevent his manipulating another boom in the stock—convinced of both of these points, and now eager to begin sifting down the circumstances involving the murder, Nick at once hastened uptown to the Hotel Royal, where he had agreed to meet Chick after the market closed.

He joined the latter in an obscure corner of the gentlemen's smoking roomm, where Chick received him with an expressive grin through a veil of cigar smoke.

"Gosh!" he quietly exclaimed, as Nick took a chair close beside him. "You didn't do a thing to them. That was the toughest hand-out in many a day."

"You know about it, eh?" asked Nick, smiling. "How long have you been here?"

"I was here when the market closed. Holy smoke! you ought to have seen the men watching the tickers in the saloon! Crazy, that's what. It was the hottest tape that ever came out of a ticker. They are lined up ten deep at the bar now, and talking like madmen. It must have been something awful in the Exchange?"

"Well, there was enough doing for about ten minutes," Nick quietly replied, with a smile.

"I'll bet there was," Chick nodded. "The news was here before the fight ended. It beats the wise guys to a standstill. Some of them are badly hurt, I reckon. I have been listening to their talk in the office and barroom. They can't fathom it."

"Fathom what?"

"Fenno's release on bail. That's what rattles them. They can't imagine where he got pull enough to accomplish it. They begin to think that more is known about the murder than has been given out, that other parties are secretly suspected, and that the Packard decision may have been obtained by bribery."

"Well, I'm not at all sure that it wasn't." Nick growled, half aloud.

"Some are predicting that it will be set aside," Chick went on. "Plainly enough, at all events, you have given the situation such a turn that few will venture buying the stocks much less bulling the market. Sentiment has been completely reversed since yesterday."

"That's precisely what I want."

"Sure thing," Chick assented. "There's a general feeling, however, that some mighty power is secretly at work for Fenno, strong enough at the district attorney's office to procure his release; but none are able to say who or what."

To be Continued.

AUTOMOBILE HITS CAR
SIX PEOPLE KILLED

DETROIT, Mich., July 29.—Six lives were crushed out in a collision between an automobile and a big interurban car at a point about twenty miles west of the city late yesterday afternoon. The names of the victims are:—Frederick W. Knuth, 48; Mrs. Julia Knuth, his wife; Christian Knuth, daughter, aged 10; August Knuth, 23, son; Mrs. Frances Knuth, daughter-in-law, and wife of August Knuth, aged 23. The chauffeur's name is uncertain.

Presentation of Colors to 155th

praise and commendation, and I feel that I can say to the 155th Battalion that the loving hearts and willing hands of the ladies will never tire of working for you.

And let me say to those of the sterner sex emulate the example set by the ladies and make every sacrifice in your power.

Now it is the duty of a presiding officer not to talk too much but to give others an opportunity of doing the speech-making and acting upon this principle, I shall without saying more, proceed with the programme placed in my hands

Sir Mackenzie Bowell being called upon, was most cordially received. In his opening remarks the veteran statesman referred to the pleasure it gave him to receive from Col. Adams the commanding officer of the 155th battalion, an invitation to be present at the presentation of the colors, and make a brief address. Sir Mackenzie congratulated the ladies for the zeal displayed by them and the active manner in which they have devoted their lives and means in the accomplishment of what we have seen to-day. He would like to be able to shoulder a musket, as did the veterans of 1936 and 1866 in defence of their country. He complimented the young men of Hastings county upon the admirable manner in which they had answered the call to duty. Should they be called upon to do active service at the front he had not the slightest doubt they would do it in a most creditable manner. He hoped all would return from the trenches in the best of health and humor covered with glory. (Applause.)

Hon. H. Corby assured all present that it was a delightful pleasure for him to be present on such an occasion, to witness the presentation of the colors. He extended to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 155th Battalion a hearty welcome to Belleville. Their presence here was much appreciated after an absence of some time at Barriefield. We are proud of the men who have left here to do duty for King and Country and we are equally proud of the 155th. They were going away to fight for the honor of mothers, wives, sisters and homes. We are bound to win out in this struggle, and the Canadians are going to help whip the Germans. We are proud of our dear old motherland, and also proud of Canadians who are fighting for Canada and the British Empire. The Hon. Senator referred to Sir Mackenzie and stated that he had no doubt but that he would like to go to the front. In referring to the ladies, Hon. H. Corby stated that the good ladies of this district had worked day and night. God bless them. If they did not get their reward on earth they would get it hereafter. The gift of the colors from Argyle Chapter was one of their many acts of kindness, and he had no doubt the boys of the battalion would be true to the colors and come back to Belleville with honors. The speaker before concluding spoke eulogistically of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes. He was a great General, and he (the speaker) would defend him. Sir Sam's motives were good, and his heart was for Canada and the British Empire. Where could we have found a man in Canada who would have done so much as he has done. Canada was not in any way prepared for this war, but in two years what has General Hughes accomplished. He has had mobilized and trained thousands upon thousands of Canadians who have proved to be true and great soldiers. He also desired to compliment Mr. Porter, who, as a representative in Parliament, had done all he could for the militia. In conclusion the speaker said our boys will come back with glory to themselves and Canada. All regretted the absence of Col. Hemming at the presentation, owing to illness.

Col. Wilson was called upon to represent Col. Hemming, and he spoke briefly. He said it was regrettable Col. Hemming was unable to be present, owing to indisposition. He congratulated the officers and men of the 155th Battalion on their efficiency and stated the battalion was second to none in the third military district.

Col. D. Barragar, of Belleville, who is engaged in military duties at Kingston, was called upon to respond on behalf of the ladies of Argyle Chapter and he did so in a most felicitious manner. He said it was a great honor to have the colors presented by the ladies. The Bay of Quinte boys had done their duty in the past and those before him would do their duty when called upon to do so. The battalion was much respected, and there was nothing but commendation and praise for the commanding officer." This event was the first mile stone on to Berlin. He hoped all would come back and with new ideas in their head to assist in making Canada a great and glorious country. We bid you God's speed and a safe return.

Mayor Ketcheson in addressing Col. Adams, the officers and men of the 155th Battalion, said that he, as Mayor, on behalf of the citizens of Belleville, welcomed them all back to the city. We have missed you from our midst since leaving here for Barriefield. It was a beautiful tribute of the ladies to present the colors, and he was confident they would be brought back unsullied. If it were not for the men who have gone and are going to protect our homes we would not live in peace in Canada as we are doing to-day. We welcome you here again to-day. Before long the battalion would go overseas to take their place beside the thousands of Canadians who have already gone. He hoped all would return and he could assure them a hearty welcome home.

Mr. E. E. Horsey, whom the chairman characterized as the next member for Prince Edward County, was called upon and he gave an excellent address. In his opening remarks the speaker said as a civilian from Prince Edward county he desired to congratulate the members of the 155th Battalion upon their fine appearance and bronze countenances. That the battalion would be called upon in line to fight in defence of our home and religious principles there was no doubt. The Germans lately claim to have a new religion and that they are fighting for it, also fighting for Germany that it may dominate other nations. The Canadian soldiers were going to the front to fight for the right and the neutrality of smaller countries. What glorious deeds the Canadians did at Ypres, St. Eloin and other places. Men from offices, factories, business places and other avocations in life have flocked to the colors and have been sent into the seething caldron. At first they were outnumbered, but the Canadians stood their ground and obeyed every military order. They displayed heroism and undaunted courage. That the members of the 155th would live up to that tradition he felt convinced, and be victorious in battle. This war will go on until we have a stable and perfect peace. We all wish the battalion God's speed and a safe return home.

Col. Adams was called upon to speak, and received an enthusiastic welcome. The colonel in his opening remarks said that he, on behalf of the battalion, desired to express their heartfelt thanks to the ladies of Belleville for the many acts of kindness extended to the 155th Battalion. The ladies had been more than kind to the officers and men, and the presenting of the colors was the crowning event. The colors would be kept unsullied and untarnished. We will bring them back and all would be proud of them. We are going to stick until we get in Berlin. In concluding the colonel again extended the thanks of the battalion to the ladies. At the conclusion of the colonel's remarks the band played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

This concluded the speech making and Mr. Porter made the announcement that the members of the battalion were cordially invited to the St. Agnes school ground, where ice cream and refreshments would be served by the ladies of the Quinte Chapter, I.O.D.E. This announcement was received with much acclaim.

The battalion was then reformed and marched down Pinnacle street and Dundas street, where at the junction of Front street it was formed in platoon formation and the march past took place. It was an inspiring sight. The band was stationed at the junction of the market square and Front street, and played a lively march as the men passed by. Col. Lazier and other military officers and prominent citizens were at the saluting point in front of the City Hall. The battalion proceeded to the armouries where the dismissal took place.

NOTES

The excessive heat was responsible for a few of the members of the battalion being compelled to fall out during the ceremony.

There was not a hitch during the afternoon's proceedings, and nothing whatever occurred to mar the pleasing and interesting proceedings.

The colors were the admiration of all who were privileged to see them. They were exquisite in design, and a gift that will be highly prized by the battalion.

Many from all parts of Hastings and Prince Edward counties were in attendance, and took a lively interest in the presentation.

ordeal. The man who keeps his heart stayed on righteousness is the man who will win. Sacrifices must be made, but God always deals out the best for his saints. Abraham was ready to sacrifice Isaac, feeling that God was able to return the child to life. Moses, the greatest of statesmen, gave up his place in the king's court to become the shepherd of a humble people, and God honored the act. Many are looking for soft places and fall by the way; not so with Moses and other successful workers for God. We are running in good company—the best the world has known. Paul advocated faith and works—activity for God, and he won out; faith is the groundwork of all great men. A great man points to Christ—not himself. The nations to-day are stripped for action—every useless burden is discarded; even Russia has dropped every weight, while Britain and France are putting forward the best efforts. The soldier must be at his best—a stalwart for his cause; as we saw the 155th Battalion move toward the depot this evening, led by their magnificent band, we thanked God for the sturdy protectors of our nation; and yet we need to look to God, even in our struggle, as through Him only does the victory come.

Not only must we discard the weight of life, but the pet sins; we must be stripped of everything that would retard our progress, that our efforts be not in vain. Sin is working on every hand. Let our housecleaning be thorough; let me work. Death is my undoing—let me do.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

A fair congregation gathered at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Sunday evening, in recognition of a union anniversary service in commemoration of the declaration of war, two years ago August fourth. There were present the pastor, Rev. C. G. Smith, B.D., Rev. A. S. Kerr, Rev. S. C. Moore, B.A., Rev. A. M. Hubly, and Bishop Willard Brewing of Toronto.

The services, which were simple, took the form of prayer and address, the whole tending to a thoughtful attitude on the part of our people in behalf of the situation abroad. Rev. Mr. Smith, who presided, called upon Bishop Brewing to lead in prayer, Rev. Mr. Moore following with the scripture lesson, and Rev. Mr. Kerr delivering the address of the evening.

"It is a conflict of right against might," said the speaker, "with Germany as the culprit—an aggressor who has slain the innocent and trodden down the rights of its weaker opponents. Britain's cause is the righteous part—and we must see it through. The situation is that of a challenge, which we must meet. Many sons of Canada have given their lives—many more may yet fall on the field of battle. We may think the war is near its end, but none can tell, the enemy is strong. The challenge calls for sacrifice, for patience, for perseverance; we would like to see peace, but it is not possible until Germany is ready to make restitution for her terrible deeds; we must await God's time—his destiny. It is a challenge to prayer, for which we are called together to-night, that our wills may be conformed to the purpose of God. We recognize the value of munitions, but we should recognize to a greater degree our reliance upon God—bestowing upon Him our undivided trust. Are we trusting in the Almighty as we ought? If we are to win—if victory is to be ours, it must be God that gives it. Shall we not say 'through the assistance of God?'

"When we realize Germany's preparation, we are astounded; but when we realize what Britain has accomplished since the opening of hostilities, we are proud of our kinship; we are to-day equal, yes, superior in troops, guns and munitions to the enemy. We thank God for Great Britain—for the stand she has taken in behalf of the downtrodden; she went into the conflict to deliver—and by the help of God she will not fail.

"Let us be discreet, humble, prayerful, that when victory comes we may be worthy of it."

Rev. Mr. Smith earnestly voiced his sentiments along the lines of the purpose for which the gathering had been called, and Rev. Mr. Hubly closed with prayer.

"Kissing the Book."

When did "kissing the book" come to be recognized as a part of the English oath? Master William Thorpe, a priest, who was tried for heresy before the archbishop of Canterbury in 1407, has in an account of his own trial related a conversation between a "man of law" and a "master of divinity" on the subject of oaths. The man of law spoke of a witness merely laying his hand on the book, whereupon the master of divinity said, "He that chargeth him to lay his hand thus upon the book, touching it and swearing by it, and kyssing it, promising in this form to do this thing, will say and witness that he that toucheth thus a book and kisseth it hath sworn upon that book." So the practice is at least 500 years old.

"Kissing the book" must have been a familiar practice in Shakespeare's day, for in "The Tempest" there is more than one jocular reference to it. "Swear by this bottle how thou camest hither," says Stephano to Trinculo. "Here, kiss the book," offering him his bottle of sack. There is also legal proof that the practice was well known in the seventeenth century.—London Opinion.

Being the Vice President.

"Isn't it easy to be a vice president?" remarked a young woman who had been sitting in one of the galleries for some time watching the senate work. "Cinch," colloquially responded her escort.

But senators know differently, for they are fully aware of what it means to sit hour by hour and pilot their august body through the parliamentary jungles which frequently are confronted. The rules for legislative procedure in the United States senate are practically no rules at all, paradoxical as it may seem. The course of the upper house is guided largely upon precedent and past rulings of vice presidents, and as a consequence the presiding officer must be thoroughly conversant with what his predecessors have done from the time the nation was born. This means long hours of study and extensive reading.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Antiquity of the Ballet.

Strictly defined, the ballet is properly a theatrical exhibition of the art of dancing in its highest perfection, complying generally with the rules of the drama as to its composition and form. It was in existence in Italy as far back as A. D. 1500, the court of Turin in that day making especial use of it and the royal family and nobles taking part in it. The ballet was first introduced in France in the reign of Louis XIII., and both that monarch and Louis XIV. occasionally took part in its dances. About the year 1700 women made their first appearance in the ballet, which up to that time had been performed exclusively by men, as was the case also with plays and operas, but no woman ballet dancer of any note appeared until 1790.

Leggings of the Marines.

The stout leggings worn by members of the United States marine corps are not a purely decorative adjunct to their very natty uniforms, as popularly supposed by civilians, but are a protection for the men against tropical diseases while in foreign service, naval surgeons say. Many of the most dangerous tropical diseases are transmitted by the bites of insects. Among these are malaria, yellow fever, bubonic plague, hookworm, elephantiasis and tropical ulcer. Fleas and mosquitoes are the prime carriers, and they make their first attack upon the ankles, thence working their way over the whole body. The leggings worn by the United States marines afford splendid protection to the ankles against fleas, mosquitoes and infected dirt.

Shakespeare Altered.

A portable theater had been pitched in an out of the way spot where the prospective theatrical patrons were unsophisticated in matters dramatic. The players possessed the costumes for "Hamlet," and Shakespeare's tragedy was selected for representation. It then occurred to the proprietors of the show that the name might not attract, so they altered the title to "How the Stepfather Was Paid Out!"—London Mail.

Big Balance on Hand.

"Jack, I have a notion to give you a piece of my mind."

"You could do that, Juliet, and still have quite a surplus."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Sleepy Time Story About Some Very Clever Squirrels.

WHAT HAPPENED IN A GROVE.

Amusing Adventures of a Pair of Intelligent Collie Dogs—Many Things of Interest and Information For Little People—Strange Story of a Waif.

Well, kiddies, said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and little Ned, I am going to tell you an amusing story about

DOGS AND SQUIRRELS.

Laddie and Brownie are adventurous collie dogs. They live in the Kansas city of Kansas City, and their play yard is a grove of trees. Every morning they fare forth to this miniature forest, and woe betide the squirrel that loiters too long upon the ground.

With a furious barking and "woofing" and snorting, Laddie and Brownie rush back and forth among the trees, seeking whom they may devour or at least to have fun with the little wood folks.

At first the squirrels were greatly disturbed by the terrible antics of Laddie and Brownie. In the midst of nut gathering they could not spare time to scramble clear to the tops of trees every time the two dogs came along.

One day the dogs frightened a squirrel that had just found a nut. With the nut in his mouth Chatterer rushed up a tree and clung to one of the lower branches. Laddie and Brownie stood beneath and barked. In his rage Chatterer opened his mouth to hurl invectives at the dogs and the nut fell out of his mouth.

It landed right on top of Laddie's head. In the display of temper that followed, Laddie seized the nut between his teeth, crunched his jaws down and cracked it.

Presently, when the dogs were barking up another tree, Chatterer descended and ate the "goody" from the nut Laddie had so obligingly cracked.

So that's the game they play. The squirrels often drop nuts and the dogs in furious rage crush the hard shells with their teeth. Both seem to enjoy it, and it saves the squirrels a lot of work.

A Fern That Walks.

The walking fern is a native of the United States. It is found in certain localities of the eastern states and westward to Kansas, usually growing on moss covered rocks, or near the bases of cliffs. The fronds, when fully developed, are from six to twelve or fifteen inches long, their tips reaching down into the moss or crevices of the rocks, where they develop young plants of two or three tiny fronds. At a later stage, a mass of fine rootlets forms and holds the little rosettes in position. After several months the long frond to which the little plant is attached becomes withered, and the young fern sends out fronds which produce new plants. It is said that in a few years a single plant under favorable conditions will develop into a whole colony.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a watchmaker and a jailer? One sells watches; the other watches cells.

Where are two heads better than one? In a barrel.

A Lucky Little Boy.

The little boy in the picture is Finley J. Shepard, Jr., and the lady is his mother by adoption, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, formerly Miss Helen Miller Gould. This little boy was an unknown waif, picked up on the streets of New York and later adopted by Mrs. Shepard. The photograph is the latest of the lad and was taken only a few days ago.

There Was a Postscript.

A dentist had a patient with whom he had for years a friendly as well as a professional association, and when the patient called in to have a tooth extracted he was cordially received.

"Will you give us a song?" the dentist suggested.

The patient instead gave a dramatic description of his recent dental pains and ended with an impassioned plea for instant extraction of the offending tooth.

"No, no!" said the dentist. "You're run down, my boy! Go and walk in the park for an hour."

"Won't do me any good," pleaded the sufferer, but the dentist insisted, and round the park the obedient patient went. When he came back he was duly anaesthetized, and the deed was done. When he was leaving he shook the hand that had cured him and asked:

"Why on earth did you send me walking round the park?"

"You were run down and nervous," the dentist replied. Then he added, with a grin, "Besides, I'd no gas when you came!"

A Submarine Water Supply.

In the Persian gulf, about twenty miles from the Arabian coast, is a group of islands the largest of which is called Bahrein. This island, which is twenty miles in length and ten in width, is low and sandy in most places, but here and there an oasis rich in date palms dots the island with spots of green. "The Mountain of the Mist," in the center, rises to the height of 400 feet. The 8,000 people who live in Manomeh, its largest town, are mostly Arabs of the fanatical Wahabi sect. Fish and seaweed are their chief food, and the only fresh water they have to drink is brought from springs at the bottom of the sea. The natives, with goatskin bags, dive to the bottom and, holding the openings down upon the bubbling spring, swim to the surface with their bags filled with sweet water. The extensive pearl fisheries, for which the islands have always been famous, is their one great industry.—Christian Herald.

Raised Decorations on Eggshells.

It is easy to work out a design in relief on an eggshell, whether the contents of the egg have been removed or not. The first step is to draw with a pencil the design or the lettering that you wish to appear on the egg. Make only an outline and the leading points of the design. Then melt a small quantity of candle wax into a shallow tin and let it set a little, but while it is still soft take it out of the tin and spread it over the design on the egg. If there is any difficulty in getting the wax to hold touch it here and there with the heated blade of a penknife.

Take vinegar enough to cover the egg completely and soak the egg in it for a period that may be half an hour or may be an hour and a half, according to the strength of the vinegar. At the end of that period take the egg out and peel off the wax. The design will then stand up in relief against the rest of the shell, for the acid of the vinegar will have eaten away the uncovered part and left untouched only that part which the wax protected.—Youth's Companion.

Tipping In Constantinople.

The tipping evil is no joke even in this country. But it has hardly reached the degree of insidiousness marked by this tale from the near east:

"On the morning of my departure from Constantinople I gave the letter carrier who had brought my letters during my sojourn here half a medshid as a tip.

"In the afternoon a man came up to me and said: 'My lord, I am a stranger to you. You never received a telegram. But may it please you to know that I am the telegraph messenger. May it please you to know that it was up to me to deliver telegrams to you if such had been received for you in our office. I surely would have brought them to you most quickly. I know you will be just and you will not harm a man who has always been ready to serve you. I cannot be blamed that I have never been called upon to be of service to you. I, too, deserve half a medshid.' "—Bruno's Weekly.

THE COLT AND ITS MOTHER

will thrive equally well on our feed and grain. It nourishes the mare and puts muscle and bone in the colt. It's fine for the stock and profitable for the stock raiser. Try some in your barn. The improved condition of your stock will tell, better than we can, the merits of our feed and grain.
